LANDON PLEDGES OLD AGE LAW

REBELS REPORT TOLEDO TAKEN, ALCAZAR SAVED

Claim Long Siege of Citadel Is Ended.

BULLETIN.

[Copyright: 1936: By the New York Times.]

CORUNNA, Spain, Sept. 26.—The rebel radio station here announced tonight that Fascist forces had occupied the Alcazar at Toledo after having routed the government troops. It also was announced that the rebels had captured Mondragon, near Bilbao.

BULLETIN.

MADRID, Sept. 27—(Sunday).—(U.P.)—(By Telephone to London.)—Toledo is still in the hands of the government forces, it was announced here early today.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH THE REBEL ARMY ON THE TOLEDO FRONT, Sept. 25. [By courier to Talavera de la Reina, Spain.] [Delayed by censor.]—The outposts of the victorious rebel southern army marching on Toledo and Madrid tonight saw the sunset glow on the ruins of the Alcazar in the former city and knew their wild and bloody drive up the valley of the Tagus river was nearing an end.

Actually getting within sight of the Alcazar, scene of one of the epic sieges of modern times, somehow increased the confidence of the men who were marching to raise that siege that they will arrive in time to save some of the 1,500 men, women and children who have held out in the famous old citadel for more than two months.

Rebels Are Jubilant.

Since that has been the main object of this campaign, and the reason why Gen. Francisco Franco's rebel forces have been pushing the enemy—to say nothing of themselves—so hard, and taking sometimes pretty heavy losses rather than lose time, it is easy to imagine the effect that the sighting of Toledo had on the already hign spirits of this army.

From colonels down to humble foreign legionnaires and volunteers, there was one sentiment that you heard expressed every time you talked to a soldier. It was: "We have got the reds on the run now and nothing can stop us."

Since they cracked the loyalist lines in front of Maqueda, the rebels have encountered no real resistance. Advancing this morning from Torrijos, on the Maqueda road, the insurgent columns crossed the Guadarrama river, which the outposts reached last night, before noon. It was the last natural line of defense on the Castillian plain before the troops were right under the walls of Toledo, and it was the loyalists' last chance to put up a real fight for Toledo.

Loyalists Dynamite Bridge.

Actually about all the loyalists did was dynamite the bridge which carries the highway across the stream and run. It is true that the rebel Col. Castillon's column, working on the left flank, had to ford the stream under heavy fire, but it did not continue long.

When THE TRIBUNE correspondent arrived at the Guadarrama river bridge late this afternoon after following the columns at a distance throughout the day, the rebels had pushed the loyalists back from the first low line of hills rising up from the river and were slowly moving forward in olive colored lines up the smooth, tawny and slowly rising plateau that stretched all the way to Toledo.

The bulk of the column at that time was about seven miles from Toledo, as the crow flies. One rebel outpost—far the left on a little hilltop—could actually see the town, the correspondent was informed. The rebel artillery had not crossed the river yet, but already was hammering on the loyalist lines, while loyalist batteries which had answered back in the morning, remained silent.

Bombing Plane Shot Down.

The feature of the day's fighting which most cheered the men at the front was the shooting down of a big loyalist trimotor bombing plane piloted by a daredevil Russian who believed in coming down low to lay his eggs. For a week he had been punishing the rebel troops after each advance, dropping 100 pound bombs on them in Santa Olalla and Maqueda. Everyone who had ever been anywhere near the front dreaded the "Ruso" because of the deadly, delib

AN EDITORIAL

FROM KERENSKY TO KAMENEV.

When, a number of years ago, Dr. Wirt of Gary reported that eminent brain trusters regarded Mr. Roosevelt as the Kerensky of their revolution, indignant denials were solicited and obtained. Meanwhile the fact alleged by Dr. Wirt has become all too apparent.

Moscow, through its agency, the Third Internationale, has instructed American communists to spare no efforts to defeat Gov. Landon. That is not because the soviet officials think the communist candidate in this country has a Chinaman's chance, but because they see in Mr. Roosevelt a tool made to their hand, just as Kerensky was their tool.

Mr. Roosevelt is preparing the way for the communist dictatorship. By centralizing the government in Washington and weakening local authority he is vastly simplifying the problem of gaining control of the whole country through a coup d'état in Washington. By attacking the traditional division of powers and seeking to concentrate the legislative and judicial functions in the executive he is working to the same end. Lenin had much the same idea, as Mr. Golding showed the other day. The soviet form of government was good, said Lenin, because it united "in the persons of the elected representatives of the people both legislative and executive functions."

If Mr. Roosevelt succeeds in enlarging the powers of the federal government by breaking down the constitutional restraints imposed upon it he will have spared the communists another difficult chore. His fiscal policies which point toward inflation will wipe out the anti-revolutionary middle classes. His preaching of class hatred is scarcely less valuable in the revolutionary reckoning.

Roosevelt is Kerensky. As such, the communists today welcome him and throw their influence to him.

Roosevelt is Kerensky. Who is to be Lenin? Who, when the moment comes, is going to knock Roosevelt down and clamber over him to the seat of supreme power? And who is to be the Trotzky who is to act as joint leader in the enterprise only to end his life in exile? No one can say, but it is altogether certain that none of the professional politicians in the Roosevelt train, none of the Farleys, the Pat Harrisons, the Norrises, or the Ropers, and few, if any, of the Frankfurter hot dogs will succeed to power. They will have served their purpose. They will be cast into outer darkness and will be lucky if they escape with their lives.

The analogy may be carried a step farther. Who are to be the Zinovievs and the Kamenevs of the American revolution? That is a question which ambitious New Dealers may well ponder. If at any time, early or late in the game, they disapprove of official policy, the firing squad will do its stuff. Dictatorship cannot tolerate dissenters because it dares not give the millions of its victims any leadership about which to rally.

Many of the New Dealers do not see as clearly as do the communists in Moscow how serviceable Mr. Roosevelt has been to the revolutionaries. Many others in the Roosevelt following harbor the notion that, come what may, they will find themselves in the seats of power. That is what Kamenev, Zinoviev, and hundreds of other dead bolsheviks also thought.

SECURITY PLAN OF NEW DEAL IS CALLED STUPID

Fraud on Working Man, He Says.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 26.—[Special.]—Gov. Alf M. Landon tonight attacked the gigantic social security law which goes into effect next January and which President Roosevelt has called the supreme achievement of his administration, as "unjust, unworkable, stupidly drafted, and wastefully financed."

At the same time the Republican candidate promised to substitute "a real old age pension law," which he regards as due the workers as a matter of social justice.

"We propose," he said, "through amendments [to the present law] to provide for every American citizen over sixty-five the supplementary payment necessary to give a minimum income sufficient to protect him or her from want."

10,000 Fill Auditorium.

Gov. Landon spoke to a cheering crowd of 10,000 that filled the municipal auditorium and adjoining halls, where voice amplifiers had been installed. The huge stage was filled with state and county candidates and party officers.

At 8:15 Edward J. Samp, state chairman, called the audience to arise and sing "The Star Spangled Banner." The invocation was given by the Rev. John F. Fetters, Lutheran pastor. Gov. Landon was introduced by Alexander Wiley, Republican candidate for governor.

The crowd stood and yelled for several minutes while Gov. Landon waved his arm and smiled as he stepped upon the stage. Applause was frequent as he made his points against the present security law and pledged one that is practical.

Experiment for States.

Unemployment insurance, under the Republican program outlined by the candidate, would be sent back to the states for experiment. The Republican party would simply encourage adoption by the states "of honest and practical measures for meeting the problems of insurance against unemployment."

To old people, workers and the infirm, Gov. Landon said: "I will not promise the moon. I promise only what I know can be performed—economy, a living pension, and such security as can be provided by a generous people."

Gov. Landon chose Wisconsin, which has been the laboratory for many social experiments, as the forum for his discussion of economic security for workers.

Tomorrow he will go to Byron, Ill., to pass the day on Frank O. Lowden's Sinnissippi farm, and from there, will return home to Topeka Monday. His next campaign trip will bring him to Chicago.

"Just Another Tax."

Outside of his discussion of the financial features of the present law, which he called "just another tax" and not a pension, Gov. Landon found in this New Deal social security act another dangerous growth of federal burocracy. Under it, he said, "burocracy will grow and grow, and federal snooping flourish."

This objection to the law touches the fundamental question of compulsion and dictatorship from Washington. In this instance, the governor pointed out, it would affect the lives of twenty-six million people.

"To get a workable old age pen

HOLLAND PUTS EMBARGO ON METAL EXPORT

Paris Expects World to Join Program.

PARIS, Sept. 26.—[Special.]—The old European gold bloc passed today when The Netherlands decided to put a gold embargo into effect, an action tantamount to abandonment of the gold basis. Earlier in the day Switzerland announced that it would consider devaluation in line with the French movement, and Belgium gave notice that it would subscribe to the "gentlemen's agreement" looking to world monetary stabilization. Later Italy was reported preparing to devaluate the lira.

Holland's decision to embargo exports of the metal came after a lengthy session of the Dutch cabinet. Cabinet officials explained that the meeting had been called following Switzerland's decision to join France in devaluing its money. Earlier Dutch officials had been emphatic in the pledges that The Netherlands would follow the "old Dutch policy" and remain on gold.

Expects World Accord.

The French government looked to similar action by almost every important country in the world. It was asserted here that with the three great monetary powers adopting a common front, no nation could stand out against a general leveling of monetary values.

In the meantime, French officials asserted that parliamentary approval of the government's currency devaluation program appeared likely. When parliament assembles in extraordinary session Monday Premier Leon Blum is expected to muster a majority sufficient to assure passage of the legislation necessary to legalize the government's gold seizure and companion laws which are designed to give the government power to soften the economic hardships which may flow from its monetary changes.

Exact Slash Not Revealed.

Government leaders refrained from an official declaration of the actual degree of devaluation which will be attempted, although yesterday's announcement said that the government will ask parliament for authority to pare down the franc to "approximately two-thirds of its present value."

Blum and his colleagues are placing great emphasis on the monetary understanding which has been effected with Great Britain and the United States. The full nature of this agreement is still undisclosed. Government officials were gratified tonight at the manner in which the United States had swung its $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund into action today to counteract sales of the British pound by the Russian State bank. The American action was pointed to as evidence of solidarity that now exists on monetary matters between France, Great Britain, and the United States.

Proposed Legislation.

Legislation empowering the government to take the following steps was understood to have been drawn up today at a meeting of the council of ministers:

1. To seize all gold privately held.
2. To devalue the franc by reducing the gold content from the present 65.5 milligrams to between 49 and 43 milligrams—a reduction of about 25 to 34 per cent.
3. To raise salaries commensurate with the decreased buying power of the franc.
4. To protect holders of short term bonds from loss due to devaluation.
5. To revise custom provisions.
6. To set up a 10,000,000,000 stabilization fund to insure maintenance of the new value of the franc. This would be done through "profit" in devaluation.

Benefits Sought by France.

The benefits which the government leaders expect to flow from the program are the stoppage of exports of the nation's gold; an increase in money in circulation, and a general stimulation of business, with France getting a larger share in world trade.

Although the government was taking steps to prevent a rise in prices Premier Blum asserted that his monetary program would not boost the cost of living.

The program, he said, "was not

HORDES OF FLOOD MOSQUITOES HIT SUBURBAN TOWNS

J. Lyell Clarke, sanitary engineer of the Des Plaines valley mosquito abatement district, said yesterday large flights of flood water mosquitoes from marsh lands and flooded bottom lands are descending upon suburban towns and may even reach into Chicago.

The species, he said, are outdoor biters and will not seek entrance into homes, as they will be destroyed by the first light frost.

Clarke disclosed that in experiments to learn how far mosquitoes travel from their breeding place five million of the pests were sprayed ten days ago with a red dye as they emerged from a marshy area on York road, two miles north of Bensenville in Du Page county. Since then 217 have been recovered, some of which were found six to seven miles away.

Other swamp areas in Du Page county are now being sprayed with various colored dyes in similar experiments, Clarke said.

Drops Dead While Leading Band at London Festival

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 26.—Before many hundreds of spectators, including his wife and two sons, one of whom was a cornetist in the band he was leading, Joseph Brookes, 51 years old, dropped dead today. His death occurred at a national band festival in Crystal palace. His understudy seized the baton and tried to carry on, but the musicians were so overcome with emotion they were unable to play.

'Big Boy' Gets 2d Thief Freed on Blank Bond

"Big Boy" Kennedy, who came into the public eye two weeks ago when he induced Judge Cecil C. Smith of the Municipal court to approve a worthless bail bond which freed a common thief, was named again yesterday as the liberator of another thief.

The judge who yielded to the influence of "Big Boy" in the latest case is Joseph A. Graber of the Municipal court. Both Judge Graber and Judge Smith "waived schedules" in the bail bonds, which means they were backed by no property guarantee.

Pickpocket Goes Free.

The latest beneficiary of "Big Boy's" contact with judges is Willie Sherman, a pickpocket with a record going back to 1919. The thief freed by Judge Smith at the behest of "Big Boy" is Louis Swinberg, who has many aliases and who was caught in possession of a pocket book he had just snatched from a woman. Both Sherman and Swinberg are still at large.

While the identity of "Big Boy" was never established officially, it was reported that he is William Cannady, an ex-policeman living at 3130 South Union avenue. Court records in the Sherman case show the bond to have been signed by "William Kennedy, 3130 South Union avenue."

Judges Have Faith.

When Swinberg failed to appear in court for trial on the purse snatching case, Judge Smith ruefully admitted he had made a mistake in accepting the bond, without surety, in his own name on a Sunday afternoon, as a favor to the man he said he knew only as "Big Boy Kennedy," a vote chaser. Yesterday Judge Graber said he, too, had faith in the man he knows as William Cannady. He said he had known Cannady favorably for many years, and had heard of Mrs. Cannady's charitable activities in the Eleventh ward.

"If I signed a no schedule bond for Kennedy and the prisoner does not appear in court, there will be a col-

GRANT'S NEPHEW KEEPS TOO MANY CATS; FINED $5

Jesse Grant, 71 years old, who says he is a nephew of Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, is so fond of cats that he keeps 14 of them in his home at 1327 Washington avenue, Wilmette. His love for cats, however, is not shared by his neighbors. On their complaint that he is maintaining a nuisance Grant was tried yesterday by a jury in the court of Police Magistrate John J. Peters of Wilmette. He was found guilty and fined $5. "These cats are just like children, to me," testified Grant, who is a retired railroad accountant. "If I have to give them up, I don't know what I'll do."

brusquely imposed," but was the result of deliberate initiative started last June which "I hope will lead to international pacification."

The government is understood to have obtained conditional support for its program from the communist groups, which for political reasons have been strongly opposed to devaluation. The support is contingent upon enactment of the legislation raising salaries and pensions and other measures which are expected to aid the wage earner.

Public Seems Apathetic.

Proponents of devaluation watched the popular reactions to the government's swift moves of the last two days with some misgivings. On the surface, however, the announcement of the monetary program appeared to be greeted with apathy by the public.

The chief concern of the political leaders was what may happen tomorrow. It was expected that if any public demonstrations were to come they would occur then. The government was said to be prepared to take drastic action at the first sign of disorder.

Plans for extra precautions against any public disturbances were made by Defense Minister Edouard Daladier and Minister of Interior Roger Salengro during a night conference with police officials. Daladier has been an outspoken opponent of devaluation.

"As a minister, I am bound by government solidarity," he asserted. "As president of the Radical-Socialist party I am hostile to devaluation."

Others Denounce Program.

Other parliamentary leaders denounced the government's program tonight although they are not expected to be able to muster support to defeat it.

Louis Martin, rightist leader in the chamber of deputies, declared the move was undertaken in "lunacy and disorder."

"There is no need to call parliament," he said. "The government must take the responsibility."

Paul Reynaud, leader of the devaluationists, said that the new monetary policy would succeed only "if conducted with regard to the experience of other countries.

"This is our last chance and we cannot afford to bungle it," he asserted.

Rightist newspapers recalled that the Blum government declared itself against devaluation during the elections campaign. Today they pointed to Blum's statement that negotiations were begun last June with Great Britain and the United States to show that the party went back on its promise as soon as it came into power.

Italian Devaluation Expected.

ROME, Sept. 26.—[Havas.]—Following the lead of France and Switzerland, the Italian government tonight made plans for the devaluation of the lira, according to authoritative financial sources. Reports that the move was contemplated followed word that the cabinet would be convoked in emergency session next Tuesday.

The move apparently was designed to bring Italy into the new monetary alignment worked out by the United States, Great Britain and France. No authorized statement was made, but officials significantly refused to assert that the present financial policy of the Rome government would be retained.

Germany Claims Stability.

BERLIN, Sept. 26.—Describing devaluation of the French franc as a "blow against the whole French people and the plundering of the little man," Der Angriff and other German papers greeted the news of the Franco-English-American financial alignment with an air of satisfied superiority, asserting that conditions in Germany are "absolutely stable." There is no danger whatever of devaluation in Germany, it was said.

American economic observers declared that since most of Germany's dealings with foreign countries are on a barter basis the new financial lineup will not affect her status for some time. This is the opinion shared by the spokesmen of the German Reichsbank.

The chiefs of the Reichsbank declare their clearing agreements with France and Switzerland reduce cash transactions to a minimum, but that devaluation will make it easier for Germany to settle bills which accumulated in these countries. German business men realize that a cheaper price on French goods will reduce their chances of selling German wares, notably in the Balkans, but here again barter agreements prove a safety valve. Countries like Jugo-Slavia, Rumania, and Hungary are paying for their purchases in Germany with agricultural produce and oil and not cash.

Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Germany Reichsbank, who spoke in Saarbruecken this morning, flew back to Berlin this afternoon and conferred with Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler. Financial circles understood that Schacht, in his conversations with Emile Labeyrie, governor of the Bank of France, discussed the possibility of establishing a stable coordination of the German mark with the French franc, the American dollar, and the English pound. They still believe such readjustment will take place before the end of the year.

SEC. MORGENTHAU TELLS VIVID TALE OF SOVIET 'RAID'

Uses Stabilization Fund to Support Sterling.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 26.—[Special.]—Up to his ears in a battle of the currencies, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr. today accused the Russian government of raiding the pound sterling market in New York with an eye to jettisoning the Franco-British-American "gentlemen's agreement" on monetary stabilization.

Since the transaction was small in comparison to Morgenthau's dramatization of it, the cry grew in volume here tonight that politics was responsible for the attack on the soviet. To reports in foreign capitals that the accusation was "absurd," Morgenthau would not reply tonight.

Uses Stabilization Fund.

The soviets, through their Russian state bank, Morgenthau asserted, had placed an order for the sale of a million pounds sterling, valued roughly at 5 million dollars, in order to depress the market and profit through short sales. He had purchased practically all of the offering, Morgenthau said, with money from the stabilization fund of the United States.

The stabilization fund amounts to 2 billion dollars, or 400 times the amount of the alleged Russian offering. To the apparently plausible explanation of Moscow that because of a favorable trade balance with England she had accumulated a considerable sterling reserve, and when the pound weakened yesterday decided that it was time to sell a portion, Morgenthau and his aids were also silent tonight.

Politics Behind Attack.

The issues of the current political campaign furnished the motive behind the sudden and surprising attack of Morgenthau on the soviet government, the Red nation that the Roosevelt administration itself not so long ago recognized, it was learned tonight.

It was pointed out by New Deal strategists that Roosevelt had been under fire recently because the communist party was supporting him and fighting Republican Candidate Landon. An attack on Russia by the New Deal would reverse this situation, they argued.

As the ink dried on the "gentlemen's agreement" between the three powers, the question was raised tonight where Morgenthau together with Premiers Blum of France and Baldwin of England obtained the right to set the currency standard of the world.

Power Rests With Congress.

In so far as the United States is concerned article 1, section 8 of the constitution provides that congress shall be vested with the power to regulate the value of money. The New Dealers declared that the devaluation of the French franc had led to a monetary crisis and President Roosevelt had the power from congress to move the value of the dollar's gold content up or down within a 50 per cent limit.

The dollar is now at 59 per cent of its pre-Roosevelt level in terms of gold.

The unique way in which Morgenthau moved last night in announcing the "gentlemen's agreement" and the elaborate stage setting for the story about the Russians today led to the first suspicions that more was beneath the surface than met the eye. Events showed that Mr. Roosevelt and his treasury secretary were not unmindful of the political aspect of their monetary maneuvering.

Announcement Is Dramatic.

Last night the announcement that the United States and Great Britain approved the devaluation of the franc and would help tide France over during the crisis was made simultaneously and with a flair for the dramatic in the three national capitals.

It was learned that the President was aware of the approaching monetary crisis for some time and feared its spread to the United States, where an attack on the New Deal dollar during the campaign period would be disastrous for the Rooseveltian chances at the polls.

Today Secretary Morgenthau capped his announcement of the Russian "plot" with a speech in which he stated once and emphasized the phrase by repeating it again that the President had been "perfecly magnificent" during the negotiations.

Morgenthau's indictment of the Russian government was staged with the snap and precision of a successful musical comedy. At 10:28 o'clock this forenoon he sent out word that there would be a press conference at 10:40 o'clock.

Morgenthau Is Excited.

Tense and excited over the making of history, Morgenthau announced at 10:40 that the Russians had entered the market and were trying to depress the pound. After the blunt announcement he terminated the press conference, saying that he wanted the story to get out on the wires before the market closed.

At 11:15 Morgenthau held another press conference, which amounted to a cross-examination on the question of whether the Russians would profit from such a small transaction. Morgenthau dodged all queries and stood on his original statement.

One question that made the secretary writhe in his chair was whether the incident did not prove that it had been a mistake to recognize Russia. He laughed that off without an answer.

Morgenthau made the accusation that the Russians had attempted the raid without offering any evidence or qualification. It was assumed that the information came from a New York broker through whom the Russian state bank put the order.

The pound had been driven down from $5.02 to $4.91, according to Morgenthau.

£1,000,000 Ordered Sold.

"I found that the Russian state bank had given an order to sell 1,000,000 pounds sterling at best, which means at any price," he declared. "When I learned of this, I bought their sterling. I bought what they wanted to sell. I bought with the stabilization fund's money the sterling the Russian state bank was using to depress sterling with."

With this the secretary broke off the conference and the newspaper men raced to the wires. A correspondent for a Russian newspaper almost wept. He said it must have been a terrible mistake in Moscow.

At the second conference Morgenthau said that he had learned of the beating the pound was taking three-quarters of an hour after the market opened and he started to support the British currency "immediately" with purchases. The pound closed at $4.97. The result of the operation was "a handsome profit" for the United States government, Morgenthau boasted.

Asked About Great Britain.

Asked why Great Britain had not gone into the market to do her own buying, Morgenthau declared that the London market was closed. He admitted that the Bank of England could have sent over purchase orders, but that it was up to the United States to swing into action because it was "our market," and we had a stabilization fund.

The stabilization fund, amounting to two billions, was created artificially by writing up profits when the New Deal boosted the price of gold from $20.67 to $35 an ounce, an operation that many economists have charged was inflationary since the fund contains "made money."

Morgenthau was asked next what the effect would have been insofar as stabilization by the three powers was concerned if the purchase had not been made. His answer and the questioning proceeded as follows:

A.—You have the significance of this. I can't answer. It's too ticklish. You have it right there, but don't bring me into it. Okay?

Q.—Sure. Did you get the whole amount that the Russian bank offered? A.—If I didn't, I got almost all of it. I got practically all.

Q.—Who got the rest? A.—There is no way of telling, but I got the bulk.

Q.—It was on the market and you bought it? A.—I don't want to go into details. It was there; they offered it, and I got it. It was offered at any price and I took it, and I got the bulk.

Q.—Does this affect the hopes of "gentlemen's agreement"? A.—As far as the gentlemen are concerned we are still gentlemen.

Q.—Do you expect any more tests to come today? A.—If they should, we are ready.

Q.—How far are you willing to go on this thing? A.—The limit.

Q.—Which is what? A.—Two billion dollars, and you can do your own arithmetic.

Q.—Aren't there any profits in there yet? I should think there would be some profit. A.—There is.

Q.—I should think you would use that. A.—Yes, I can use the profits. Let's just say we can use the limit and then there are profits.

Q.—Have you discussed this with the President? A.—Frequently. I have talked to him twice today, and I have talked to him every day, and I have talked to him in practically every freight yard and railroad station in America, and I have talked to him at 11 o'clock at night and in the wee hours of the morning.

Q.—Did you talk to Paris and Great Britain this morning? A.—No, but on every move I have been in consultation with the President and he has been perfectly magnificent. He has dropped whatever he was doing in order to give this matter first consideration. Day and night, if I called him he has been available. He has been perfectly magnificent in the support that he has given me and I just could not have accomplished this thing without his assistance and support.

Q.—Did you talk to him specifically before you gave the order this morning? A.—Don't ask me that. There has not been a day in two weeks that I have not talked to him at least once on the telephone or there has been a telegram, and we kept the telegraph wire at the White House burning with messages constantly.

Started Early This Month.

Q.—Then you expected this move for two weeks? A.—I told the boys last night it started about the first week in September.

Q.—Did the President give any comment on this move by the Russian State bank? A.—I can't quote him, but I have been in constant communication with him any time, day or night, that I wanted his advice and help, and I have gotten it, and he let everything else drop for this.

Q.—I wondered whether you were in telephone communication with the finance ministers of the two countries, Great Britain and France, this morning? A.—No, I have talked to Mr. Cochran, who represents me in Paris—he is the first secretary of the American embassy—and to Mr. Wilson, who is in charge there—charge of the American embassy—and they both told me that this move has gotten an excellent reception in France.

Q.—How about Great Britain? A.—No, I have nothing. What I am going to do now is, I am going back to the farm this afternoon, and the President asked Mrs. Morgenthau and me to come to see him tomorrow, so I will see him tomorrow.

Q.—On this general subject? A.—Yes.

U. S. HAS HALF, FRANCE ONE-SIXTH OF WORLD'S 22½ BILLIONS OF GOLD

Total monetary gold stocks of the world according to latest estimates are approximately 22 billions 500 millions of dollars. Of this the United States held nearly half in the treasury, while France was the next largest holder with about one-sixth of the world total.

The amount of gold held by nations most affected by the "gentlemen's agreement" looking to devaluation of the French franc was on Aug. 1, the latest date for which complete comparisons are available [in millions of dollars]:

United States	10,648
France	3,643
Great Britain	1,977
[Bank of England, 1,200.]
Belgium	633
Switzerland	471
Netherlands	437
Italy	270
Germany	29

Other nations holding sizable amounts of gold:

Spain	718
Argentina	435
Japan	437
British India	275
Sweden	231

The report of the federal reserve bank Thursday showed the United States gold stocks had climbed to 10 billions 786 millions, an all-time high. By Sept. 18 France's gold stock had fallen to 3 billions 467 millions of dollars. On Sept. 23 the Bank of England's gold stock was 1 billion 243 millions of dollars.

TREASURY SECRECY PREVENTED ANY HINT OF MONEY PARLEYS

Washington, Sept. 26.—(AP)—That secrets can be kept—even when three nations are in on them—was generally conceded today as the story of negotiations leading up to the tri-power monetary agreement unfolded.

The story disclosed that unprecedented precautions were taken to prevent a leak on the momentous negotiations which had been proceeding for several weeks without a hint reaching the usually well informed financial centers.

When Secretary Morgenthau announced the monetary accord by the United States, Great Britain, and France last night, he said it had grown out of intensive negotiations, conducted since the first week in September. Not a word had leaked until the announcement was being prepared last night in Paris.

The treasury used every safeguard to prevent "a leak" on the negotiations. Without anyone being the wiser, Secretary Morgenthau telephoned President Roosevelt daily, communications lines to the Federal Reserve board and the New York Federal Reserve bank hummed with details of the negotiations, and conferences with British and French representatives were held in Morgenthau's office.

FRANCE TO ENFORCE 40 HOUR WEEK LAW TO END MINE STRIKE

PARIS, Sept. 26.—(AP)—The government decreed application of the 40 hour week law for miners today as an effort to end "folded arms" strikes.

Similar decrees affecting the building, metal, and textile employés were predicted as the next step.

Boatmen on the Seine struck today, tying up most of the river's trafic and causing anxiety over whether Paris' food supplies might not be affected.

FRAUD CHARGE FORCES ZINTAK TO QUIT TICKET

Democrats Looking for Clerk Candidate.

Frank V. Zintak, deposed clerk of the Superior court who is charged with a shortage of more than $22,000 in his accounts, announced last night that he had withdrawn from the Democratic county ticket, where he was placed by renomination last April.

This move verified rumors that efforts to "persuade" him to withdraw were piling in from his fellow Democrats during week-end conferences.

Zintak did not admit wrongdoing in his statement of withdrawal, keeping up the front he has maintained in the face of State's Attorney Courtney's assertion that Zintak had confessed the shortage and admitted using some of the money for political purposes in his ward, the Twelfth, where he served as Democratic committeeman.

Statement Given to Nash.

Zintak's resignation from the ticket was handed to County Chairman P. A. Nash. Copies enclosed in envelopes bearing the return address of the managing committee of the Democratic county committee, were mailed to the Chicago election commissioners, to County Clerk Michael J. Flynn and to Secretary of State Hughes in Springfield. The statement said:

"In the past few weeks many unjust accusations have been made against me relative to the handling of the office of Clerk of the Superior court of Cook county which, though unfounded, are bound to carry weight with many people. Because of such accusations, and being appreciative of the high honors which have been bestowed upon me by the people of Cook county and by the Democratic organization of Cook county, and rather than to embarrass in any way my associates on the ticket who are candidates for public office, I have this day declined the nomination for reëlection to the office of clerk of the Superior court of Cook county.

"It is my sincere hope that the people of Cook county will reserve their judgment until such time as I have had an opportunity to present my side of the case in the proper form."

Mention Schlaeger to Run.

It was reported that the Democratic county committee will meet at 4 p. m. tomorrow to select a successor to Zintak on the county ticket. High in the list of those being considered for the post is Victor L. Schlaeger chief deputy coroner and, like Zintak, of Polish descent.

Schlaeger is a party leader in South Chicago and is said to have the indorsement of a number of important Democrats of his nationality group. Others mentioned for the post are William W. Link, president of the board of local improvements, and Ald. Joseph P. Rostenkowski [32d].

Zintak's resignation did not include any mention of his present status as clerk of the Superior court. He was removed by the executive committee of judges of the court but there is a legal question as to whether this action is sufficient or whether the legislature must impeach him.

Secret Indictment Sought.

Another indictment is being sought against Zintak, charging him with the larceny of $3,000 in government bonds from escrow funds in the clerk's office, it has been reported. Several witnesses have been called before the grand jury in the investigation of this charge.

A second current county building scandal is being investigated by the state's attorney's office. This grew out of the statement of Edward J. Walton, head of a stenographic reporting agency, that in 1934 he "kicked back" $15,548 to two county officials for the official business of their offices.

The executive committee of the Associated Court Reporters of Chicago, after a meeting yesterday, issued a statement condemning such "kickback" practices as unethical, unprofessional, and improper, and denying that the practices are customary.

White Criticizes Office.

Brig. Gen. Edward H. White, United States army, retired, appointed clerk pro tem of the Superior court after the ousting of Zintak, said yesterday that the office is "physically lousy."

"I know a cootie when I see one," Gen. White declared, "and there were plenty of cooties in this office. This place has been run on a slipshod basis for years and I'm going to stop that."

Her skull had ben crushed. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said she had been dead about 12 hours.

De Michael is employed as a porter in a tavern at 922 Madison street. According to police records, De Michael was sentenced to the Joliet penitentiary April 4, 1930, on a burglary charge and was PAROLED on May 19, 1931. He was again sentenced to Joliet on a robbery charge Nov. 2, 1932, and was PAROLED a second time last April.

SEEK FRIENDS OF ACTRESS FOR CLEW TO RAPIST

Police Study Other Crimes in Hunt for Attacker.

Several friends of Miss Alda Deery, 25 years old, vaudeville actress, who narrowly escaped death at the hands of a moron early Friday morning in her room in the Washington hotel, 167 West Washington street, were sought yesterday by police who said their help was needed if the maniac is to be apprehended.

Miss Deery, who was reported to be improving in the County hospital, declared she could remember nothing that happened after she reached her room about 4:30 o'clock Friday morning. She had been drinking with a party of friends, she said.

Shortly after her return Miss Dorothy Ryan, member of the same vaudeville troupe as Miss Deery, smelled smoke coming from the latter's room and upon investigating found Miss Deery unconscious, a stocking tied tightly about her neck, and a pile of her clothing on fire in a clothes closet. Miss Deery had been raped and struck on the head. A building brick weighing about 10 pounds, which was found under the mattress of her bed, had not been used in striking her, police said, as no blood stains were found on it.

Capt. George O'Connor and Lieut. Peter Bernacchi of the central district said they believed the attack was committed by a colored man, and cited three similar attacks on women recently in downtown hotels, two of which were cleared up by confessions of colored prowlers. The other case, the murder of Mrs. Florence Thompson Castle in her room in the Devonshire hotel, 19 East Ohio street, is still a mystery.

Shields Drinking Companions.

Miss Deery told police she was positive no member of her party was responsible for the attack. They had been drinking at the Three Deuces café, 222 North State street, she said, and she was escorted to her hotel by an old friend who left her in the lobby. She preferred that her drinking companions be not named.

Lieut. Bernacchi said questioning her friends might bring out some clew to her assailant but agreed there was no reason to suspect any of those who had been with her at the café.

"In the two similar murders that were committed in our district we obtained confessions and cleared up the crimes," he said. "When Mrs. Lillian Guild, 54 years old, was raped and beaten to death with a brick in her room in the former Y. W. C. A. hotel, 830 South Michigan avenue, we arrested Thomas Starr, a Negro who was identified as the man who sought to gain entrance to a nurses' home.

Earlier Crime Reënacted.

"Starr confessed and reënacted the crime while a moving picture camera recorded his every move. There could be no doubt of his guilt and he was sentenced to 199 years imprisonment.

"When Mrs. Mary Louise Trammell, wife of a railroad dining car steward, was beaten over the head and raped in her room in the State hotel, 553 South State street, a notebook dropped by the murdered was our only clew. It was the property of Rufe Swain, a Negro lately from Arkansas. He was arrested and identified as the man who had invaded two other hotel rooms occupied by white women. He confessed killing Mrs. Trammel and is awaiting trial.

"The other similar case, the killing of Mrs. Thompson, occurred in another police district, but according to the woman's son, the murderer was a Negro. In each of the four cases entrance was gained to the victim's room by the fire escape. In each case the killer brought along a building brick.

Sees Link Between Crimes.

"It is very possible that the man who assaulted Miss Deery is the man who killed Mrs. Thompson. He brought along a brick, but did not use it because Miss Deery fell into a deep sleep the minute she reached her room, falling on the bed without waiting to undress.

"The fact he tied one of her own stockings tightly about her neck indicates he was a maniac. It is puzzling to us why he set fire to her clothing. That was a deliberate act—not a fire caused by the careless dropping of a cigaret."

LOWELL REGAINS HIS AUTOMOBILE DRIVER'S LICENSE

Hyannis, Mass., Sept. 26.—(AP)—A. Lawrence Lowell, 79 years old, president emeritus of Harvard university, who lost his automobile operator's license a month ago when he failed to pass a test for drivers more than 65 years old, regained it today.

Reëxamined this week, Lowell gave an "entirely satisfactory" demonstration of his ability to drive, Inspector Earle H. Whittemore said. Another motor vehicle official said he had been given "a 100 per cent rating."

Whittemore declined to reveal what detail of driving Lowell had mastered since he was given the first test.

WHY REDS BACK ROOSEVELT TOLD BY HIS OWN AIDS

Words Prove Schemes to Make U. S. Over.

BY CHESLY MANLY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 26.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt's assertion that he "does not want and does not welcome the vote or support" of alien groups in this campaign has made an issue of the support the communists are giving him. But since Earl Browder, communist candidate for President, declared that his party saw as its "main task for 1936 the defeat of Landon," the question most widely discussed is why the communists are supporting Mr. Roosevelt.

The answer to this question is to be found in the writings and pronouncements in which the New Dealers have set forth their aim of "making America over" into a collectivist state, founded upon "coöperation for the general welfare," with all human activity controled or "disciplined" by the central burocracy. Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell is authority for the statement that this aim is to be accomplished by a "salutary purge" of the "receivers of unearned income, together with their hangers-on," and the bringing about of an effective alliance between the farmers and workers.

Communists' Aim Also.

Mr. Browder, speaking at the National Press club on Aug. 26, said this also was the aim of the communist party; that by 1940 a new farmer-labor party would take charge in America, and that "the Republican and Democratic parties will be nothing but historical memories." The communists put forth a national ticket this year, he said, merely because there was not sufficient time for the perfection of the farmer-worker organization.

The more radical members of the Roosevelt administration, particularly Dr. Tugwell who was exiled to the far west for a "study of rural rehabilitation and grasshopper control," have been muzzled for the campaign.

The mystical secretary of agriculture, Henry A. Wallace, sees as the "dominant political idea of the future" a system of "unity in diversity."

Totalitarian State "Ultimate."

Writing in Scribner's magazine, July, 1936, Mr. Wallace says: "The totalitarian or corporative state represents the ultimate in unity, but it also represents the loss of democratic privileges which we hold so dear. It seems to me that the unity which we are seeking has to do with evolving a concept of the general welfare grounded in both political and economic democracy."

In this article Mr. Wallace did not make it clear whether he favored the Italian or Russian version of the totalitarian state.

"Capitalism must collapse unless something is done to bring the individual under control," Mr. Wallace declared in that speech. "Capitalism, communism, and Fascism are all of a piece—materialistic and godless. Perhaps instead of emphasizing liberty, rights, and freedom, we should teach increasingly security, duty, responsibility—the things that hold people together rather than those that push them apart."

Radicals Dig Selves in.

The more radical members of the New Deal, the "direct action" boys who appraised all functions of government in terms of the Russian experiment, intrenched themselves in Mr. Wallace's department of agriculture and the Agricultural Adjustment administration because, as they explained it, the farmers have been the chief obstacle to the realization of a socialistic state in other countries and hence they must be brought under control first.

George N. Peek, former administrator of the AAA and former special adviser to President Roosevelt on foreign trade, has reported the "social revolution" talk of these young brain trusters in his book, "Why Quit Our Own?" published by the D. Van Nostrand company. Explaining the difficulties and delays encountered in the establishment of marketing agreements and codes for the food industries, Mr. Peek says:

"The general counsel's office appeared to be the neck of the bottle, and it was quickly reported to me that the general counsel, Jerome Frank was dealing directly with Messrs. Wallace and Tugwell and that the three of them, together with Dr. Mordecai Ezekiel—whom Mr. Wallace had taken as his economic adviser over the heads of the whole fine and experienced bureau of agricultural economics—were forming something in the nature of a departmental cabal."

An Associate Tells Scheme.

Mr. Peek says that one of his associates came to him one day and reported on what was going on, as follows:

"'It seems crazy and maybe it is crazy, or maybe I'm crazy, but I have been to several parties of Tugwell's and Jerome Frank's and they have a very different idea of this administration from what we have. They are all talking social revolution and they have the idea that it is the mission of the Roosevelt administration to turn us into some new kind of socialist state.'

"Sometimes they were very absurd," Mr. Peek continues, "as when they had the idea that relief for the unemployed was not to be a temporary expedient but a permanent setup to care for all those who were 'industrially disinherited.' They blamed all ills on capitalism and were for abolishing it, either by degrees or at once.

All One with Russia.

"They saw no difference between the American workers and farmers and the Russian varieties. They deeply admired everything Russian. . . . To them Russia was the promised land and the sooner the United States became like Russia the better for every one.

"For a while the notion was popular among a certain set that relief work should be pushed forward with the intent of driving the whole country on relief and thus making the capitalist system commit suicide.

"They insisted that Harry Hopkins [relief administrator] was with them on this and was directing his talents towards forcing relief work to drive out private work and cause an even greater amount of unemployment.

"Another group was against relief on the ground that hungry men revolt sooner that fed men. They would have starved the people, on the same theory that the Russians used to force the farmers into collective farming. One, in a position of prominence, was reported to have expressed deep regret over the food distribution as only delaying the great revolution.

Only Differ on Results.

"They differed on what the revolution was to be about and what would be done afterwards. They differed also as to the blood that ought to be shed. Some were for no blood and others for a lot of blood."

If there is any question that Mr. Peek was "seeing things under the bed" or lending too much credence to mere gossip, it should be dispelled by Dr. Tugwell's own words. In his book, "The Battle for Democracy," Dr. Tugwell replied to the Sinclair Lewis thesis—"It Can't Happen Here"—which delighted the WPA so much that it announced the sending out of 30 road shows to carry the reassuring message to the country.

Dr. Tugwell declares that there is disillusionment at the end of the "long years of depression," but that the "rising levels of living" and the "gradual relief from distress" may "bring disorder."

"When they [the people] gain a renewed sense of personal worth and integrity, of being of some use in the world instead of merely dependent on it, old grudges begin to be paid off and new sources of expression begin to be explored," says Dr. Tugwell.

Call to Arms Follows.

"In such situations a call to arms is difficult to resist. The seductive music of military drums can loose forces which cannot be touched by any appeal in the midst of depression. Something like this occurred in Italy in the early days of Fascism; something of the sort always occurs in great revolutionary movements.

"The masses move out of a slovenly past, out of submergence in misery, toward the prospect of a new discipline and a new outlet for the irrepressible human spirit.

"The ardor and imagination of the American people make it ridiculous to say that nothing of the sort could happen here. There need only be a cause and a leader with classical notions concerning power and force.

"We could have men marching in the streets to the same music which has always called them out. It is tampering with dynamite to minimize the possibility of this."

Sees Situation "Explosive."

In a speech delivered in Washington in December, 1931, Dr. Tugwell said: "There is no denying that tne contemporary situation in the United States has explosive possibilities. The future is becoming visible in Russia; the present is bitterly in contrast; politicians, theorists, and vested interests seem to conspire ideally for the provocation of violence of a long patient people."

But in a speech at Los Angeles, delivered on Oct. 28, 1935, he said: "We have no reason to expect that the disestablishing of our plutocracy will be pleasant."

Ideal of Future State.

In this speech Dr. Tugwell also expounded his ideal of the future state, saying: "Each industry lacking any rules or standards of practice expends a good share of its energy in useless competition for restricted markets, thus raising its costs and making low prices impossible; each industry likewise anticipates the time of disaster which this very policy makes inevitable. It sets aside the surpluses which ought to go to workers in wages or to consumers in lower prices and so dries up the potential market for its own and others' goods.

"This double process of multiplying costs and hoarding gains can only be cured by coöperative action in industry similar to that which is growing into agriculture. For this whole process to emerge into workable practice I have no doubt that a long time and more patience will be required. I have the feeling also that the compulsion needed for industrial change is more likely to come from the workers than present owners.

"So many of the owners stand to gain from disorder and disunity rather than from coöperation that the united action for such a purpose seems remote and unlikely. It is the workers who stand to gain most—just as the dirt farmer stands to gain most in agriculture."

In his book, "The Industrial Discipline," Dr. Tugwell also attacked the theory of surplus reserves and proposed the undistributed earnings tax which President Roosevelt had enacted into law.

But this was a mild treatment for business as compared with Dr. Tugwell's suggestion in his book, "The Principle of Planning and the Institution of Laissez-Faire."

How to Remake U. S.

"The first series of changes," he says, "will have to do with statutes, with constitutions, and with government . . . it will require the laying of rough, unholy hands on many a sacred precedent, doubtless calling on an enlarged and nationalized police power for enforcement. We shall also have to give up a distinction . . . economically quite absurd, between private and public or quasi-public employments.

"The next series of changes will have to do with industry itself . . . business will logically be required to disappear. This is not an over-statement for emphasis; it is literally meant."

Mr. Peek, in his book, quotes a memorandum prepared for him by one of his assistants respecting Jerome Frank, who was the AAA general counsel and who is still with the New Deal as general counsel for the surplus commodities corporation.

"Time after time he told me," says this memorandum, "that he 'had been the paid servant of these big plutocrats,' always referring to big business men, that he had 'made $80,000 a year working for them,' that he was 'through working for them' and that he was 'going to destroy them' if he could."

Peek Reports on Frank.

Mr. Frank himself, a former Chicago lawyer, declared in a speech at Chicago, Dec. 30, 1933: "The experimental attitude may have been fostered, in its inception, at Columbia and Yale, but today it is an attitude which has spread everywhere.

"The fact is, that if the word radical means a ruthless, thoughtless destroyer of cherished institutions, those who pose as the enemies of the so-called radicals are themselves the most dangerous radicals. . . . For if force ever undermines the present American system, it will be because of the stubborn and blind refusal of a few powerful beneficiaries of the old order to accept improvements."

Secretary Wallace's opinion of the profit motive was expressed in his book, "Whose Constitution?" as follows:

"Producers' coöperatives are not enough. For the most part they merely take the place of middle men. . . . The coöperative way of life must pervade the community, and this means there must be consumers' cooperatives as well as producers' cooperatives."

Ezekiel on Destruction.

Mordecai Ezekiel, another revolutionary mentioned by Mr. Peek, declared in a speech before the National Association of Marketing Officials in New York, Nov. 15, 1934: "The drastic steps of ploughing under cotton and slaughtering pigs might be likened to the actions of a fire department which does not hesitate to break windows and destroy paint in order to put out the fire."

Dr. Ezekiel has gone so far as to "blue print" industry, agriculture and the lives of all professional men and workers in his book, $2,500 a Year." This is the amount he fixes as the minimum income that would be received by all families under his "national blue print." Not only would this "blue print."

Threatens "Propertied Class.

"Propertied classes," says Dr. Ezekiel, "are prone to regard every proposal for modification of the economic system as an assault upon them, and to label it as 'communist' or 'fascist'. If they oppose all change, and strive solely for the return to past privileges, they may lose even what they have. Misery is the breeder of revolutions."

Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority, is another New Dealer who has dreamed of the socialist state in his writings. In the Survey Graphic for January, 1934, Dr. Morgan discusses the proposed extension of the TVA as follows:

"Such unified control and operation implies government ownership and operation. The control of this great electric-power system by a private corporation would give economic power over the people of the region which no self-appointed private business man ought to hold. . . . It would be necessary to exercise the right of eminent domain, and to have control over the economic blood of a vast region.

Indicates Roosevelt Ideal.

In this same article, Dr. Morgan indicated that President Roosevelt had far more than government ownership of electric power in mind when he ordained the TVA.

"When I first went to see President Roosevelt," says Dr. Morgan, "he talked about an hour about its [TVA's] possibilities and there was scarcely a mention of power or fertilizer. He talked chiefly about a designed and planned social and economic order. That was what was first in his mind. At the time I did not realize how far flung his ideas were, because his recovery program had not been fully revealed. The country as a whole did not appreciate how great a change in private and national life that program would require."

Richberg a Court Soldier.

Donald R. Richberg, former boss of the NRA, and "assistant President" in his capacity as chairman of the National Emergency council, who declared in a radio speech on July 31, 1933, that the "long discussed revolution is actually under way in the United States," was noted for his attacks upon the Supreme court. "The Supreme court," he declared on June 4, 1936, "was not established as a hierarchy to lay down laws by which a subservient people should interpret their gospel. The Supreme court cannot exercise any of the constructive powers of government. It can only establish a dictatorship of negation, a government of paralysis."

The New Dealers assaulted state's rights in various writings and policies, Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes demanding large tracts of western grazing lands be "removed from the sinister influence of state governments." They were.

At Philadelphia, on Nov. 3, 1933, Secretary Ickes declared that "'rugged individualism' has become a museum piece," and on Aug. 24, 1934, he subscribed to the Tugwell theory of arraying the classes against each other.

"Today we have different groups in each party," he said. "I'd like to see all the progressives together and all the conservatives together. Then you'd always be facing your enemy and not wondering about what is happening behind your back."

THREE JUDGES RULE COMMUNIST TICKET OFF STATE BALLOTS

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 26.—[Special.]—The communist presidential and state ticket will not appear on the Illinois ballot. After a lengthy hearing today, three justices of the Illinois Supreme court, sitting as a certifying board, found that the petition seeking a place on the ticket was insufficient.

"The nominating petition," said the decision, "does not include the signatures of 200 qualified voters from at least 50 counties within this state as required for the nomination of independent candidates, and is therefore insufficient in law as a nominating petition."

David J. Bentall, counsel for the communist candidates, challenged the jurisdiction of the Supreme court justices, who had been called in to hear the case after the statutory members of the board, Secretary of State Hughes, Auditor Barrett, and Attorney General Kerner had declined to serve. The state officers are candidates on the state ticket and had a personal interest in the hearing. The justices ruled against Bentall and took jurisdiction.

CHURCH MAY LET RED SPEAK IN ITS BIG AUDITORIUM

It appeared yesterday that the address of Samuel T. Hammersmark, communist candidate for governor of Illinois, may have to be moved into the auditorium of the First Congregational church of Oak Park this afternoon instead of in the church parlar as originally scheduled.

The announcement that Hammersmark would speak at a tea of the Colloquium, a group of younger church members interested in current events, has drawn increasing comment from residents. Police told objectors yesterday there would be no interference unless the speech provoked a disturbance.

"Some busybodies are too narrow minded to recognize the principles of free speech," declared the Rev. Albert Buckner Coe, the pastor. "We are not communists here, but we believe in free speech. We have room for only about seventy-five persons in the parlor, but if this publicity attracts crowds we will have to throw open the church to them."

AMERICA'S BIG MONEY-SAVING CAR, OWNERS SAY!

Report 18 to 24 Miles Per Gallon!

Costs Just a Few Dollars More Than Lowest-Priced Cars!

Milwaukee
23 Miles per Gallon!

"There's no doubt about it — Dodge actually costs less to own and operate than a smaller, lowest-priced car," says J. O. Franklin, Jr. "My big, new Dodge has proved that to me right on the road. It's big—roomy—safe and easy to drive—yet I am getting up to 23 miles to a gallon, and saving 18 to 20% on oil. The beauty of it is that my Dodge is just about as easy to pay for as a small car!"

Dallas
20 Miles per Gallon!

"I had heard a lot about the economy of the new Dodge," says Grace Smith, "but I will frankly admit I was skeptical until I got a new Dodge and really had a chance to try it out. But the first week convinced me and I have averaged 20 miles per gallon right from the start!"

Washington
19 Miles per Gallon!

"Many people have been able to drive Dodge cars over 100,000 miles," comments Harry A. Olive. "That means dependability and that's one reason I bought a Dodge. It costs very little more to pay for than small cars and the small amount of gas and oil which it consumes—I have been getting 19 miles to the gallon of gas—more than balances this difference."

Is it any wonder more people are buying Dodge cars than any other make excepting the three lowest-priced cars?

POLICEMAN KILLS GUNMAN, ROUTS THREE IN BATTLE

Robbers Captured After Tavern Getaway.

Sergt. John J. Ryan of the Englewood police station fought a gun battle yesterday with four ex-convicts who were holding up a crowded tavern at 900 West 59th street. He killed one of them. The others, one of whom is a PAROLED CONVICT, were captured two hours later in a raid by police squads on one of their homes.

In recent weeks there have been several daring daylight tavern robberies in the Englewood district. Sergt. Ryan, in plain clothes, dropped in yesterday to talk with William B. Fenton, the tavern owner, about these robberies. While they were discussing safeguards against such raids the four ex-convicts burst into the saloon with drawn revolvers. One of them stepped behind the bar to rifle the till. The others began pushing Fenton and Sergt. Ryan and the customers into a back room. Ryan purposely lagged behind, letting the others precede him into the room.

Bandit Fires First.

Reaching the door he whirled and drew his revolver. At the same moment the bandit behind the bar opened fire, two shots passing over the policeman's head. Sergt. Ryan's first three shots pierced the outlaw, killing him instantly.

His next shots routed the others, disconcerted by the sudden attack, and they fled through a rear door, shooting as they ran. Meanwhile Fenton and the customers were lying on the floor as the bullets whizzed through the room shattering the bar mirrors and the glassware.

The slain robber was identified as Erwin J. King, 27 years old, 6052 Kenwood avenue, an unemployed waiter. He was released a year ago after serving six years at the Pontiac reformatory for larceny.

Bartender Recognizes One.

Alex Zable, 901 West 59th street, the bartender recognized one of King's companions as Walter Boreman, 24 years old, alias Borema. Two police squads went to his home at 1232 West 49th place. In a short while the three other gunmen appeared and were captured.

They were John Kozlowski, alias Walker, 27 years old, 1352 West 80th street, and Elmer Swanson, 26 years old, 3336 North Damen avenue. Swanson and Boreman have served a term at Pontiac for robbery. Kozlowski was PAROLED three months ago after serving 9 years for killing a man in a robbery.

FLOOD CARRIES HOUSE TO SEA, BUT HE'S TAXED

Lowell, Mass., Sept. 26.—(AP)—The spring floods carried Gilbert Aubuchon's house to sea last March but that didn't prevent the city from sending him a tax bill for $160 today.

Aubuchon promptly took his grievance to Thomas R. George, secretary of the Lowell Taxpayer's association.

"My house went away last March," he told George.

"Went away?" demanded George.

"In the flood," explained Aubuchon, and "not only that," he added, "but the river took all the top soil from my garden."

George advised him to seek a rebate from the city assessors and this Aubuchon announced he would do.

CLAIMS TORTURE DEATH CONFESSION.

Des Moines, Ia., Sept. 26.—[Special.]—Marvin O'Shaughnessy is held at Fort Dodge, Ia., charged with the torture slaying on Aug. 25 of John D. Parker, 70, of Rockwell City, Ia. Glenn Schmidt, chief of the state bureau of investigation, said O'Shaughnessy has confessed, implicating Robert Avery of Rockwell City, Ia., now being hunted. Murder charges are to be filed against both.

BOY KILLER GRINS AS HE CONFESSES SHOOTING VICTIM

Traced by Death Gun; Accomplice Hunted.

Frank Tallach, 17 years old, 2004 Throop street, who early yesterday confessed the murder of Martin Damamiskis, 42 years old, 2024 Ruble street, and the wounding of Louis Rolanec, 50 years old, 1521 West 18th place, a week ago, was held at the Maxwell station last night while a search was made for William Miller, 18 years old, a brother-in-law, who was named as an accomplice.

Tallach was arrested on a farm near Itasca, Mich., Friday, after detectives traced a revolver used in the crimes to his possession. The revolver had been turned over to the police last week by Stanley Miller, another brother-in-law.

Amused as He Tells Crime.

Questioned at the Maxwell station yesterday by Capt. John Egan and Assistant State's Attorney John J. Phillips, Tallach eagerly told of the details of the shootings. Authorities said he smiled and appeared to be amused when he told of eluding pursuers after the second shooting and then returning to the scene to mix with the crowd gathered there.

He was taken to the scene yesterday afternoon and reënacted in detail the part he took in both shootings. While he was pointing out how the crimes were committed Mrs. Mary Damamiskis, widow of the victim, was guarded by police who feared she would attempt to attack him.

Tallach in his confession said he and William Miller were attempting to rob the home of John Shinkus in the rear of Damamiskis' home when the latter appeared. The prisoner said: "I don't think he saw us but he kept on coming and when he was a few feet away from me I fired."

Decide on a Holdup.

The youth said they fled and later decided to rob a pedestrian. They encountered Rolanec a half hour afterward in front of 1849 South Laflin street. Tallach said he fired when their victim resisted. Rolanec was shot in the abdomen and is in St. Anthony hospital. Tallach said they were pursued by residents but escaped. They later returned to appear as interested spectators, he said.

The youth confessed robbing three other persons in the last month. He said he turned the revolver over to his brother-in-law to keep for him and left for the Michigan farm owned by a relative.

Mother Killed, 3 Others Hurt as Auto Hits Train

Escanaba, Mich., Sept. 26.—[Special.]—Mrs. Carl Budtke, 42, Munising, was killed and three other members of the family were injured when their automobile crashed into a Soo line train north of Rapid river. Mr. Budtke and two daughters, Lenora, 16, and Norma, 14, were taken to St. Francis hospital. The father was seriously injured. The children were suffering from shock and bruises.

INDICT 3 FOR MURDER.

Canton, N. Y., Sept. 26.—(AP)—The St. Lawrence county grand jury today indicted three persons for first degree murder in the shooting of Rocco DiIorenzo of Detroit, whose body was found July 10 beside the Winthrop-Massena road.

PERE MARQUETTE TRAINS ARE PUT ON CHICAGO TIME

I. C. C. Extends Eastern Zone to Porter, Ind.

The interstate commerce commission has extended the eastern standard time zone to within thirty-five miles of Chicago in the case of the Pere Marquette railroad, it was learned yesterday, to permit the company, whose tracks extend to Porter, Ind., to escape the confusion of changing from eastern to central standard time. Other lines operating into Chicago were denied this safeguard against confusion and danger when the I. C. C. ruled that railroads in the Chicagoland area cannot operate on the same time as the city.

Operating crews on the Pere Marquette must, however, face the same confusion as other lines west of Porter, as their trains come into Chicago over the New York Central and the Baltimore and Ohio tracks from Porter.

Trains Stopped for Change.

At 11 o'clock last night every train on the Pere Marquette lines came to a complete stop for one minute while watches were set ahead an hour to conform to Chicago daylight time. The stop was made to eliminate any danger of confusion.

At midnight the New York Central lines moved their time changing points westward from Toledo, O., and Detroit, Mich., to Elkhart, Ind., and Niles, Mich. The railroad is thus brought into conformity with the state-wide use of eastern standard time in Michigan.

While some communities in the vicinity of Chicago have set their clocks back an hour to central standard time, the majority of them chose to remain on Chicago daylight time rather than go through with the confusion of changing clocks at this time of the year.

Referendum on Nov. 3.

Communities as far north as Waukegan on the north shore, and communities in the south and west will generally follow Chicago at least until after the referendum on the time question to be held here on Nov. 3.

Joliet, Aurora, and Elgin returned to central standard time at 2 a. m. this morning, but suburban trains will continue to operate on Chicago daylight schedules.

Beginning tomorrow the principal commodity and security markets will conform to trading hours in New York. [Details on the market page.]

PLANE STRIKES LIVE WIRES, PORCH, BLAZES; FIVE ESCAPE UNHURT

Somerset, Pa., Sept. 26.—(AP)—The pilot and a passenger escaped from the flaming wreckage of an airplane that fell into three wires carrying 22,000 volts of electricity late today, then smashed into a wooden shed. The plane clipped off four posts from a porch on which three women were standing. Mrs. Edna Mock, her mother, and daughter huddled against a wall of Mrs. Mock's home, near Somerset, and escaped injury.

BORAH'S ACTION MAY RULE VOTE IN SIX STATES

Will He Support Landon or Roosevelt?

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Boise, Idaho, Sept. 26.—[Special.]—In a little plainly furnished office overlooking the green Boise river valley sits the grand old man of the mountain, Borah of Idaho, who, according to a widely held view in these parts, holds the fate of the country in the hollow of his hand.

If, 'tis argued, Landon carries the east and Roosevelt carries the south and west, the contest may be decided by a handful of electoral votes in the northwest. In Idaho, Montana, Washington, Utah, and Oregon, with a total of 25 electoral votes, Senator Borah wields a mighty influence. His voice raised in behalf of either candidate might determine whether these states go Democratic or Republican, whether the country is to continue to the left with Roosevelt or turn to the right with Landon.

Preserves Elaborate Silence.

Certain it is in any event that Idaho, with four electoral votes, will be in the Republican column if Borah takes the stump for Landon and probably will go Democratic if he does not. Also, certain it is that whether Landon or Roosevelt carries Idaho, Borah will be reëlected to a sixth term in the United States senate, elected by Democratic as well as Republican votes.

So far the senator, while maintaining his Republican regularity, has preserved an elaborate silence on the presidential contest.

Depends on Developments.

Borah, biding his time, declines to discuss his position with relation to the presidential election or his intentions with respect to campaigning for Landon. He is going to vote for Landon and is going to make one or more speeches on national issues in the latter part of the campaign, but whether he shall make an appeal for the election of Landon depends apparently upon developments in the next three or four weeks.

So far as one may judge, Borah's position has not changed since the close of the Cleveland convention. He left Cleveland declaring the Republican platform satisfactory, for the platform framers had accepted virtually everything he demanded. But his approval of the platform was uttered before he had heard of the Landon telegram modifying the monetary plank by interpretation to envisage the ultimate return to the gold standard. That was too much for Borah, who is a devotee of managed currency and holds that a return to the gold standard would be as disastrous for the United States as it was for Great Britain in 1925. Borah also dropped a remark or two at the time indicating his resentment that Landon had not consulted him before sending the gold telegram.

Borah came home, confiding to his intimates that he could not campaign for Landon unless Landon should demonstrate to Borah's satisfaction that he is a genuine liberal and is not going to be controled, if elected, by Ogden Mills, Charles D. Hilles, the Morgans, du Ponts, and others identified with "the interests" the senator denounces so comprehensively.

Not Satisfied with Speech.

Republican leaders thought Borah's support would be won when Gov. Landon made his Portland speech, in which he pledged himself to the extirpation of the monopolies Borah holds to blame for the depression. But Borah apparently was not satisfied.

Numerous Republican leaders, sensing the possibly vital importance of carrying this northwestern region in which the senator particularly is influential, have endeavored to induce him to go to Topeka for a talk with Landon. They were sure Landon would satisfy him that as President he would be everything Borah could reasonably demand. But so far he has refused to go.

In 1928 he had such a conference with Candidate Hoover, getting Hoover's promise to call an extraordinary session of congress to pass farm legislation. Borah broke with Hoover soon after inauguration, charging Hoover had double-crossed him by not confining tarif increases to agricultural products. Hoover attributed the break to his failure to appoint Borah to the cabinet.

Democrats Hope for 5,000 Majority.

Democratic leaders will be satisfied if Roosevelt can carry Idaho by 5,000 or 10,000 votes, compared with his 38,000 four years ago. Reason is that while union labor is strongly pro-New Deal, it is not much of a factor in elections in this state and among the farmers there has been a pronounced reaction against the New Deal because of the waste in expenditures and the continuing deficits and because of the Canadian reciprocal tarif treaty. The cattlemen particularly are vocal on the Canadian treaty, many of them returning from the Omaha market with accounts of the pens containing 40 per cent Canadian cattle.

Crop farmers also have joined the chorus of protests, complaining of a drop in the price of clover seed following importation of 40,000 bags from Belgium. Democratic leaders on the defensive are spreading the assurance that Mr. Roosevelt is willing to modify the treaty. Idahoans are able to speak with a good deal of expertness on the subject of wasteful New Deal expenditures. Washington has poured 130 million dollars into Idaho, including 34 millions for relief that was not needed.

Idaho Finances in Fine Condition.

Idaho state finances are enviable. In five years a net cash deficit of $280,000 has been transformed into a surplus of 3 millions and the long time debt reduced from 8 to 2½ millions. For years there has been more money in the state treasury than the state knew what to do with.

In this prosperous condition Idaho was taking care of its unemployed before the New Deal without any help from Washington. James P. Pope, Democrat, now United States senator, but at that time mayor of Boise, particularly was proud of the measures he worked out for unemployment relief at wholly local expense. But when he went to Washington as senator his eyes were opened to the ease of getting New Deal money in the way all the others were getting it. So he had Idaho put down for liberal allotments. Pretty soon so much easy money was flowing into Idaho that the local New Dealers were at their wits ends to think up schemes of spending it.

For one thing they staffed the relief organization heavily with Democratic workers.

In Idaho, leading producer of silver, the Roosevelt silver subsidy is an important influence working in behalf of perpetuation of the New Deal. So it is in Nevada, another important mining state and home of Senator Key Pittman [Dem.], chief manipulator of silver legislation at Washington. Nevada seems safe for Roosevelt, though probably by a margin far smaller than his 16,000 in 1932.

Nevada Gets 40 Millions U. S. Cash.

Nevada, with less than 100,000 population, has received 40 millions of federal money and has waxed fat on the New Deal. The per capita New Deal expenditure in Nevada is the largest in the country. Thriftily, the Nevadans have voted down bond issues for improvements at state expense, but have taken all the federal funds they could get. As a result Nevada has a 3 million dollar treasury surplus and no bonded debt outside the state. It has no sales tax, income, or gift taxes and has repealed its inheritance tax law.

It got $3,800,000 from the federal government for highway construction, but levied no highway tax of its own. During the first two and a half years of the New Deal it spent $57,000 of its own money for unemployment relief but got 4½ millions from Washington.

DEMOCRATS TO TALK IN 15 'KEY' STATES AGAINST ROOSEVELT

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 26.—(AP)—The National Jeffersonian Democrats' headquarters here announced tonight a speaking campaign covering 15 "key" states would be launched next week in opposition to the reëlection of President Roosevelt.

Among the speakers named are former United States Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, national chairman of the organization; former Gov. Joseph B. Ely of Massachusetts; Bainbridge Colby, secretary of state in the Wilson administration; Col. Henry Breckinridge, and Daniel F. Cohalan, all of New York; and Dr. Guy W. Dyer of Nashville, Tenn., professor of economics at Vanderbilt university.

Breckinridge is scheduled to speak first Monday night at a meeting in Indianapolis, Ind., sponsored by the Independent Coalition of American Women. Thursday night Reed is scheduled to address a rally of Jeffersonian Democrats of Iowa at Cedar Rapids.

Bay State Red Aspirant for Governor Raps Landon

Lowell, Mass., Sept. 26.—(AP)—Otis A. Hood, communist candidate for governor of Massachusetts, said today the Republican party must be defeated at all costs. He could not agree with labor leaders who rely on President Roosevelt, but said: "We do agree the worst enemies of labor and progress are gathered around Landon and the Republican party, which must be defeated at all costs."

PRESIDENT BUSY ON CAMPAIGN IN HIS HOME STATE

Roosevelt Eager to Win Own County.

BY WALTER TROHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 26.—[Special.]—Political fence building in his home state and his home county engaged the attention of President Roosevelt today.

The first of a series of political conferences brought chubby Mayor Fiorello La Guardia up from New York City to the President's study. La Guardia, who is a leader among radical minority stockholders in the Republican party supporting Roosevelt, came with the assurance New York City will carry the state for the New Deal.

See "Fighting Chance."

The situation in Dutchess county and Hyde Park was presented by James Townsend, Democratic county chairman; Alpha Whiton, New Deal candidate for congress, and Elmer Van Wagner, Democratic leader of Hyde Park township. Their picture was not so bright as that of the mayor. The best they could give the President in his home county was "a fighting chance.'

Mr. Roosevelt is most eager to carry his home county and to defeat his own congressman, Representative Hamilton Fish, bitter New Deal foe. To this end Democratic Chairman Farley has sent one of his highest priced press agents up the Hudson to advise local Democrats on strategy.

The press agent has found few Democrats to advise. In the President's home country Landon and Knox portraits meet the eye far oftener than Roosevelt and Garner displays and Sunflowers sprout on lapels almost as profusely as they do on Kansas prairies.

Discusses Federal Projects.

La Guardia also called in the rôle of president of the United States Mayors conference and mayor of his home city. In these rôles he said he discussed long range planning of Federal projects and an anticipated housing shortage in his city.

On the election issue he dodged a guess as to how many votes Roosevelt will receive in Manhattan by saying, "Oh, enough to carry the state."

Asked about the part radical Republicans will play in the campaign La Guardia said he could not speak for those who attended the Progressive convention in Chicago. Pressed as to his own part he said he hadn't been asked to do anything but admitted "the temptation to speak is irresistible."

Denies He'll Take Stump.

Questioned as to whether he will speak before the President at the Madison Square rally in New York the last Saturday of the campaign he asked who was sponsoring the meeting. When he was told "Tammany" the stubby mayor clapped on his hat, waved his arms about belligerently and roared: "No, no, no."

La Guardia denied reports that he would accept the post of secretary of war if it should be offered to him by asserting he has a contract with the people of New York with "an option for renewal on both sides." Harry Woodring, former governor of Kansas and former assistant war secretary, was given the cabinet post on a recess appointment last night, but a permanent selection is yet to be made.

Finances Discussed.

The question of party finances, a serious Democratic problem, was taken up with Walter J. Cummings, Chicago banker and former party treasurer. Cummings left his party job at the suggestion of Democratic leaders skittish over the fact that his heavy paying multiple jobs, passed out by the RFC, would injure the party.

Cummings was followed by Stanley High, religious publicist and organizer of the so-called Nonpartisan Good Neighbor league, which is seeking to capture the church vote for Roosevelt. With High came Ben Corcoran, attorney, who drafted the securities exchange legislation who was asked about sentiment in his field.

Still another caller was William Griffith, youthful publisher of a New York Sunday afternoon newspaper, who recently returned from a tour of Europe, during which he assumed the rôle of unofficial ambassador. White House attachés cautioned newspaper men that Griffith is "a bit enthusiastic."

Offers War Debt Plan.

Griffith reported that he urged the President to sever diplomatic relations with Russia and suggested that this country demand the liners Normandie and Queen Mary from France and England in payment of war debts.

During the day Mrs. Roosevelt arrived from the White House, where she had been confined to bed with the grippe. In the evening her recovery was celebrated at a large dinner for friends and the family.

Among those at the dinner were Mr. and Mrs. Basil O'Connor and New York Supreme Court Justice Sam Rosenman and Mrs. Rosenman. O'Connor was formerly the President's law partner, and was persuaded to remove the latter's name from his office door after the New Deal was launched. Rosenman was the President's attorney.

ROOSEVELT NAMES ADMIRAL TAYLOR TO NEW MARINE BOARD

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 26.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt tonight named Rear Admiral Montgomery M. Taylor a temporary member of the new maritime commission, to hold the place of Rear Admiral Harry G. Hamlet, commandant of the coast guard.

After Hamlet's selection three days ago, it was discovered that since he does not retire from the coast guard until early in October, he would lose his retirement pay by accepting the appointment to the commission. For this reason he asked to be excused until his retirement. Admiral Taylor agreed to hold the post for a few days.

Three recess members of the commission were named during the week to begin a study of the water front situation on the west coast, where a general strike tied up shipping two years ago. The President will meet with the members on his return to Washington on Wednesday.

Dallas Woman Is Chosen Camp Fire Girls Head

Lincoln, Neb., Sept. 26.—(AP)—Mrs. Elbert Williams of Dallas, Tex., today was elected national president of Camp Fire Girls, Inc., at the closing session of the organization's national council here. She succeeds Mrs. Lida Foote Tarr of Cleveland who becomes first vice president.

YALE ADDS GENERAL EXAMINATIONS TO ITS CREDIT REQUIREMENT

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 26.—(AP)—Yale university announced tonight that a system of general examinations, described as one of the university's "most important educational changes in many years," will go into effect when the 236th academic year opens Monday.

Previously, a student in the undergraduate schools earned his degree by accumulating, year by year, the proper number of numerical credits for separate courses. To this numerical requirement, a university bulletin said, the new system adds an examination in the student's major field of study to be taken at the end of the senior year and which will be a final test of his work conducted over a period of two or three years.

Mayor Hague Would Drop Case of Brother's Death

New York, Sept. 26.—[Special.]—Counsel for Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City asked dismissal today of manslaughter charges against William J. Porter, 40, the motorist whose car fatally injured the mayor's brother, James. Judge Paul F. Collum in Hudson County Trafic court heard Charles F. X. O'Brien, for the mayor, ask the charges be dropped, as nothing could restore James Hague to his family. Judge Collum said he must pass the case on to the grand jury.

GLENN CHARGES NEW DEAL HURTS LITTLE FELLOW

Points Out Fallacy of 'Trust Baiting.'

The small business man, and not "the so-called soulless corporation," suffers most from New Deal legislation, Otis F. Glenn, Republican nominee for United States senator, declared yesterday in a statement issued from his headquarters.

"In all the attacks that the New Deal has made on business," former Senator Glenn said, "it has attempted to convince the people that it is only attacking the big fellow. The real fact, however, is that it is the little business man who suffers from the type of legislation which the present administration has jammed through. The big corporation is able to take care of itself. It has able lawyers to defend it and huge funds for defense.

Charges NRA Hit Little Fellow.

"It was the small business man who was hurt by the NRA before it was declared unconstitutional by the United States Supreme court. It is the small business man who is going to suffer from the infamous tax on surpluses which will prevent him from laying up money from prosperous years to tide him over lean ones.

"Most of the corporations in the United States are small," Mr. Glenn continued. "The income tax returns in 1931 showed that there were 381,088 corporations in the country. Of these, 182,447, or about half, had assets of less than $50,000. Only 74,000 of the remainder had balance sheets with assets exceeding $250,000.

Small Business Controls Industry.

"The business and industry of the country is in the hands of hundreds of thousands of small business men and manufacturers who are exercising their God-given right under the constitution to lead a life of usefulness and make a living for themselves and their families. In order to get control of these enterprises and regiment and harass these enterprising citizens, the New Deal would have you believe it is fighting only the large trusts."

Mrs. Ralph W. Webster, 5411 Hyde Park boulevard, who is a prominent club leader, signing up as a VOLUNTEER in Tribune Tower headquarters.

SEN. HOLT VISITS HERE; ASSAILS JOHN L. LEWIS

Homeward bound after calling on Gov. Alf M. Landon at Topeka, Rush D. Holt, young Democratic United States senator from West Virginia, stopped in Chicago long enough last night to make an attack on John L. Lewis, father of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

"While I was investigating relief in my home state," he said, "I found that John Lewis' brother, Raymond Lewis, had been put on the WPA pay roll although he is not even a resident of the state. Raymond Lewis' salary was raised recently and it is not an unusual wisecrack in West Virginia to ask how many shares of bank stock a man must hold to be put on the WPA rolls.

"John Lewis is the most dictatorial tyrant the labor movement has ever seen. In my home state he refuses to let the miners name their own local officials. How can the steel workers believe they could elect even their own officers if they follow Lewis?"

Catholic Lawyer Objects to Elector in New York

Nyack, N. Y., Sept. 26.—[Special.]—Arthur T. O'Leary, prominent Catholic layman and intimate friend of James A. Farley and Alfred E. Smith, today made public at his law offices here a letter he sent last Tuesday to Mr. Farley in which he declared he could not vote for President Roosevelt because the name of David Dubinsky, labor leader, was on the list of the Democratic presidential electors from this state.

EXACTING BOSS

By CALEB

ONE of our section managers was explaining the forward progress of a salesman. The salesman had more than doubled his earnings in less than a year.

"There is a little giant in every one," he said. "It simply awaits release in one way or another. In this case, the man got the picture of being in business for himself. He started treating our customers as though he were the proprietor of this business. He was solicitous, courteous, and industrious—and unflagging in his determination to make shopping a satisfaction to them. The power to grow was in him, once he really turned loose and used himself.

EVERY ONE is in business for himself. But few people know it. The minister, the doctor, the auto mechanic, the retail sales person, even the day laborer!

The auto mechanic, as inevitably as day follows night, does something to himself whenever he does something to an automobile. If he does the job well and conscientiously, he builds himself. If he slights and halfway does the job, he weakens himself. He is the boss. He decides for himself. He is his own business—irrevocably and inescapably.

The mechanic or craftsman or clerk or assistant who has skimped and cut corners, who has slighted and sloughed his job, has made himself that kind of person. The one who has worked to high standards, who has held himself, or herself, strictly to account to do the best that could be done, has become that kind of person.

No laws or circumstances counteract this truth. Water takes the color of the soil through which it flows. Businesses are not seeking to advance persons who discolor or sour the transactions or affairs which flow through them. People through whom work and transactions flow cleanly and purely are the ones in whom "the little giant" grows and grows.

Even if additional compensation or responsibility is not immediately forthcoming, the better way is worthwhile. It builds a person and personality.

You may work for someone else or you may not, but always and forever you are working primarily for your*self*. Be an exacting boss!

Pension Planner Enraged at 'Slip' in Tobin Case.

Dr. Francis E. Townsend, the usually placid director of the old age pension plan, was aroused to wrath yesterday when he learned that Daniel J. Tobin was permitted to broadcast an appeal for funds for the Democratic war chest Friday night in New York from station WJZ, a National Broadcasting company station.

Dr. Townsend was scheduled to give an address Friday night here over station WENR, also an NBC station, but he canceled it when NBC officials refused to allow him to ask his followers for funds to continue a series of "educational" broadcasts. He was informed by the NBC that a general broadcasting rule forbids solicitation of funds except in the case of such charities as the Red Cross, Salvation Army and local community chests.

Same Chain on Same Evening.

"Mr. Tobin, who is director of the labor division of the Democratic national committee, was allowed to make an appeal for funds Friday night," Dr. Townsend said, "but the right was denied to me by the same broadcasting chain that same evening.

"I was informed emphatically that this denial was not occasioned by my desire to see Mr. Roosevelt defeated. This inconsistency is typical of the New Deal and Mr. Roosevelt's policies. It would seem that the policies of NBC are a direct reflection of those of the Democratic administration.

"I am told that the Tobin broadcast was a slip. There have been altogether too many slips. The wheat of the nation has been plowed under, our people are still unemployed, the richest country in the world is forced to import agricultural and livestock produce. These, I presume, are just slips, too. There doesn't seem to have been any slip in my case, however."

Headquarters Admits Error.

In New York at NBC headquarters it was admitted that Tobin had made the appeal for political funds in violation of the broadcasting rule.

"The Tobin speech was simply slipped over on us," said Wayne L. Randall, director of publicity for the company. "He showed up at the studio too late for our continuity man to read his script before he went on the air and the thing got by. Of course, there is nothing we can do about it."

Dr. Townsend promptly countered by pointing out that it is an NBC rule that a copy of all broadcasts must be submitted to the studio forty-eight hours in advance of the broadcast.

"My address was submitted forty-eight hours before the broadcast," he said. "Apparently Mr. Tobin's was not."

NBC officials admitted this charge, too, but again declared it was a "slip."

Expects Enforcement in Future.

"It is our policy to have copies of broadcasts in the office forty-eight hours ahead of time," A. W. Kaney, assistant to the vice president of NBC, said. "But apparently the rule was not enforced with regard to Tobin. However, I'm sure it won't happen again. I feel that this incident will result in more care in the future. Dr. Townsend complied with the forty-eight hour rule and when we saw the solicitation of funds in his broadcast we had to turn him down. He then canceled the time."

Dr. Townsend announced yesterday that he is going ahead with his plans to broadcast from two Mexican stations, XEPN and XELO at Piedras Negras, to avoid the broadcasting rule in this country.

G.O.P. Charges Many Letters to Roosevelt Never Arrive

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 26.—[Special.]—More than a million persons have responded to President Roosevelt's invitation, broadcast over the radio in a number of talks, to "write to me."

But almost none of the letters thus sent in response to the President's request have been considered by him, according to a survey conducted by the Republican national committee and made public today.

Sixty-five per cent of such letters have been routed by clerks to New Deal organizations and form letter replies were made, according to the survey.

Go to Local Administrators.

"Many of these sincere citizens," according to the committee statement, "who attempted to communicate with the President at his solicitation have suffered by accepting the invitation because in cases where the writer complained of local WPA or FERA conditions, the letters were referred back to state or local administrators, frequently to the same individuals against whom the complaint was made."

The procedure followed in handling the mail addressed to the President was outlined as follows:

A clerk in the basement of the executive offices of the White House opens and sorts the mail. If a letter is from a relative or personal friend or acquaintance of the President, it stays in the White House, otherwise it is sent to one of the agencies of the government. Approximately 75 per cent of this mail is referred to the Works Progress administration.

Nearly a million letters have been so referred to the WPA and the FERA. Approximately 65 per cent of these were addressed to the President or to Mrs. Roosevelt and sent to the correspondence division of the WPA and FERA.

An official analysis of mail received by the White House in a typical week was as follows:

Complaints about the WPA or relief—83.3 per cent.

Requests to the President for charity—5.4 per cent.

Requests for information—7.3 per cent.

Suggestions for improvement of WPA—1.5 per cent.

Miscellaneous—2.5 per cent.

The 83 per cent of letters complaining about the WPA or relief administration are referred to the state office of the letter's origin.

Written in Confidence.

"In this way," commented the committee statement, "many of the letters written to the President of the United States in the belief that the writer was speaking in confidence to the nation's chief executive, have been returned to the very individuals against whom the complaint was made, enabling them to persecute the writer.

"As an example of the futile letter writing suggested by the President," the statement declared:

"Twice the President has invited the public over the radio to write to him about their expected loss through chattel mortgage foreclosures of household furnishings because of their inability to keep up instalment payments. The thousands of letters written to the President in response to this invitation were promptly sent to the FERA office and from there to the state ERA offices, where, under the government regulations, nothing could be done in any such case. Again people were invited to inquire about government loans. Requests for loans were likewise 'acknowledged and referred'."

HALF OF VOTERS IN COUNTY TOWNS SIGN POLL LISTS

Register for Nov. 3 in 81 Communities.

Vote Registration

The record of voters' registration at the election board offices on the third floor of the city hall follows:

Yesterday's registration....	2,941
Previous registration......	158,469
Total at city hall.......	161,410

This figure, added to the precinct registration of 1,019,332 last Saturday, gives a total registration so far of 1,180,742.

Estimates that more than half of the country town voters who live in the eighty-one communities in Cook county outside the jurisdiction of the Chicago election board had registered yesterday for the election Nov. 3 were made last night when the polls closed at 9 p. m. after having been open since 6 a. m.

The totals in most of the suburbs will not be made known until tomorrow when the mail is opened at the office of County Clerk Flynn. The judges in the 371 polling places were told to mail their figures to Flynn's office.

Oak Park completed its count early today, showing a total of 22,021 in the village's 42 precincts. This compares with a total of 35,138 in 1932. In Evanston test counts in ten precincts showed 58 per cent of the voters registered.

Expects 250,000 Total.

Clerk Flynn believes that almost 250,000 voters will be registered in his territory when final compilations are made after the Oct. 6 registration. A figure of 218,000 was reached in 1932. In 1934, the country town "off year" registration was 174,000.

A second and final day of registration for these country voters will be held on Oct. 6, which is also the last day for permanent registrations in the territory controled by the Chicago election board—the city proper and nine suburbs, Berwyn, Chicago Heights, Cicero, Elmwood Park, Evergreen Park, Harvey, Morton Grove, Stickney and Summit.

Eight days remain for voters in this area to register at the city hall where the board has fifty-two deputy registrars on duty from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. Monday through Friday, and from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. on Saturday.

Fight Attack on New Law.

The Republican county central committee yesterday authorized its counsel, John F. Tyrrell, a candidate for Circuit court judge, to file an intervening petition in litigation seeking to nullify permanent registration on the ground it is unconstitutional. The suit was filed on behalf of Mrs. Grace Herzberger, 7440 Crandon avenue. It will be argued before Circuit Judge Cornelius J. Harrington on Tuesday.

Attorney Tyrrell will file his intervening petition in behalf of George F. Harding, Republican national committeeman, and Edward F. Moore, county chairman, as taxpayers. The petition will set forth among other counts, that nullification of the law would be contrary to public policy.

"The Republican party," Mr. Moore said, "was vitally interested in the passage of the permanent registration law by the legislature in the interest of clean elections. This suit must be beaten. The chaos which would result were it successful would disfranchise the entire city and most of the county."

HOPKINS HERE, DENIES POLITICAL PRESSURE PUT ON WPA WORKERS

Harry L. Hopkins, national WPA administrator, spent several hours in Chicago yesterday en route from Denver to New York. He has been making a tour of WPA projects through the country and while here he conferred with Howard O. Hunter, his regional representative.

Hopkins denied charges that WPA employés are being coerced into voting for Roosevelt through fear of losing their jobs, terming such charges "just politics." He declared the government will always have to maintain some formal work relief program to take care of the unemployed.

In answer to a question concerning addresses he made in cities where Frank Knox, Republican candidate for Vice President, was stumping, the WPA administrator declared these were "just coincidences."

10 Years' Research Creates NEW SUPER-TYPE LUMBER

HINES BONDED PRECISION LUMBER

When you build or buy a new home, go deeper than the surface. Distinctive exterior—colorful bathroom—convenient kitchen—charming living room—ample closets—all of these are important. But far more vital than anything else is the hidden frame.

Avoid These Faults

Everything hangs on the frame. If it is built of green unseasoned lumber shrinkage is sure to take place after the house is built. Ugly cracks will soon open in the plaster. The floors will become uneven and squeaky. The house will shake and tremble with every passing truck. Hines engineers spent 10 years developing a super-lumber to eliminate these faults. Today that lumber is ready.

Hines Bonded Precision Lumber in the frame of a house is insurance of lasting durability—permanent beauty.

This new super-type lumber meets specifications never before required of any construction lumber. It is scientifically stabilized to Chicago's climate. It will not shrink, warp, or "move" after it is built into your home. This insures permanent frame rigidity and eliminates those costly faults caused by the use of green lumber.

Adds $35 to $50 to Small Home Cost

The cost of using this modern super-type lumber is so low that every home builder can afford to use it. The added cost on a $10,000 home will not exceed $90—$35 to $50 on small homes. Investigate this new Hines lumber before you do any building. Learn why it will not shrink. See with your own eyes why it is so much stronger. Inspect it at our nearest Hines yard. WEST VIRGINIA SAFE FOR G. O. P., HAMILTON FINDS

Claims 300 Electoral Votes for Landon "In Bag."

John Hamilton, chairman of the Republican national committee, told a press conference at his Chicago headquarters yesterday that he now counts West Virginia as one of the states that will be in the Landon column on Nov. 3.

This opinion, he said, was based on his personal observations and on information gathered during a recent trip through the state.

"I have never seen more enthusiasm in any state during a campaign than I saw during my tour of West Virginia," he said.

Adding West Virginia to his list of states that he predicts will go Republican, he asserted that the Landon-Knox ticket "now has well over 300 electoral votes in the bag." To win only 266 are necessary.

Biggest States in G. O. P. List.

He said that his latest observations and the most recent reports he has received strengthened his conviction that the G. O. P. wil carry New York, Pennsylvania, and Ohio, states which he already had included in his list.

"Without doubt we'll carry it," he said in reference to New York. "I've been confident for a month and see no reason to change my mind now."

He did not predict that Landon would carry New York City but he asserted that the Republicans "will cut into" the normally heavy Democratic vote of the metropolis.

He said there was "no question" about the Republicans' carrying Pennsylvania and was equally confident about Ohio.

Counters Wallace's Assertions.

Chairman Hamilton replied to the assertion of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace's Friday night speech that the Landon agricultural program would nullify the soil conservation act and send farm prices plunging downward.

"Mr. Wallace's predictions," he said, "don't alarm me a great deal. Mr. Roosevelt made the same predictions and used the same figures after the NRA decision.

"As a matter of fact their predictions aren't a damned bit better than their promises. Gov. Landon's whole program is bottomed on soil conservation."

While admitting that there was a Republican slump during August, Hamilton said that the G. O. P. is now forging ahead, the movement accelerated by the Maine election, the Michigan primary and Gov. Landon's farm speeches.

Fair Prices and Full Crops.

The national chairman contended that if the farmers of the United States "got fair prices and full crops" they would make more money than they do under the present condition of high prices for restricted crops.

"Fair prices and full crops," he said, "also would give the laboring man and the consumer a fair deal.

"Mr. Wallace criticized Gov. Landon's proposed system of federal warehouse receipts on which farmers might borrow from the banks and said 'it is probably unconstitutional.' I'd like to ask when Mr. Wallace, chief proponent of the unconstitutional AAA, became so interested in the constitution. It's about the first time I have heard of his being so interested in that American document."

Predictions similar to those of Hamilton were made by Col. Frank Knox, vice presidential nominee, during a brief stay in Chicago between two of his long distance trips across the country.

He said concerning West Virginia that Senator Rush Holt's attacks on the New Deal and his open support of Gov. Landon have cut down the Democratic vote materially. He forecast that Republican upstate New York would outvote Democratic New York City and called the eastern Pennsylvania "overwhelmingly Republican."

Col. Knox still contends that all New England states are in the Republican column, that almost half of the old line Democrats in Maryland have turned against the New Deal and that in some states such as Minnesota and Montana the outcome depends on the size of the Lemke vote.

He said that the Roosevelt administration hurt itself in South Dakota by advertising the state as being ruined by the drouth, and that in Wyoming Senator Robert Carey and the Republican state ticket will win.

Mrs. Simms Cheers Party.

News to cheer Republicans also was brought to Chicago by Mrs. Ruth Hanna Simms, who had just completed a speaking tour for the national committee. She said that two of the states in which she traveled, Iowa and Kansas, are in the Republican column, that the Republicans have "a good fighting chance" in Missouri, and that they have a "very strong chance" in Democratic Oklahoma.

From the taxpayers' division of the national committee came an attack on the division of the burden of "easy money" in which Director Robert Kratky presented revised figures concerning various states and sections of the country.

"National expenditures for relief from June, 1933, to Dec. 31, 1935," said Kratky, "were $4,096,433,367, according to Harry L. Hopkins. In nine Democratic southern states only 3.52 per cent of the total of $375,000,000 allotted to them by the relief administration was contributed by the state and local governments.

"In nine northern states, normally Republican, almost 46 per cent of the cost of relief was paid through the state and local agencies. One of these states was Kansas, which contributed 27 per cent of $55,000,000."

CLAIMS TWO STATES FOR G. O. P.

FORMER POSTAL AID HITS 'ILLEGAL STAMP ISSUES' UNDER FARLEY

Omaha, Neb., Sept. 26.—(AP)—Michael L. Eidsness, former superintendent of the Washington division of stamps, declared at a meeting of the writers' division of the American Philatelic society today that "James A. Farley is ruining the society and individual collectors by his preposterous and frequently illegal special issues of commemorative postage stamps."

"Farley is putting out many illegal issues just to enrich his department," Eidsness stated.

He said the Byrd stamp issue "is illegal, the Little America postoffice is illegal, and both were planned to finance the Byrd south pole expedition."

PULITZER PAPER URGES DEFEAT OF F. D. ROOSEVELT

Constitution at Stake, Says Post-Dispatch.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 26.—(AP)—The St. Louis Post Dispatch [Independent], which supported Democratic candidates in the last five presidential campaigns, announced tonight that it "cannot support Mr. Roosevelt for reëlection to the presidency."

"In simplest possible terms," said the newspaper, which was founded by Joseph Pulitzer, "the overshadowing issue in the coming national election is whether or not we shall set up in America, in defiance of the American tradition and in defiance of the plain intent of the constitution as it now stands, a government with vast and centralized authority over the economic life of the nation.

"On that issue the Post-Dispatch, believing as it does in an economy of free enterprise, under the political forms of our federal system of government, cannot support Mr. Roosevelt for reëlection to the presidency. . . .

Constitution at Stake.

"The question, to repeat, is whether we shall continue under the present constitutional system—a system of which free competition is an integral and necessary part—or whether we shall substitute for it a federal burocracy with the unrestrained power to impose its fiats upon the daily affairs of the citizen. Such a burocracy not only destroys economic freedom but must, in the end, if it is to succeed, destroy political freedom.

"While opposing the reëlection of Mr. Roosevelt, we give him full credit for the courage he displayed in the dark days of March, 1933; full credit for high minded and patriotic endeavor to improve the lot of common man. . . .

Urges Roosevelt Defeat.

"In advocating the defeat of Mr. Roosevelt, the Post-Dispatch does not shut its eyes to the evils of the old guardism repudiated by the voters in 1932. There must be no return to the conditions that produced such evils as the Teapot Dome scandal, the unconscionable Hawley-Smoot tarif, the speculative excesses of the Coolidge 'new era,' the wholesale defrauding of investors, the control and abuse of the national credit by Wall street. . . .

"As an independent newspaper, committed to neither the Democratic nor the Republican party, the Post-Dispatch holds itself free to criticize the views and acts of Gov. Landon both as a candidate and as President if he should be elected."

MURPHY FORCES WIN IN MICHIGAN CONVENTION TILT

Their Entire Slate Picked by Democrats.

Battle Creek, Mich., Sept. 26.—[Special.]—The forces of Frank Murphy, high commissioner of the Philippines, who is the Democratic nominee for governor of Michigan, swept to a complete victory in the state Democratic convention here today when their complete slate of candidates was elected.

Two conflicts arose in the process of nomination, but Murphy and his backers won a decisive victory in both instances. Charles F. Hemans of Lansing, an anti-Murphy candidate who was placed in nomination for attorney general in opposition to Raymond W. Starr of Grand Rapids, was defeated, receiving only 85 out of the convention's 734 votes.

George T. Gundry of Flint, Genesee county clerk, received the auditor general nomination after four other candidates withdrew when it appeared certain that Gundry would be chosen.

Upper Peninsula Men Lose.

The other candidates included Earl Lafranier of Norway, James K. Jamison of Ontonagon, and Richard B. Stack of Escanaba, all from the upper peninsula. The fourth was Harold G. McLee of Battle Creek.

Supporters of the upper peninsula men pleaded for the convention to maintain a tradition which they said had been carried out for the last 28 years in picking the auditor general nominee from the upper peninsula.

The Murphy forces took the position that the upper peninsula was given sufficient representation on the Democratic ticket by Prentiss M. Brown of St. Ignace, United States congressman, who received the Democratic nomination for senator in the Michigan primary on Sept. 15.

State Senator Case Wins.

State Senator Leon D. Case of Watervliet was nominated unanimously for secretary of state, the office which the supporters of George Welsh of Grand Rapids had proposed for Welsh.

Theodore I. Fry, state treasurer for two terms and one of two elected Democrats now in state office, was renominated by acclamation without opposition.

Burt D. Chandler of Hudson was nominated by acclamation to fill a vacancy of justice of the State Supreme court.

Attorney George J. Burke of Ann Arbor, in the keynote address this morning, said the Democratic state administration of Michigan from January of 1933 to January of 1935 was one of the best administrations that the state ever had.

Burke predicted that Roosevelt will carry Michigan and that Murphy will be elected governor.

BIG ROCK PLOW CONTEST WON BY WHEATLAND MAN

The 42d annual plowing contest held yesterday at Big Rock, twelve miles west of Aurora, under the auspices of the Big Rock Plowing association, was won by Carl Shoger of Wheatland, who scored a total of 90½ points. Second prize was won by Otto Mueller of Naperville, who was only one-half point behind Shoger with a total of 90 points.

The contest, which was held on the farm of Clyde Shaw, drew a throng of 5,000 persons despite the fact that it rained most of the afternoon. Tractor drawn plows were used in the main event which was won by Shoger, a five time winner of the annual event. Points were awarded for uniformity, neatness, and straightness in plowing.

Mont Morris of Big Rock won first prize in the contest for horse drawn plows. In the boys' division of the contest with tractor plows, Donnie Morris, son of Mort Morris, won first prize over Clarence Shoger, son of Carl Shoger, by a score of 86 to 85.

LOST DOG TURNS UP; COURT WON'T TURN HIM OVER

Several months ago Osborne D. Moore, 3021 Wilson avenue, lost his dog. Glenn D. Banks, 50 years old, 2151 Vilas place, found it, gave it a good home and expensive hospital and veterinarian care when the dog fell ill. Last week Moore recognized the dog, a Boston bull, as it was walking beside Mrs. Banks. Mrs. Banks told him to see her husband about his claim but Moore obtained a warant charging larceny and produced the dog's pedigree and bill of sale.

"There is no evidence of larceny," ruled Judge Joseph A. Grabe in Town Hall court when the case came up yesterday. "I would suggest a writ of replevin to recover the dog. I also think the dog's board bill and medical expenses should be paid to the man caring for him."

The dog left court contentedly with Banks after wagging his tail in friendly fashion when Moore petted him.

Second Pair in U. S.

Timothy and Amelia, a pair of young musk oxen whose principal trait is an aversion to mankind in general, arrived at the Chicago Zoological park in Brookfield yesterday.

Captured for the zoological society in Greenland by Capt. Robert A. Bartlett, arctic explorer, they are the second pair in captivity in the United States. The other two are in the Boston zoo.

Timothy, who is about 30 inches tall, weighs 150 pounds, while Amelia weighs 125. Full grown musk oxen, Director Edward H. Bean said, often attain a weight of 1,200 pounds. They have thick, brownish wool, except for their white faces and legs. Their legs are short and heavy, with cleft hooves.

The pair arrived at the zoo in an express car, but calmly ignored Director Bean's offers of hospitality, preferring the hay they had in their car. They will be placed, he said, in the deer yard.

France Raids Spanish Rebel Headquarters; Seizes Five

SAINT JEAN DE LUZ, France, Sept. 26.—(AP)—French police tonight raided a villa which they described as the Spanish insurgent headquarters in France. They arrested five persons and seized a number of documents, including a quantity of Spanish Fascist propaganda. The villa is owned by a Frenchman, Count Berneville. Those arrested were released after names had been taken.

MANY MORE DIE IN NEW REBEL AIR RAID ON BILBAO

Ten Fascist Planes Bomb City All Day.

[Copyright: 1936: By the Associated Press.]

BILBAO, Spain, Sept. 26.—A Fascist aerial armada again hurled death and destruction today in a bombardment of this Spanish coastal city. Many buildings were set afire and the streets resounded with the cries of citizens demanding death for rebel sympathizers.

Ten rebel warplanes roared over the city in a day long attack, the second in 24 hours. Bombardment from the air was apparently the sequel to Fascist warnings that the city would be destroyed unless its government defenders surrendered.

The bombers dropped leaflets that the attack would continue until the surrender was forced, to which Socialist commanders of the city's militia hurled defiant replies.

Mobs Hamper Defenders.

Disorder hampered the defenders. Mobs surged through the streets demanding death for 3,900 Fascist hostages held in prison ships in the harbor. Sixty were killed last night.

Basque nationalists, striving to prevent looting and unchecked mob rule, patroled the city. But Eliadore de la Tore, chief of the Basque troops, promised the crowds they would be given the satisfaction they demanded—death for the hostages to avenge the death of citizens killed in the bombardments.

Firemen battled to check fires ignited by the bombers and dragged from the flaming wreckage the mangled bodies of the dead. Militiamen counted 126 dead in yesterday's attack. There were many more bodies in the wreckage, they said, and today's renewal of the bombardment added to the toll.

Warships Rush to Rescue.

The first naval battle of the civil war appeared imminent as five government warships were reported steaming at full speed to northern ports blockaded by Fascist vessels.

Naval authorities here said a foreign warship had sighted a government fleet off the Portuguese coast, racing toward Spain's northern Bay of Biscay shore. The five ships were reported to be the battleship Jaime I., the cruisers Cervantes and Libertad, and two destroyers.

Three government submarines and one gunboat already are based at Bilbao. With the arrival of the main fleet they are expected to try to lift the insurgent blockade here and at Santander.

The Fascist battleship Espana, the cruiser Almirante Cervera, and the destroyer Velasco have been ranging between the two cities.

SERB BANKS HIT SCHEME TO CUT PEASANTS' DEBTS

[Copyright: 1936: By the New York Times.]

BELGRADE, Jugo-Slavia, Sept. 26.—The government's scheme for reducing peasant indebtedness, published tonight, brought protests from bankers, who contend most banks will be forced to close. Big banks are already calling in credits from smaller banks, which seem doomed.

From every amount loaned 25 per cent has to be wiped out and written off as a bad debt. Another 25 per cent has to be written off in exchange for 3 per cent government contributions to alleviate peasant indebtedness. The discountable value of $250 of such bonds will be about $100.

The peasant would pay off the remaining half of his debt in ten to twenty years, with interest varying from nothing to 4½ per cent, to the State Agricultural bank. The cash value of a $1,000 debt would not be above $250, the bankers say, and small banks with capital invested in peasant advances would find their capital reduced 75 per cent.

Woman, 56, Leaps to Death from 6th Floor of Hospital

Miss Abbie Doyle, 56 years old, 2236 West 72d street, leaped to her death yesterday from a sixth floor window of the County hospital, where she was a patient. The screams of four other women patients in the ward drew the attention of Dr. James Reynolds, an interne, but he arrived too late to prevent the leap. She was admitted to the hospital Wednesday.

erate way in which he worked, and his nerve in coming down low to draw a bead on his target.

This morning they got him—a rebel pursuit plane shot him down in a thrilling air duel over Torrijos. All the way up to the front I was greeted with happy cries of "We got the Ruso."

A loyalist pursuit plane also was shot down during the day.

This was good news for everybody, including myself. I was glad they had gotten the "Ruso." This afternoon as I cowered in a ditch alongside the road with bare, flat fields on either side while a squadron of nine loyalist planes bombed a battery a couple of hundred yards away. They were flying very high and they only dropped one bomb apiece. Possibly they were impressed by the wreckage of the "Ruso's" plane lying in plain sight below them.

[Copyright: 1936: By the Associated Press.]

MADRID, Sept. 26.—The Spanish government army, launching vicious air and land attacks against Fascists marching toward Toledo, tonight asserted it has "annihilated" one Moorish column and captured huge quantities of insurgent war materials.

Artillery and gas masks were seized, the Madrid government said, and "the enemy is being forced back slowly but surely."

An artillery squadron and government aerial bombers poured heavy fire into Bargas, five miles from Toledo. Infantry attacked from three sides in an effort to force the Fascist enemy to retreat westward, toward their Talavera base.

The government armies continued to shell Maqueda and Torrijos along the highway toward Toledo, while Fascist defenders of the Alcazar resisted a new attempt to storm that battered fortress.

Hope to Lift Blockade.

The Madrid government kept close watch today on developments in Geneva, where it was hoped Foreign Minister Julio Alvarez Del Vayo might be able to persuade the league of nations to lift the blockade by European powers keeping arms from Spain.

If this effort failed, it was said, it was hoped Del Vayo would at least obtain promises that steps would be taken to prevent the Fascists from receiving assistance from Germany, Italy, and Portugal.

The government ordered investigations of alleged issuance of false passports by some foreign legations. Two clerks in the Cuban embassy were arrested, charged with selling Cuban nationalization to a number of Spaniards for 1,500 pesetas each.

Barcelona dispatches said a political crisis within the government of autonomous Catalonia had been solved with the formation of a new administration which included Republicans, Syndicalists, Socialists, and communists. Republicans had been excluded from the previous cabinet, which was headed by Juan Casanovas, president of the Catalonian parliament.

Families of Officials Flee.

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, Sept. 26.—(AP)—Families of members of the Madrid cabinet have taken refuge in the Argentine embassy, it was reported here tonight. Reliable sources said President Manuel Azana himself had asked to be taken aboard an Argentine warship.

President Azana's wife, the daughter of War Minister Indalecio Prieto, and other relatives of the cabinet, informed sources here said, were among those given protection by the Argentine embassy.

They were being taken to the port of Alicante to board an Argentine cruiser, it was stated. Detailed information from Argentine diplomats was lacking, however, and the actual situation in Madrid was in doubt.

[Rigid censorship prevented reference to the Madrid cabinet members and their reported action in news dispatches. Uncensored dispatches from Madrid have hinted at growing dissatisfactio.. with the conduct of the war expressed by anarchist and Syndicalist supporters of the Madrid government.]

Report Cordoba Siege Broken.

BURGOS, Spain, Sept. 27.—[Sunday]—(AP)—The Fascist headquarters here reported today that the government's siege of insurgent-held Cordoba had been broken with the defeat of 2,000 militiamen by an insurgent column at Espejo. The announcement said 80 government soldiers had been killed in the encounter in southern Spain. Espejo is southeast of Cordoba.

SPAIN APOLOGIZES TO URUGUAY FOR SLAYING OF THREE SISTERS

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Sept. 26.—(AP)—The Uruguayan chancellory announced tonight that it had received from the Spanish government full apologies for the deaths of three Uruguayan women which last Tuesday caused severance of diplomatic relations between the two governments. The chancellory said the Madrid government had promised severe punishment for those responsible for the reported executions of Dolores, Consuelo and Maria Aguiar, sisters of an honorary Uruguayan vice counsul in Madrid.

SIMON, BRITISH LEADER, BLASTS DICTATORSHIPS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 26. — Sir John Simon, home secretary, warned against dictatorship and those preaching it in an address before the National Liberals today at Perth.

"Communists preach communism, Fascists preach Fascism," said Simon. "They rave at one another and give the police a great deal of trouble, but both want the same thing—both want to get rid of democratic self-government in favor of dictatorship of one sort or another.

"Both seek to establish domination over those they do not like. The first thing to observe about communism and Fascism is that both are foreign products. Who is there fit to be dictator in this free country? We have no quarrel with other countries because they adopt either communism or Fascism, but the plain fact is that communism and Fascism are equally opposed to democratic self-government. When we see the violence and confusion which a clash between these doctrines has produced in some other lands, we are determined to give them no sort of encouragement here."

ACT TO BAR RED ORGAN FROM MAIL IN PHILIPPINES

MANILA, Sept. 26.—(AP)—Charging that Socialism Today, monthly organ of the Philippine friends of the soviet union, is attempting to foment rebellion, Secretary of Justice Jose Yulo informed the commonwealth post-office department that the publication should be barred from the mails.

"It cannot be doubted," the secretary said, "that the principal objective of the publication is to disseminate information intended to inculcate the communistic theories prevailing in Russia in the minds of the laboring class, and incite labor to struggle against these classes whom they consider inimical to their interests."

Pedro Abad Santos, editor of Socialism Today, replied that the right of revolution is inherent in a people. He asserted that the editors of the publication are law abiding citizens of the Philippines.

MAURICE L ROTHSCHILD

MINNEAPOLIS — State at Jackson, Chicago — ST. PAUL

LANDON PLEDGES SECURE OLD AGE AT MILWAUKEE

New Deal Act Is Called a Fraud on Worker.

sion plan," he said, "we must repeal the compulsory insurance plan. The Republican party is pledged to do this. The Republican party will have nothing to do with any plan that involves prying into the personal working records of tewnty-six million people."

"Day dreams," he said, "do not pay pensions." Of the old age pension feature he said: "It is a glaring example of the bungling and waste that have characterized this administration's attempts to fulfill its benevolent purposes."

He pointed out that the act excludes the farmers, farm laborers and domestic servants. The governor's proposals for farm relief at Des Moines would appear to fill this first gap.

Coming to the actual provisions of the law, Gov. Landon said: "Under the compulsory insurance plan of the present law, none of our old people will get any pension at all until 1942. If you happen to be one of those insured—and remember half of our workers are not—you have to earn on the average $125 a month every single month for the next 20 years to get a monthly pension of $37.50. And you have to earn $125 a month every single month for the next 45 years to get a pension of $59.38 a month."

Start Taxation in January.

Beginning next January, he said, employers must start deducting taxes from pay envelopes and turn them over to the government.

It is "the largest tax bill in history," he said. "To call it social security is a fraud on the working man."

J. P. Wood of Janesville introduced Wiley, who had waited in the wings, because, as it was explained, he had "missed the signal."

"Where's Landon?" yelled a man.

"Give us Kohler," the crowd yelled.

Former Gov. Walter Kohler, who was on the stage, stepped up to make an impromptu speech.

"I am not a candidate for anything," he said. "I am a worker in the ranks and we are going to elect Landon and Knox and the state ticket as well. Wisconsin is normally a Republican state. Several times it has strayed from the path and it has been a mistake each time. This year it is coming back where it belongs and we are going to give an extraordinary vote to Landon."

The crowd cheered.

Warns of Peril to Liberty.

A warning that Americans must be on their guard if individual liberties under our democratic form of government are not to be lost here as in other parts of the world was given by Gov. Landon today as he continued his presidential campaign trip through Wisconsin. He spoke there and at Fond du Lac, Watertown, Madison, and Waukesha on his way to Milwaukee.

At Madison, the state capitol and seat of the state university, Gov. Landon emphasized academic freedom.

"Let me emphasize particularly the importance of educational freedom," Gov. Landon said. "The great University of Wisconsin is known throughout the nation for its academic freedom.

A "Priceless Asset."

"This freedom of education has been one of the priceless assets of American life. It has been one of the great unifying forces of our national life. It has helped to train the people for our kind of government. It has maintained democracy at the grass roots. Many examples could be cited of progressive policies in government and in business which have had their origin in our educational institutions.

"Education usually can be counted upon to encourage change when change means progress. This is as it should be. But we may as well face the fact that the tide is running against free government today in many lands, the hand of government is closing down upon education. It is being made into a tool for autocratic purposes.

"In these days of widespread propaganda it is imperative that our teachers be kept free and that our educational institutions, our newspapers, and the radio be kept independent either from control of autocratic government or from the influence of any selfish interest.

"We must ever remember that academic freedom, political freedom, religious freedom, and freedom of speech and freedom of opportunity are all bound up together. Infringement upon one will soon lead to infringement upon the others. In fighting to maintain our freedom we will make greatest progress by fighting for the freedom of all.

"In this great nation we must strive to maintain an educational policy that will show the way in maintaining the American way of life and American opportunities. In spite of our past mistakes and any inequalities, we have provided freedom and opportunity unequaled anywhere else. Let us continue to train our citizens for such a way of life and for the responsibilities which go with it."

Asks Only Steady Work.

Wisconsin Republicans in changing groups traveled across the state with him. Among those on the train was Edgar H. Good of Minocqua, chairman of the Young Republicans in the state.

"I'm working in this campaign because I want to get back to railroading," said Good. "I am a member of the Order of Railway Conductors. I have had no regular work for several years. Until business is good and stays good, I won't be called back. When the government at Washington quits scaring business to death we'll be on our way. So I am in this fight to the finish.

"I bought a decorator's business when I couldn't be kept busy at railroading. The government soon put me out of that. Small jobs that should have been awarded to us little fellows were taken over as public projects. Soon all my money was gone. I'm in politics because I think the quickest way for me to get back to steady railroading is to help elect Gov. Landon as President."

TEXT OF GOV. ALF M. LANDON'S MILWAUKEE SPEECH ON "SOCIAL SECURITY"

"I am going to talk tonight about economic security—economic security for the men and women obliged to earn their daily bread through their own daily labor. There is no question that is of deeper concern to us all. Even in good times there is ever present in the minds of workers the fear of unemployment. In periods of deep depression there is the fear of protracted idleness. And always, in prosperity and in depression, there is the ever present dread of a penniless old age.

"From the standpoint of the individual I know of no more intensely human problem than that of economic security. From the standpoint of the government there is no problem calling more for a sympathetic understanding and the best efforts of heart and mind. But to solve the problem we must have more than a warm heart and a generous impulse. We must have the capacity and the determination to translate our feelings into a practical, workable program. Daydreams do not pay pensions.

Two Ways of Approach.

"Now in broad terms there are two ways to approach the development of a program of economic security. One is to assume that human beings are improvident—that it is necessary to have the stern management of a paternal government to force them to provide for themselves—that it is proper for the government to force them to save for their old age. The other approach is to recognize that in an industrial nation some people are unable to provide for their old age—that it is a responsibility of society to take care of them.

"The act passed by the present administration is based upon the first of these approaches. It assumes that Americans are irresponsible. It assumes that old age pensions are necessary because Americans lack the foresight to provide for their old age. I refuse to accept any such judgment of my fellow citizens.

Pensions Matter of Justice.

"I believe that as a nation we can afford old age pensions—that in a highly industrialized country they are necessary. I believe in them as a matter of social justice.

"Because of my firm belief in the justice, necessity, and feasibility of old age pensions, I am going to discuss the present act with the utmost frankness. It is a glaring example of the bungling and waste that have characterized this administration's attempts to fulfill its benevolent purposes. It endangers the whole cause of social security in this country. In my own judgment—and I have examined it most carefully—this law is unjust, unworkable, stupidly drafted, and wastefully financed.

"Broadly speaking, the act is divided into three main sections. One deals with compulsory old age insurance. It applies to about one-half of our working population. It excludes, among others, farmers and farm laborers and domestic servants.

Forces States to Act.

"Another part of the act attempts to force states to adopt unemployment insurance systems.

"The third part of the act provides old age pensions for those in need who do not come under the compulsory plan.

"Now let us look at the so-called old age insurance plan in more detail, and on a dollars and cents basis. In other words, let us see just how much the old people of this country are going to get, when they are going to get it, and who is going to pay for it. Here we are dealing—not with opinions—but with hard facts, with the provisions of the law.

"Under the compulsory insurance plan of the present law none of our old people will get any pension at all until 1942. If you happen to be one of those insured—and remember about half of our workers are not—you have to earn, on the average, $125.00 a month every single month for the next twenty years to get a monthly pension of $37.50. And you have to earn $125.00 a month every single month for the next 45 years to get a pension of $59.38 a month. Besides—these sums have to support both the worker and his wife.

26 Million Will Pay.

"But, meanwhile, beginning on Jan. 1 of next year, 26 million working people begin paying taxes to provide these pensions. Beginning next January employers must start deducting these taxes from the pay envelopes of their employés and turn them over to the government. Beginning next January employers must, in addition, begin paying taxes on the pay rolls out of which your wages are to come. This is the largest tax bill in history. And to call it 'Social Security' is a fraud on the workingman.

"These taxes start at the rate of $2 in taxes for every $100 of wages. They increase until it is $6 in taxes for every $100 in wages. We are told that this $6 will be equally divided between the employer and the employé. But this is not so, and for a very simple reason. The actual fact will be, in almost every case, that the whole tax will be borne either by the employé or by the consumer through higher prices. That is the history of all such taxes. This is because the tax is imposed in such a way that if the employer is to stay in business he must shift the tax to some one else.

Tax on Employment.

"Do not forget this: Such an excessive tax on pay rolls is beyond question a tax on employment. In prosperous times it slows down the advance of wages and holds back reëmployment. In bad times it increases unemployment, and unemployment breaks wage scales. The Republican party rejects any feature of any plan that hinders reëmployment.

"Yet it is solely by such a tax that the plan of this administration is financed. Its entire cost is to be raised by a 3 per cent tax on wages and a 3 per cent tax on pay rolls. I do not see how any one can believe that the average man making $100 a month should be compelled to save 3 per cent of his wages. Certainly he is not in a position to save 6 per cent of his wages.

Inequality of Taxes.

"One more sample of the injustice of this law is this. Some workers who come under this new federal insurance plan are taxed more and get less than workers who come under the state laws already in force. For instance: Under the new law many workers now 50 years old must pay burdensome taxes for the next 15 years in order to receive a pension when they are 65; whereas those of the same age who come under some state laws pay no taxes and yet actually get a larger pension when they reach the age of 65.

"These are a few reasons why I called this law unjust and stupidly drafted!

"There is a further important point in connection with the compulsory saving provided by the plan of the present administration. According to this plan our workers are forced to save for a lifetime. What happens to their savings? The administration's theory is that they go into a reserve fund—that they will be invested at interest and that in due time this interest will help pay the pensions. The people who drew this law understand nothing of government finance.

Process Step by Step.

"Let us trace the process step by step. The workers' cash comes into the treasury. What is done with it? The law requires the treasury to buy government bonds. What happens when the treasury buys government bonds? Well, at present, when there is a deficit the treasury gives the treasury some nice new bonds in exchange for the cash which the treasury gives the treasury. Now what happens to the cash that the treasury gives the treasury? The answer is painfully simple. We have good spenders at Washington, and they spend the cash that the treasury gives the treasury.

"Now I know all this sounds silly, but it happens to be an accurate recital of what this administration has been foolish enough to enact into law.

"Let me explain it in another way—in the simple terms of the family budget. The father of the family is a kindly man, so kindly that he borrows all he can to add to the family's pleasure. At the same time he impresses upon his sons and daughters the necessity of saving for their old age. Every month they bring 6 per cent of their wages to him so that he may act as trustee and invest their savings for their old age.

Presents His I. O. U.

"The father decides that the best investment is his own I. O. U. So every month he puts aside in a box his I. O. U. carefully executed, and, moreover, bearing interest at 3 per cent. And every month he spends the money that his children bring him, partly in meeting his regular expenses, and the rest in various experiments that fascinate him. Years pass—the children grow old—the day comes when they have to open their father's box. What do they find? Roll after roll of neatly executed I. O. U.'s

"I am not exaggerating the folly of this legislation. The saving it forces on our workers is a cruel hoax.

"There is every probability that the cash they pay in will be used for current deficits and new extravagances. We are going to have trouble enough to carry out an economy program without having the treasury flush with money drawn from the workers. Personally, I do not want the treasury flush with funds—funds which the trustee can mingle with its own general funds. I want the treasury to be in a position where it must consider every penny it spends.

New Taxes Required.

"I want the secretary of the treasury to be obliged to say to committees of congress every time a new appropriation is proposed, 'Gentlemen, you will have to provide some new taxes if you do this.' With this social security money alone running into billions of dollars, all restraint on congress will be off. Maybe some people want that, but I don't!

"And even if the budget is balanced, the fact that there is a billion dollars and more of extra cash on hand each year that can be made instantly available for any purpose by issuing special bonds to the trust funds is too great a temptation.

"The temptation is further increased by another provision of the law—that provision relating to how much of the cash collected will be paid out in pensions. During the next ten years only ten cents out of every dollar collected from the workers will be paid out as benefits. And from now until 1950 only sixteen cents out of every dollar will be paid out as benefits. The workers asked for a pension and all they have received is just another tax.

Keeping Records Big Task.

"There is one more point that I want to mention about the compulsory old age pension system. That is the question of keeping records. The administration is preparing a plan, the exact nature of which we shall not know until after the election, for keeping the life records of twenty-six millions of our working people.

"These records are necessary because the amount of the pension any one is to receive depends upon how much he has earned after the act goes into effect. The record must show every job a man has, and every dollar he earns so long as he is working at something that brings him under the plan. If he is working in a factory and changes to another factory a government agent must keep track of him.

"Imagine the vast army of clerks which will be necessary to keep these records. Another army of field investigators will be necessary to check up on the people whose records are not clear, or regarding whom current information is not coming in. And so burocracy will grow and grow, and federal snooping flourish.

Would Abandon Plan.

"To get a workable old age pension plan we must repeal the present compulsory insurance plan. The Republican party is pledged to do this. The Republican party will have nothing to do with any plan that involves prying into the personal working records of twenty-six million people.

"Before discussing the positive part of our program, however, I want to take up the second main feature of the present act, the part dealing with unemployment insurance.

"The problem of unemployment insurance differs fundamentally from that of old age pensions. Old age pensions were reasonably well established in a number of states even prior to the passage of the social security act. Federal grants to states to supplement state old age pensions do not differ from the practice followed for years—the practice of making grants to states to supplement and encourage projects for the general welfare!

New Kind of Insurance.

"Unemployment insurance is something new and of a different character. We have never had unemployment insurance in this country. With the exception of two states, and their laws are of recent origin, there were no unemployment insurance laws on the statute books of our states before the social security law.

"Under these circumstances for the federal government to step in and to use its taxing power to compel all of the states immediately to enact unemployment insurance statutes is something unheard of. It is most unwise. There is no element of real help to the states in the present statute. There is merely compulsion. It completely ignores what has been of priceless value to us—the use of the states as experimental workshops in which new methods and policies may be tried out and gradually perfected.

Would Encourage States.

"The Republican platform proposes to encourage adoption by the states of honest and practical measures for meeting the problems of insurance against unemployment. It does so because we recognize that we live on a continent with a wide range of working conditions and standards of living. It does so because we have still nearly everything to learn in this field.

"With state experiments different states trying out different plans and watching the results we shall work out a much better system than could possibly be imposed at this time from Washington. The impatient advocates of almost every social reform are disposed to seek the short cut to federal action rather than to wait for the slower but more certain progress achieved under state auspices. If a state makes a mistake the effect is local and limited. With state action we avoid mistakes involving the whole country. As Woodrow Wilson said of state action, it 'has given speed, facility, vigor, and certainty to the progress of our economic and political growth.'

Cites Wisconsin Program.

"It is urged that competition among industrial states will prevent state action in this field. But forward looking states like your own have been disproving this for twenty-five years.

"This brings us to the third main feature of the present act—the section dealing with pensions for the needy aged not covered by the compulsory insurance plan. This part of the present law can be made to serve as the foundation of a real old age pension plan. This the Republican party proposes to do. It proposes to overhaul this section and make of it a workable, common sense plan—a plan to be administered by the states.

"We propose through amendments to this section to provide for every American citizen over 65 the supplementary payment necessary to give a minimum income sufficient to protect him or her from want.

Drafted in Haste.

"Frankly, I am not in a position to state with finality the total cost of this plan. One of the most serious criticisms to be made of the present social security act is the haste with which it was constructed and the inadequate knowledge on which it rests. I do not intend to repeat this error. I have been studying this problem closely for the last year and a half, and I have had the benefit of the opinions of many close students of these problems.

"Elaborate computations of the probable costs have been prepared for me. And while I am not willing to accept these computations as final, it is clear from them that the plan which we propose will be much less expensive than the plan of the present administration—because we will not create a needless reserve fund of 47 billion dollars.

"Our plan will be a pay-as-you-go basis, with the result that we will know year by year just what our pensions are costing us. That is sound, common sense financing!

Three Essential Principles.

"There is one other point I want to impress upon you. This is the question of raising the money to pay the pensions. The precise method of taxation used will depend upon the decision of congress working in coöperation with the treasury. But there are three essential principles which should be complied with:

"The necessary funds should be raised by means of a special tax earmarked for this purpose, so that the already difficult problem of budget balancing may not be further complicated. The tax should be direct and visible. And the tax should be widely distributed.

"Only if every member of the great body of our citizens is conscious of his share of the cost can we hope to resist the constant pressure to increase pensions to the point where the burden will be unbearable; only if every one bears his just share can we hope to prevent the plan being used for political purposes.

Liberality for Aged.

"If we will prevent such exploitation and if we will put the plan on a sound financial basis, we can afford to be liberal to our old people. If the present compulsory insurance plan remains in force our old people are only too apt to find the cupboard bare.

"Let me repeat! I am a profound believer in the justice and necessity of old age pensions. My criticism of the present act is not that its purpose is bad. It is that this act will involve a cruel disappointment for those of our people least able to bear the shock of disappointment.

"To these—our old people, our workers struggling for better conditions, our infirm—I will not promise the moon. I promise only what I know can be performed: Economy, a living pension, and such security as can be provided by a generous people."

LOWDEN ESTATE IN READINESS FOR VISIT OF LANDON

Ex-Governor Arranges for Parley Today.

Sinnissippi Farm, Oregon, Ill., Sept. 26.—(AP)—Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois and "elder statesman of the Republican party," personally supervised preparations on his 4,500 acre estate today for his Sunday conference with Gov. Alf M. Landon, the Republican presidential nominee.

"I can't say what we'll talk about," Lowden, now in his 75th year, told reporters, but it was generally understood their parley would concern the farm problem and the campaign to win the pivotal states in the corn belt.

Plans to Stump for Landon.

Another topic concerned the addresses Lowden plans to make in the midwest in support of Landon's agricultural program. The first of these has been tentatively fixed for Oct. 6 at Waterloo, Ia. At the last meeting of the two, in the Chicago home of George Harding, Illinois Republican national committeeman, earlier this month, Lowden said, "I hope to show Gov. Landon some good corn when he comes to the farm."

The hope, he explained today, will be realized.

"One of the tenants told me this morning," the former governor said, "that sampling indicated a yield of better than 80 bushels to the acre in one large field."

Village Is All Agog.

In Oregon, population 2,900, the approaching visit of the presidential candidate was an engrossing topic of discussion. It is the seat of Ogle county, a strongly Republican section.

Numerous business houses will be closed Monday morning so employés may line the road leading from Lowden's estate to Byron, where the candidate will entrain on his return to Topeka.

It was understood that only a few members of the Landon party would accompany the governor to Sinnissippi farm, while the remainder would go to Rockford, 17 miles north, for the week-end.

TAX OFFICE OPEN TODAY; DEADLINE ON '35 TOMORROW

As an accommodation to those who have not paid their 1935 personal property tax and the first instalment of their 1935 real estate taxes, the office of the County Treasurer in the County building will remain open until 3:30 o'clock today, according to Treasurer Joseph L. Gill. The final deadline for such payments, Mr. Gill pointed out, is midnight tomorrow, after which penalties will be assessed.

Yesterday's tax payments amounted to $3,307,125, the largest total for any one day since the collection of 1935 taxes began a month ago, said George Hagenauer, chief auditor in the treasurer's office. The total collected against the 1935 levy of $185,336,646 is now $27,897,909, which is approximately 15 per cent of the levy.

PARK POLICEMAN FIRED FOR ASKING BRIBE OF AUTOIST

Fred B. Oeff, 36 years old, 2720 Ballou street, a park district policeman, has been discharged by the civil service commission for attempting to extort money from a motorist, Robert J. Dunham, president of the district, announced yesterday. According to the charges Oeff, a member of the west division force, stopped a driver on Aug. 20 for speeding at 56 miles an hour. The offender was permitted to proceed after promising to leave money in a nearby cigar store for Oeff. The names of the motorist and his three passengers were withheld. C. L. Hildebrandt, another policeman who accompanied Oeff, was suspended for 30 days for failure to make the arrest. He had no part in the extortion attempt, Dunham said.

Sells Liquor to Girls, 15; Tavern Owner Fined $25

Felix Sedgewick, 39 years old, manager of a tavern at 2449 West North avenue, was fined $25 yesterday by Judge Joseph B. Hermes in Women's court on a charge of selling liquor to three 15 year old girls. The bartender, Ray Aldridge, 30 years old, 1451 North Artesian avenue, and a waitress, Miss Stella Wianki, 26 years old, 2451 West North avenue, were each fined $5.

KILLING CLIMAX TO AUTO TRYST; ESCORT IS HELD

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 26.—[U. P.]—Authorities today held Eugene Fulzenzi for questioning following the fatal shooting last night of Mrs. Frank Osburn, 37, while the couple sat in Fulgenzi's automobile near the city limits.

Fulgenzi said he shot Mrs. Osburn in self-defense. He asserted she had first picked up his revolver and shot him once through one hand. Mrs. Osburn was shot three times in the neck and once in the side.

Frank Osburn, husband of the victim, told the police his wife left home early in the evening, saying she was going to play cards. He next saw her in the morgue. State's Attorney Alfred H. Greening has not decided what to do.

Fulgenzi, authorities said, admitted he had "an affair" with Mrs. Osburn for several years.

Greening said Fulgenzi told him he always carried a gun when with Mrs. Osburn.

Daughter, Spanked for Late Hours, Takes Poison

Chastised in the old fashioned way by her father for returning home late, Miss Bernice Jagodka, 20 years old, of 1517 North Paulina street swallowed a quantity of poison early today. She was taken to the West North Avenue hospital. Although her condition was considered serious, doctors said she probably would recover. According to police, her father, Andrew Jagodka, a candy company employé, spanked Bernice after she had come home at a late hour.

Caught in Chase After He Robs Girl of $148, Purse

Morris Musick, 30 years old, who has a criminal record dating back to 1923, was seized yesterday in a short chase after he had snatched the purse and a $148 pay roll from Miss Helen Kysilka, 23 years old, as she entered the offices of John Lawrie & Sons, 515 South Franklin street, where she is the bookkeeper. John Coronato, 2119 Grenshaw street, elevator operator, gave chase and caught Musick in front of 507 South Wells street.

ROOSEVELT ASSAILED FOR HIS POLITICAL USE OF CRISIS OVER FRANCE

Chairman John Hamilton of the Republican national committee charged yesterday that Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau had taken advantage of the French monetary crisis to announce a change of Roosevelt policy "to forestall further Republican criticism of the short-sighted policy hitherto pursued."

To bring out the change in policy he quoted from Morgenthau's announcement of the French-Anglo-American agreement as being aimed "to maintain the greatest possible equilibrium in the system of international exchange."

Then he quoted from President Roosevelt's message to the London Economic conference in 1933 as follows:

"The world will not long be lulled by the specious fallacy of achieving a temporary and probably an artificial stability in foreign exchange on the part of a few large countries only."

Hamilton said it would be "unkind to quote that part of President Roosevelt's telegram in which he insists upon the necessity of balanced budgets."

"It was the most amazing thing! I'd heard something about this PhotoReflex way of taking pictures, how you couldn't be camera-shy and all that, so I decided to try it. What a surprise I got! Nothing that even resembled a camera was there to bother me, just a cabinet affair, like an enlarged dressing table, and a series of mirrors. All I did was look in a mirror at myself, I saw for myself what expressions and tilt of the head I liked best, your nice photographer gave the proper lighting, and presto, my pictures were taken! It was really a delightful experience . . . and the pictures were by far the best I'd ever had taken."

THE HOMESTEAD OF THE FREE.

In this Sunday's picture section of THE TRIBUNE is a color reproduction of a stirring painting which catches the true spirit of the Republican campaign.

When James Farley said that Landon was just a governor of a typical prairie state he not only said something, he blew a trumpet call. A cartoon by Mr. Orr was one of the first rejoicing responses of the prairie to the unwitting tribute of a Tammany boss to the spirit of freedom.

Mr. Farley did not know it, but the prairies made the country free when his own organization in New York City was treasonably giving aid and comfort to the cause of slavery.

The prairies gave Abraham Lincoln to the country when the curse of involuntary servitude threatened to spread over the whole face of the land or, if successfully resisted where there were free homes and free labor, wreck the Union in retaliation. The battle for the prairies between people whose society was free and people whose society was planned on enforced labor preceded the war to save the Union.

John Greenleaf Whittier wrote the "Battle Hymn of Freedom," which was then the song of the free people who, rifle in hand, pushed westward to assert that the flag of the United States was the emblem of liberty and was not to wave above bondage. The Republican party was born of the prairies and the homestead of the free.

To many Americans, and the hope is prayerful that it may be a majority, the present campaign is not of merely partisan importance. It is leading to a solemn decision. It is weighted with the future of the United States. The ambitious and imperious men of the New Deal profess their ability and announce their purpose to develop a different and they say a better form of government and order of society than the country has known before.

We see what has come of such ambitions in other countries. Russia may have proved, as Mr. Wallace and Dr. Tugwell say, that planning is possible. Russia does not prove that it is desirable or tolerable. Americans would not willingly live in Russia, Germany, or Italy, where the social order is planned.

Various philosophers say that democracy is no longer a workable political concept. They say that it, like forms which preceded it, has had its day and must yield to the changing requirements of mankind. Americans do not believe that. They believe that willful men have been able to destroy democracy and freedom under government. Not destiny and not force of circumstance and conditions have done this. Dictatorial men have done it and the volume is not closed. We'll see what comes of it, but if it may be avoided we'll not try it here.

The American people never faced a more momentous issue than they must decide in this campaign. Out of the tribulation of a world-wide crisis forces have arisen, armed with the powers of office and the resources exacted from the people, which are determined to destroy the heritage of free America and to build upon its ruins an autocratic government. Against this conspiracy, founded on broken pledges and fraudulent pretenses, all freedom loving Americans are rallying. "We go to set the truth of God against the fraud of man." This is not a campaign. It is a crusade. It is a crusade not only for America but for all peoples aspiring to be free or to preserve what freedom they have won in blood and sacrifice. In the darkness of the world's turmoil and reaction it is a light still shining. May the American people keep it for themselves and their posterity and for the inspiration of all peoples.

ENGLISH COOKS WILL NOW KILL FOREIGNERS.

It seems that the recruiting campaign in England is not going so well as was expected. There is, however, no reason to fear that the fate of Ninevah and Tyre lies just ahead. The makers of England's far-flung empire are back on the job. They are flinging more effectively than ever.

England's cooks, it has been learned on unimpeachable authority, have gone to work by thousands in the munition factories. So says Mrs. Anna Steese Richardson in the Woman's Home Companion. What Britain lacks in man power will therefore be more than balanced by the potency of her munitions. Projectiles of a weight hitherto unimagined will be produced in stupendous quantity. The explosive power of British shells will stun the world. Cowering statesmen will crawl to Downing street begging for peace on any terms. They will eat humble pie. They will risk it, knowing that the cooks were not concerned in its preparation.

The new instruments of annihilation cannot yet be described in detail but their general nature can be adumbrated. A dessert served at a famous inn in the Cotswolds bears the tantalizing name, "Spotted Dog." Even in a sporting arm it is deadly at ranges up to a thousand yards. Dogged does it. Who but an English cook would have discovered the lethal value of cabbage leaves? But then, who but an English cook would have thought of subjecting cabbage leaves to the mercies of a machine used in other lands for forging steering knuckles?

The English cooks sent the younger sons, generation after generation, to colonize the far corners of the earth. With the empire in peril, the cooks are once more doing their bit for king and country. This time there is no suspicion of muddle. It has all been planned in advance. The formulae are in their cook books. When the news gets about the nations will tremble.

"No doubt good cooking is to be found in our country," wrote Mr. E. M. Forster a few weeks ago in a plaintive letter to the editor of the London New Statesman and Nation; "but why must it always be found?"

Mr. Forster should keep his shirt on. Events are looking up. The professional cooks have gone into the munition factories. There is therefore much ground for hope.

THE AUTUMN MINDED.

People who like autumn are in luck. They'll get it, anyway, and to find it melancholy and premonitory is added misfortune. But that's the way the world divides, pro and con on what comes in late September and now is about to claim its place in the sun. In the sun, we hope.

The temperament for autumn is in large part the temperament for winter. A season cannot be genial and cordial, regardless of its beauty, if people regard it as the narrowing path to desolation. In such a contemplation of the season the charms are only mementos of departing pleasures, souvenirs of a dying year, and there is no ecstasy in the flame. The yellow pumpkin is but alas poor Yorick's skull.

The autumn minded, who may contrariwise find their melancholy in spring, or who may be autumn minded because they have hay fever, now stand to greet the coming glory of the land, the peculiar beauty of the North American continent for which has been set aside John McCutcheon's Indian summer. Then also there will be third down, four yards to gain.

It may be observed with some regret that Mr. King's Walt and family are deserting the farm at this time to return to "Gasoline Alley." Mr. King has forced this decision upon them, selfishly, we think, to obtain a change of scene. Now, if ever, would a person who has no farm and never will have one like to enter upon possession, particularly hereabouts where rains have brought a spring green where summer had burned.

The farm should have a wood lot of oaks and maples to color soon. Would it be too much to ask for hickories, butternuts, and walnuts and go nutting? One cannot have everything. There should be, and this is strictly nonpolitical, many sunflowers, the wild ones along the path to the pasture, and the tame—meaning cultivated, not docile—ones in back of the kitchen garden and the bed of zinnias and asters. The frost hasn't yet got the morning glories on the kitchen wall, but there is a touch of scarlet in the maples. We'd better stop here before there's a heart break. Walt and his family will step right out of the strip and make a night trip back to the farm for the autumn.

IN RED BARCELONA.

What has been going on in Barcelona is one of the most important and significant aspects of the Spanish disorder. But it cannot be investigated and reported because the communist and anarchist forces in control have established an iron censorship and it is virtually impossible for any foreign correspondent to get into the region. News of the seizure of power by the Reds and the first atrocities committed came out with the foreigners who escaped in the first days of mob rule and it was enough to make a ghastly picture of what was going on, massacre and the ruthless destruction of property in the richest and most prosperous district of Spain. It was enough to show what the control of the Reds would mean throughout Spain. It would not even mean peace of death produced by the Russian bolsheviks, for the Reds are divided among themselves and the communists and anarchists would carry on the war against each other after all the moderate classes were destroyed.

The story of the Barcelona revolt is of the greatest significance to every people which still retains civilized order, but it cannot yet be told because the forces which are now masters cannot afford to have it disclosed. From what has filtered through before their censorship was perfected the grim tragedy can be constructed in its main outlines, a new warning to all civilized peoples of what Red rule will always mean, blood lust and fanatic tyranny and the ruthless destruction of all the elements which sustain humane society.

THE ORIGIN OF STREAMLINING.

From Maine comes a story that the shipyards at Bath, famous for the construction of war vessels, will secure a contract to build the yacht to defend the America's cup against Challenger T. O. M. Sopwith's Endeavor II. next year. The peculiar advantage possessed by the Maine yard is advanced experience in welding, a new and important factor in ship construction.

While sailing is a bygone occupation, these tests of skill and speed between Britain and America mean much more than sentiment to mankind. Yacht designing is an exacting science that must take advantage of all that man has learned from studies of hull resistance and sail power. The use of alloys has greatly broadened the field. Skin friction is the waste to be conquered, and is just as important in nautical matters as in aerodynamics.

The story may be recalled that when an American clipper, damaged in a gale, sought the services of a British marine railway for repairs, a civic delegation waited on the captain. His permission was asked to copy the beautiful lines of the vessel. Doubtless the efforts were entirely empirical, but American shipbuilders had in reality established the principles of streamlining. It was developed to a science in yacht construction, to find broader usefulness in airplane modeling.

TOWARD STATE SOCIALISM

[From an Editorial in the Commercial and Financial Chronicle.]

Everywhere the system of free enterprise is today being seriously and even violently challenged by those who believe in laying the deadening hand of government interference, regulation, and control upon industry and trade far and wide, or, in the more extreme form to which the whole philosophy of what is vaguely and inaccurately termed "liberalism" definitly leads, general public ownership and operation of all business, and open or disguised control of individual lives. In Russia for years there has existed a system, more or less inclusive, of state socialism although it is called by other names. In such countries as Germany and Italy we have systems which, although they do not as yet involve public ownership throughout the whole range of business, are for practical purposes not very dissimilar to that existing in Russia. That is to say, the central government plans and gives the orders; the citizens obey largely regardless of where property rights theoretically lie. The difference is more of degree than of kind.

Almost everywhere "dictatorships" exist, are threatened, hoped for, or are being averted with difficulty. "Planning" [by government, of course] is a word to conjure with. If present trends continue much longer subsidies will be the rule rather than the exception. Rules, regulations, restrictions, administrative governmental bodies with almost limitless authority abound on all sides. Their name is legion in this country. Even in such traditionally liberty loving countries as Great Britain and Canada movements of the sort have made very appreciable headway. Where such régimes do not owe their origin to revolution or to coups d'état, they have usually had their beginnings in regulation of the so-called natural monopolies, particularly the utilities and the railroad enterprises. In those parts of the world in which the more extreme form of state socialism, or its practical equivalent, has not yet developed, it is this type of enterprise that still most feels the weight of burocratic domination.

We are engaged in a hard and bitter political campaign in which men of common sense are doing their utmost to check the dangerous trend of our public policy toward state socialism, or something closely resembling it. They are engaged with opponents who are fanatically devoted to the "cause," and given to preaching it upon all occasions. They are also engaged with groups whose main purpose in life is that of making political hay whenever the sun shines for even a moment.

The shriveling touch of burocracy is being felt more and more widely and more and more seriously everywhere. Of course the movement has gone much further in some other countries than in the United States. But what others prefer to do is their affair. What happens to us is very much our concern. If the American people believe in liberty and in a system of free business enterprise, and for our part we have no doubt that they do, the individual citizen, whether he is in the utility industry, a farmer, a grocer, a tailor, or a security dealer, cannot for a moment afford to dismiss the issues as the concern of some one else. It may be that the "yard-stick" tomfoolery is for the time being at least championed only in the case of the utilities; that direct and open regulation is applied at this time only to a few industries, and that public ownership as such is for the moment more or less in the background even in regard to the utilities and the railroad companies. But let no one suppose that government interference, burocratic regulation, and the like are by any means confined to these branches in the thought or for that matter the acts of those who dominate the present administration.

So constantly have the numerous "programs" of the New Deal been "explained," and so plausibly have they been expounded, that the average man not versed in such intricate subjects can hardly be censured for not really appreciating the distance we have traveled toward state socialism or toward dictatorship during the last three and a half years alone. What would a Cleveland think of a régime under which gold is an object of confiscation wherever found? What would a Theodore Roosevelt have to say about a system that compels the New York Stock exchange to obtain the approval of a federal bureau before it may de-list a stock which has become entirely worthless? What would a Wilson think of a régime that demanded that an individual citizen obtain a permit from Washington before he could enter the business of buying or selling securities? Would a Bryan see nothing strange in a program that dictates to a Nebraska farmer what he shall and shall not plant in order to avoid the loss of a bounty that his neighbor obtains by taking orders? Would any of us have believed ten years ago that he would live to see the day when there would exist a bureau in Washington endowed [if congress can so endow it] with the right to go into a privately owned plant, hold an "election" among its employés, and tell the management with whom it must "negotiate" about wages and all other questions affecting labor?

Yet these are but a few of the instances that might be cited, and the "planning" bee is still very evidently in political bonnets quite generally. The secretary of agriculture only the other day assured cotton pickers that we must [and by implication would] have advanced planning to protect them against mechanical cotton picking devices whose practicability is still problematical to say the least. The President in his latest "fireside chat" boasted of "plans" to change or to combat nature on a large scale in the great plains states, and incidentally to permit local communities to plan projects to be given effect at the expense of the federal government. Not only the government at Washington but large sections of the population have been deeply infected with this strange current notion that somehow the people can miraculously endow their government with power and ability that they themselves do not possess. Otherwise the astute politicians controling the machinery at Washington would long ago have altered the course of their policies. As long as conditions of this sort continue to exist no sensible business man can afford to leave the struggle against the constant encroachment of government upon private affairs to the power industry or to any other.

During the last half a decade, more or less, the habit of speaking of state socialism or dictatorships as "solutions" of this, that, and the other problem by which the world is faced has been growing upon us. This, perhaps, is particularly true of this country, although the difference may be chiefly that the habit was formed earlier elsewhere. The experience gained in various foreign countries, as well as that in our own, should serve to convince any thoughtful man, if he needed any convincing, that such systems solve nothing, but, on the contrary, raise many problems of their own. What is needed is abundant and well balanced world production of goods and services—well balanced in an economic and not a political sense. We must have this kind of production without accompanying financial developments that spell disaster at one time or another. The President both in his latest "fireside chat" and in his address on Thursday showed clearly enough that he, like most of the other economic planners, is still under the delusion that what is needed is artificially created "purchasing power" brought into being, strangely enough, either by controled [often reduced] production or by alterations in the way in which produced goods and services are distributed among the people at large. Of course the production of useful goods and services is the ultimate source of all true purchasing power, and it is just this wisely balanced production that neither state socialism nor dictators have achieved or can achieve.

How to Keep Well By Dr. Irving S. Cutter

THE MEANING OF HEADACHE

HEADACHE is one of our most general symptoms. In frequency it runs a close second to constipation. It is more annoying, however, than the latter and is not relieved quite so readily. Some one of the salicylates is the most popular remedy for pain in the head, but it should be obvious to every one that while it may lessen the distress, the drug does not combat the underlying disease.

We call the symptom a minor ailment and it may well be, but one that is uncomfortable and incapacitating. Now and then it recalls merely the indiscretions of the night before, but more often than not it typifies the piling up of the waste products of fatigue.

Pain in the head may indicate trouble in almost any part of the body. We know that toxins circulating in the blood can come from infected teeth, chronic inflammation of the stomach, or of the colon, irritation or inflammation of the kidneys and many other localities. This means that pain which persists or comes on periodically may present a puzzling problem, requiring a long and painstaking search for the seat of the trouble. We must not forget that tumors or abscesses that cause pressure on the brain covering may be the source.

A common and widespread form of head pain is that which follows anemia, in which too little nourishment is reaching the brain. This may be ascribed to a general condition of the blood; that is, too few cells or too little hemoglobin; or to the fact that the arteries have become narrowed and hence are less able to carry a normal amount of nutrition. An illustration of this type of headache is that which occurs whenever an individual approaches a high altitude. Airplane riders occasionally complain of this symptom, as will train or auto passengers at high elevations. The reason is that the circulating blood carries insufficient oxygen. The same holds true when one breathes too much carbon monoxide. This explains the symptoms of workers in garages who are sometimes exposed to poisonous gases.

Whenever the eye muscles are out of balance chronic headache may ensue. Rarely are these patients aware of any visual difficulty or defect. The distress generally begins in the late afternoon and pain is referred to the forehead and the upper portion of the head.

It may seem odd that obstruction of the nasal passages can be responsible for the symptom, but this situation holds if the blocking interferes with drainage from the sinuses. The pain is dull in character, is usually worse at night, and has a tendency to wear away toward morning. Weather conditions also affect this type, as anything that brings about congestion of the nasal mucous membrane may interfere with the normal flow of secretions from the sinuses.

In our hunt for the cause we must not forget the importance of what is termed the nervous headache, in which the sufferer is unduly fatigued, worried, or anxious. As a result digestion is upset or in some cases may cease temporarily. Whenever the pain develops it implies that there is not enough reserve to meet an emergency. A hostess is preparing for a reception. She is solicitous that everything go off exactly right, and the multitudinous details incident to the affair may lead to severe prostrating nervous headache. It's the old story of the church bazar. A substantial sum was cleared but the "leading lady" spent the ensuing week in bed.

We must mention migrane [sick headache] for which no organic basis has been discovered. We believe, however, that it is hereditary and is based upon the fact that the individual is suffering from a mild neurosis.

The most direct and simple attack—one that will solve a great majority of instances—should be directed to the gastrointestinal tract with the relief of constipation. The remaining causes may be sought in infections, kidney disease, pelvic disease in women, and eye troubles. The least sensible thing is to take some pill or powder highly vaunted on a billboard.

SQUINT.

J. F. S. writes: I am 17 years old and for about eight years have had a slight outward squint in both eyes. Will a muscle operation be successful? If not, what will?

REPLY.

In the hands of a competent eye surgeon your squint can be corrected and the muscles adjusted to direct vision. The operation is not dangerous and is usually successful.

SWOLLEN FEET.

J. O. writes: My mother's feet used to swell up occasionally, so we took her to the family physician. He told us the cause was a tumor in her abdomen, which should be removed at once. My mother was operated on and her feet still swell. What could be the cause?

REPLY.

Probably some failure of circulation. This means that the kidneys and the heart should receive attention.

FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE

CITIZENSHIP STATUS.

Gary, Ind., Sept. 9.—[Friend of the People.]—I came to this country in 1934, at which time I was 17 years old. My father took out his citizenship papers in 1927 and I would like to know if I am also a citizen through my father's naturalization. M. T.

Section 2 of the act of congress approved May 24, 1934 [12 noon, eastern standard time] provides as follows:

"That a child born without the United States of alien parents shall be deemed a citizen of the United States by virtue of the naturalization of or resumption of American citizenship by the father or the mother: Provided, that such naturalization or resumption shall take place during the minority of such child: And provided further, that the citizenship of such minor child shall begin five years after the time such minor child begins to reside permanently in the United States."

If the inquirer was legally admitted to the United States for permanent residence before 12 noon, eastern standard time, May 24, 1934, and was under 21 years of age at that time, he became a citizen upon arrival, his father having been naturalized prior thereto and during the inquirer's minority. If he arrived after the time stated it would appear that he does not derive citizenship through the naturalization of his father. However, if both parents become citizens during the inquirer's minority, then the inquirer would derive citizenship, provided he was legally admitted to the United States for permanent residence before his majority.

BIRDS OF A FEATHER—

From Across the Sea

BY JOHN POWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI.—This city, which has a population nearly as large as Chicago, is probably the only large industrial city in the world which has no system of factory inspection. A recent attempt by the authorities of the international settlement, in cooperation with the Chinese ministry of industry, to work out a system of factory inspection failed.

Proposed regulations, which had finally been agreed upon after negotiations extending over more than 10 years, were expected to go into effect on July 1. But they were nullified at the last minute because of the refusal of the Shanghai consular body to ratify the agreement. The Shanghai consular body, which includes in its membership the American consul general, Clarence E. Gauss of Washington, D. C., is the court of last resort in making any changes in the administration of this uniquely governed metropolis.

It is generally agreed that factory conditions in Shanghai are the worst in the world, probably unequaled anywhere since the "industrial revolution" in England in the middle of the eighteenth century. Owing to the strategic location of Shanghai at the "neck of the bottle" controlling the vast Yangtze valley, with its tens of millions of people, an enormous industrial establishment has grown up here, entirely without regulation of any character.

Due to the lack of a factory inspection system, there is not even accurate knowledge of the number of factory workers employed in the city. The term "industrial slavery" probably most aptly describes the situation prevailing here. Manufacturers, most of them native Chinese, but also foreigners, send agents into the interior of the country where famine conditions prevail and buy Chinese boys and girls for work in Shanghai factories.

"In view of the frightful conditions under which they work," a recent report said, "mortality among these youngsters is so distressingly high that only a small proportion of them can hope to reach maturity. Not more than two out of three survive their apprenticeship, due to the insanitary conditions which prevail in their places of employment, unsually dark, dismal warehouses or native structures, which not only serve as factories but also as living quarters for the employés, who sleep on shelves built from floor to ceiling. Children born and brought up on the premises actually never know any other home."

In innumerable cases, it was disclosed, apprentices are unpaid for the first three years, receiving only meager food and clothing. The working day runs from 12 to 14 or 16 hours. Frequently the occidental population and the educated classes of the Chinese community are shocked by industrial accidents of such catastrophic nature as seldom occur in other lands.

The writer twice recently visited conflagrations in rubber factories, in which the casualties, mostly young women, were 46 and 47, respectively.

The chief reason for Shanghai's failure to adopt modern factory inspection is due to the curious status of the city, composed of three separate municipalities, of which the international settlement occupies the center. There is also the French concession, and the large Chinese city which practically surrounds both foreign areas.

The international settlement is administered by a municipal council, which has a membership of five British, two Americans, two Japanese and five Chinese. This municipal council and the Chinese government agreed on the creation of a board of inspectors with an equal number of Chinese and foreign members to enforce all sections of the modern Chinese labor law which the Chinese government adopted some time ago and has begun to apply in all parts of the country under its control.

The consular body vetoed the scheme, but it is rumored that the real cause of the plan's failure was the attitude of the Japanese, who control most of the cotton mills here.

Writers should confine themselves to 200 or 300 words. Give full names and addresses. No manuscripts can be returned. Address Voice of the People, The Tribune.

EDUCATION, THEN AND NOW.

Libertyville, Ill., Sept. 23.—I have before me two school textbooks. One is an English reader which I used as a boy, three years before entering high school, and from which I quote:

> The eyes of the crowd followed the gesture of the Egyptian and beheld with ineffable dismay a vast vapor shooting from the summit of Vesuvius in the form of a gigantic pine—the trunk, blackness; the branches, fire. . . . And then darker and larger and mightier spread the cloud before them. It was a sudden and more ghastly night rushing upon the realm of noon.

From the other, a similar textbook used by my daughter, who has just entered high school as a freshman, I quote the following:

> A 12 year old boy wants to buy a puppy. He talks it over with the puppy. Give the boy and the puppy names and write their conversation.

Of course, I realize that the per capita school tax in Illinois is not quite twice that of my old home state [even if I do help out by buying books where I formerly had them free], so perhaps I should not expect too much. But is this really "higher education?"

If the Illinois textbook is designed to encourage imagination on the part of the student, might we not push him a little with such advanced English problems as, perhaps, this:

> A young man has a fondness for hot dogs. He dunks a frankfurter into a pot of boiling water. Describe the wiener's feelings.

No wonder the world is nuts!

R. A. VANDERPYL

FOREIGN TRADE.

Chicago, Sept. 22.—The nation which relies too greatly on foreign trade subjects itself to the disturbances of the world. The nation which pursues a policy of artificially expanding foreign markets subjects itself to the whims and fortunes of the buyers in those markets. When the buyers refuse to buy there is an economic collapse.

Factories are closed, farms are foreclosed. Millions join the breadlines. And why? Because their employers were living in a bubble and did not know it. They were too short-sighted to realize that there would be a day of reckoning.

And yet we are constantly being urged by the free traders to import more so that our brothers of the world might buy more from us. Will we never learn? Are we to go through the same thing again? Are our workers to be haunted by the fear that they will again be the victims of a world-wide depression?

We have a duty, and that duty is to build a sound national economy. We cannot build that economy by overstressing the value of a precarious foreign trade. We cannot build that economy by urging consumers to purchase foreign made goods and maybe tempt the reluctant foreigner into buying some of our products.

We can only build a sound national economy by buying American products, thus guaranteeing work to our laborers and guaranteeing the American farm market to the American farmer.

FRED E. LANGHOFF.

THE LAKE FRONT.

Chicago, Sept. 22.—From an unbroken stretch in Chicago of nearly twenty-five miles of beautiful lake shore with bathing beaches and recreational frontage, the natural beach frontage has been consistently scaled down by land fills until only one natural beach remains on the north side and only one remains on the south shore. Such beaches as have been produced to replace this loss are landlocked and unclean and too inaccessible for convenient use of the nearest residents.

The park board now proposes not to supply more adequate bathing beaches, not to make more practical the usage of a lake frontage such as ours, which is unique in any city, but to plan the destruction of virtually all of the remaining beach on the south shore!

Simply to destroy this natural advantage for the purpose of building landscaped highways seems idiotic. The motorist does not require nor demand the lake front for the operation of his car. Highways placed inland would serve him just as well.

Now, under the guise of building a necessary water filtration plant between 75th and 79th streets, they demand the right to fill in 115 acres of land in addition to that required for the plant proper. They also demand the right to install additional lake front highways in the proposed area. Their policy is simple: Place parks for eye value on the lake front surrounded by piling and rock, and high speed highways inside to insure nonusage by pedestrians of the produced park. Risk to human life in attempting to cross these highways, and nonusage of these parks has led to the placement of expensive pedestrian underpasses which enjoy little usage because of the great distance to the waterfront in most cases.

Much of this tract of filled in shore line remains as a huge eyesore.

We on the south shore do not resist the placement of a filtration plant. We simply do not welcome the misplanning and misplacement that has despoiled the lake frontage and discouraged the use of the beaches by the people of Chicago.

I.

Chicago, Sept. 22.—In all of President Roosevelt's discourses the pronoun "I" predominates persistently. There is no fault to find with its use. "I" has its place. But in English classes it is a subject of much interesting discussion. Classes are taught that "I" should be subordinated as much as possible. It is very evident that our President wishes to impress his public with his personality and is unconscious of his ego, egoism and egotism.

Now Judge Graber, Like Smith, Is After Him.

lection on the bond, you may be sure," said Judge Graber yesterday. "I signed many bonds without surety in the two and one-half years I sat in the Automobile court where I had faith in the man who asked me to sign such a bond.

"If Cannady signed such a bond he'll be made to pay."

A Street Car Thief.

The failure of Sherman to appear for trial was not made known until yesterday. Then it was learned he had been arrested on Sept. 2, and had been released on bond before his case came up before Judge Jay A. Schiller in the Felony court on Sept. 4.

"Sherman, an old time pickpocket, took the pocketbook of Charles Kramer, 6450 Kimbark avenue, while on a street car at 14th and Halsted streets on the night of Sept. 2," said Capt. John Egan of the Des Plaines street station.

"Sherman jumped off the car at 13th street and someone pointed him out to Policemen Canda, Smith, and Blazek, who were riding by in a squad car. They started after him and he boarded another street car. They stopped the car and arrested Sherman. The pocketbook containing $20, was found in the sandbox of the second street car, where witnesses saw Sherman hide it.

Gets Continuance; Vanishes.

Sherman appeared before Judge Schiller on Sept. 4 and a continuance was granted to the 23d on a plea that the pickpocket's lawyer was engaged elsewhere.

Judge Schiller yesterday related what happened after that.

"When the case was called last Wednesday and the prisoner failed to appear I ordered the bond forfeited," said Judge Schiller. "Then some attorney who said he represented the defendant, gave me his promise he would have the defendant in court next time if I continued the case. All I could do was take his word, as there was no property on which I could enter a forfeiture. The case is to come up Monday."

Has Long Police Record.

SEPT. 9, 1921—Fined $50 and costs for disorderly conduct, Judge Magan.

MAY 21, 1923—Disorderly conduct, $200 and costs and put on probation for six months by Judge Hayes.

AUG. 11, 1924—Fined $10 and costs by Judge LaBuy, disorderly conduct.

APRIL 12, 1927—Arrested on suspicion.

MAY 2, 1934—$25 and costs, disorderly conduct, Judge Brooks.

APRIL 12, 1934—Not guilty of larceny [pickpocket], Judge Epstein.

JULY 3, 1934—10 days House of Correction, larceny, Judge Helander.

What "Disorderly" Means.

Capt. Egan said that owing to the difficulty in getting evidence against known pickpockets, the custom is to charge them with disorderly conduct and tell the court why. In the cases where Sherman was fined for disorderly conduct he was arrested for picking pockets, but when captured did not have the stolen purse in his possession.

In the Swinberg case Cannady or "Big Boy Kennedy" as he was known to Judge Smith, did not sign the bond himself. He asked the favor for Benny Berof, a professional bondsman who has a police record, and who, like Swinberg, gave a fictitious address.

Swinberg was caught in a loop chase after his theft. He had followed Mrs. June Walker, 115 Clyde avenue, Evanston, into the woman's rest room on the twenty-second floor of the Midland building, 176 West Adams street, and snatched her purse. Two elevator operators took up the chase and when they seized Swinberg he had the purse tucked under his shirt.

That was on Friday, Sept. 18. On Sunday afternoon, Sept. 29, Judge Smith signed the bond which gave freedom to Swinberg. The thief failed to appear for trial next day before Judge Schiller and an investigation was ordered.

After several days Berof was arrested and held for contempt of court, but obtained his release on bail. Judge Smith said that "Big Boy" was helping in the hunt for Swinberg. Reporters who sought to interview Cannady at 3130 South Union street had the door slammed in their faces.

Chief Justice John J. Sonsteby of the Municipal court said that while any municipal judge has the authority to accept a bond on which the scheduling of property is waived, the practice had been frowned upon, as is the practice of judges accepting bonds in their own homes.

Shock in Faces of Crash Victims

New York, Sept. 26.—(AP)—The world's first glass office building, five stories tall, will be erected at 5th avenue and 56th street, it was announced today, and nobody inside above the ground floor will be able to see outdoors.

Walled in behind glass tiles, through which no one can see either from inside or out, the occupants will receive 78 per cent of the outdoor light. The place will be windowless except for five show windows on the ground floor.

The plans were announced today by the Corning Glass works, which will own and erect the structure.

Artificial weather made by air conditioning will replace the ordinary forms of ventilation. The framework of the building will be steel, floors fireproofed, but not of glass. The corners and top will be made of Indiana limestone.

The glass tiles, it was announced, are so strong that a wall of them could be built 600 feet high, which is half the height of the world's tallest skyscraper. They are hollow glass blocks, about a foot square and four inches thick.

3 NURSES AND 3 INTERNS INJURED IN AUTO CRASH

Gay Party on Way from Hospital Dance.

Three interns and three nurses attached to the County hospital were injured early today when their automobile crashed into a pillar on the lower level of Wacker drive at Wells street. The most seriously hurt was Mrs. Eleanor Cavode, 26 years old. She suffered a possible skull fracture.

The others received lesser injuries. They were Dr. William Cavode, 28, Mrs. Cavode's husband, Miss Ruth Cressett, 20, Dr. Fred Wolfe, 25, Miss Anna Harris, 25, and a young doctor whose name police could not learn. All were taken to the County hospital. The six were returning from the annual dance of the Cook County hospital interns at the Medinah Athletic club at the time.

Killed by Hit, Run Car.

Joseph D. Daleo, 26 years old of 3835 South Sacramento avenue, was killed early today by the automobile of a hit and run driver at Archer avenue and Pulaski road. Daleo was driving in Archer avenue when his car stopped because of motor trouble. He alighted to inspect the motor, and as he did so he was struck.

Manuel Pendola, 70 years old, 5518 South Wells street, was fatally injured last night when he was struck by an automobile at Garfield boulevard and Princeton avenue. Charles Eckhardt, 27 years old, 7625 Indiana avenue, driver of the car, said the rain obscured his vision. He took Pendola to the St. Bernard hospital.

Inquest Is Postponed.

A coroner's inquest over Gordon Doyle, 25 years old, 6310 Greenwood avenue, a playground employé in the department of public works, who was killed early yesterday when his automobile collided with another machine in West 159th street, west of Harlem avenue, was continued yesterday until Oct. 27. Five other persons were injured in the collision.

Robert Stasica, 11 years old, 1659 Wrightwood avenue, was seriously injured yesterday when he was struck by the automobile of Carl C. Graham, 2053 Birchwood avenue, at Altgeld street and Ashland avenue. The boy was taken to the Alexian Brothers hospital.

From Jan. 1 to 2 p. m. yesterday 712 persons were killed in automobile accidents in Cook county, 550 of them in Chicago. In the same period 13,820 were injured in trafic accidents within the city.

Rotolo was directing trafic around the wreckage when a car driven by Kenneth Turell, 31, Beloit, Wis., skidded into the wreckage, bounded clear, and struck Rotolo. Turell said he could not stop because of the slippery pavement, wet from rain.

Wife Ties Up Husband's Assets in Divorce Case

Mrs. Heine is suing for divorce, charging cruelty. Her attorney, Frank J. Link, said she gave her husband $15,000 with the understanding she was to have half interest in his business.

ROUSE YOUR UNDER SKIN

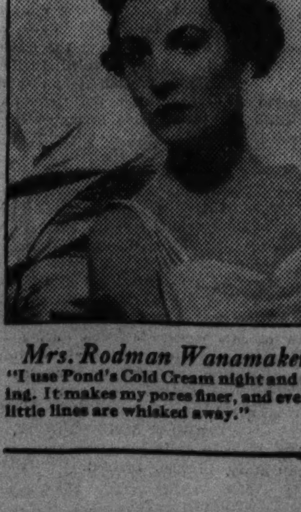
TWO common faults! Blackheads and coarse pores spoil the prettiest skin!

They come when tiny glands underneath function faultily—clog the pores with overthick oils. First blackheads form. It's not long before pores are looking larger.

But you can bring that faulty underskin back to healthy action—rouse it with the faithful use of Pond's deep-skin treatment:

Every night, pat on Pond's Cold Cream. Its specially processed oils go deep, release deep-lodged dirt and make-up. Wipe off. At once, your skin looks clearer! Pat in more cream—briskly. The circulation stirs. Glands waken. Tissues are invigorated.

Every morning (and before make-up) repeat . . . Your skin is smooth for powder. Your whole face fresher, clearer. Soon blackheads are discouraged. Pores are actually smaller!



Mrs. Rodman Wanamaker II
"I use Pond's Cold Cream night and morning. It makes my pores finer, and even tired little lines are whisked away."

2 INQUIRIES BARE UNHAPPY LOT OF SHARE CROPPER

Hot Springs, Ark., Sept. 26.—[Special.]—The first formal airing of charges of peonage growing out of the share cropper system in the eastern Arkansas cotton belt was made today as the result of investigations by a governor's commission here and a federal grand jury at Little Rock.

Both inquiries showed that the lot of the share cropper, white and black alike, is disheartening. In the words of W. G. Padgett, who investigated the share cropper system in fifteen counties: "What I saw and learned on that trip would cause you to shed more tears than Christ did at the tomb of Lazarus."

Floggings Start Probe.

The system, with its undercurrent of peonage, has been under indifferent inquiry since last winter. It first began receiving national attention last June with the flogging at Earle, Ark., of Miss Willie Sue Blagden, a Memphis social worker, and the Rev. Claude V. Williams. They said they were whipped because they went to Earle to conduct the funeral of a colored share cropper. Authorities declared that that particular share cropper had not died, and that the funeral was a mock affair.

Following the flogging, federal authorities took a hand, and Gov. J. M. Futrell appointed the Arkansas Farm Tenant commission to make a sweeping inquiry.

The federal grand jury at Little Rock completed one phase of its inquiry first by indicting the city marshal of Earle on a charge of violating the anti-slave laws of 1866. The commission worked more slowly and continued hearing evidence up to today.

Padgett Tells of Tour.

One of the principal witnesses before both bodies was Mr. Padgett. Here is part of his testimony before the commission:

"In order that I might get first hand information and personally learn whether the stories I had heard of share croppers were true, I went to the bank and borrowed $50, which I used on my trip through fifteen counties.

"I came to a plantation where one of the tenants had died. His widow was in the little cabin with him. There was scarcely a bit of furniture in the place. In a field near by were other tenants. I went into the field and told them their friend had passed away. I asked them to go and comfort the woman.

"Curses Tenant for Dying."

"They told me they would not dare leave their work unless the 'boss man' [overseer] gave them permission. I talked to the 'boss man.' When he learned one of his help had died, he cursed the man for dying.

"I came to another cabin where a woman had left the field to care for her sick child. The 'boss man' told her he would kick her back into the cotton patch she had left if she did not return to her work.

"What I have seen convinces me that if any one is looking for material with which to start a revolution that will overthrow this country and endanger its institutions, that material can be found in the dissatisfied and abused share croppers."

$200 Due; Is Offered $5.

Padgett cited several other incidents of which, he said, he had legal proof. One concerned a man who had $200 due him for his year's labors. The planter told him he had only $5 due, but he would be welcome to "remain on the plantation another year."

The commission heard witnesses representing large farm owners as well as tenants and share croppers. Incidentally, there is a marked difference between tenants and share croppers. Tenants are land renters, generally able to provide their own teams and willing to raise or provide their own food instead of buying it at plantation commissaries on credit. Many share croppers are said to be roving farmers who sign contracts to till the soil on a percentage basis and who, for the most part, purchase their food from the commissaries.

Seek to Shift Blame.

Planters and their agents, or subsidiary agents, sought to lay the share cropper evils at the share cropper's own door. They cited the roving disposition of the share croppers. They asserted that in some classes more than half do not want to raise their own garden food, preferring commissary food at high prices. They added that some refused to raise cows for their own milk.

The question of unionization of farm tenants and share croppers was brought up. A union known as the Southern Tenant Farmers' union has been in existence and active operation for many months in Arkansas. Mrs. Scott Wood of Hot Springs, president of the Arkansas Parent-Teacher council, told the commission that "some of the best families in the state" were opposed to the union. They told her, she said, that any of their tenants trying to form or join a union would "be kicked over the county line as trouble makers." The planters generally consider the union bolshevik.

Slavery Suspect Free on Bail.

Meanwhile the first target of the Little Rock federal grand jury—City Marshal Paul D. Peacher of Earle—was released today on $5,000 bond. He was the first to be indicted in the federal quiz, and the first to be indicted in Arkansas under the anti-slavery laws of 1866.

The indictment against him contained eight counts, charging specifically that he "aided and abetted in causing persons to be held as slaves." Fourteen witnesses, ten of them colored, testified against him.

Peacher was charged with having forcibly taken eight colored farmers before Mayor T. S. Mitchell of Earle, the latter acting as a justice, and falsely accusing them of vagrancy. Mitchell sentenced them to 30 days and remanded them to Peacher's "complete control and custody." Peacher then allegedly forced them to work on his farm, the men there being held "in involuntary servitude and as slaves" at hard labor.

Peacher refused to talk about his case tonight. "I don't know anything about it," he replied to questions. Federal officials said he was once a deputy sherif and had been removed from office.

STRIKE OF FLOUR MILL LABOR ENDS IN MINNEAPOLIS

1,800 to Resume Work as Result of Agreement.

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 26.—[Special.]—The mill and elevator workers' strike, which virtually had paralyzed much of the Minneapolis milling industry for a month, was ended today. Approximately 1,800 workers will return to their jobs as a result of the agreement.

The proposal was the same as that which yesterday settled the strike involving the Archer-Daniels-Midland company's nine elevators and linseed mill. The mill operators agreed to recognize the right of collective bargaining and permit employés to elect their own representatives.

Shortly after Gov. Hjalmar Petersen announced that representatives of mill operators had met in conference and accepted the settlement plan, R. E. Walsh and W. A. Younker of the Flour, Seed Cereal and Elevator Workers union, which called the strike, informed the chief executive that the agreement also was acceptable to the union.

The governor said he planned conferences next week which he hoped would settle the strike of wholesale grocery truck drivers for union recognition and wage adjustments.

Four hundred National Guardsmen, called out by the governor for strike duty in the event of an emergency, were demobilized yesterday. They had been held in armories since their mobilization.

Power Parley Blocked.

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 26.—[Special.]—The likelihood of a repetition of the 1933 strike of employés of the Illinois Power and Light corporation, which serves 70 municipalities, was denied today.

E. E. Scott, southern Illinois representative of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, said members were "not very far" from a strike right now. He declared that the union would not accept Dean Albert J. Harno, of the University of Illinois law school, as an arbitrator and would resort to "economic strength" unless the state soon names one acceptable to the union.

However, D. D. Hodges, vice president of the Utility Operators' association, said at Champaign that the probability of a strike by the brotherhood members was "exceedingly remote."

Ask Maritime Parley.

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 26.—[Special.]—Major coast maritime unions today demanded conferences with employers, continuing day and night if necessary, to block a threatened shipping tie-up Wednesday when existing working agreements between the unions and employers expire.

The government also is seeking to forestall trouble believed almost certain to ensue. Negotiations for new contracts are deadlocked over a number of issues. Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward F. Grady was on his way here from Washington to help ward off a repetition of the long and bloody maritime strike of 1934. His plane was grounded by a snow storm at North Platte, Neb.

PLAN ONE DAY TIEUP OF SHIPPING IN FIGHT FOR SEAMAN SIMPSON

New York, Sept. 26.—[Special.]—An attempt will be made Monday to tie up all shipping in east coast and gulf harbors and in ports in Europe in a one day strike to protest against German imprisonment of Lawrence Simpson, American seaman, it was announced today by the seamen's defense committee.

"We expect to tie up all shipping in New York harbor," Chairman Joseph Curran added. "There should be sixty to seventy ships in port here that day, with 4,000 to 5,000 seamen aboard.

Simpson, held in Germany on espionage charges, has been the center of several protests to the state department by various groups before.

May Hear Fate Tomorrow.

Berlin, Sept. 26.—(AP)—Although he has awaited trial for nearly 15 months, Lawrence Simpson, American seaman, probably will learn his fate on espionage charges on Monday, the day he goes to trial on the charge, coupled with a second count of attempting to spread communist literature in Germany. Consular officials here planned to follow the proceedings closely.

HOME LOST, SHE FIGHTS BACK AND CAMPS ON PORCH

Mrs. Ruby Lucas, 43 years old, spent her second consecutive night last night on a mattress on the front porch of her former home, 8453 Rhodes avenue, from which she was evicted Friday.

Scorning all offers of aid, the small, gray haired woman sat on her stoop and peered out toward the curbing, where a drenching rain poured upon her household effects. Included in the array were many rare antiques and thirty baskets of canned food, in addition to some 21 pounds of coffee, 31 pounds of cocoa and 12 pairs of new shoes.

Keeley, White & Co., the realty firm which foreclosed on a mortgage after she was three years behind in payments, offered to move and store Mrs. Lucas' furniture and to pay a two week hotel bill for her, but she refused all offers.

"I've lived here twelve years," she said, looking out toward her drenched possessions, "and I'm not leaving now."

She formerly was on relief, she said, but has not received aid in a year. The canned goods, she said, consist of vegetables which she raised on a relief garden and later sent to the relief cannery for preserving.

HARRIET MONROE, EDITOR OF VERSE MAGAZINE, DIES

"Patron Saint of Poets" Stricken in Peru.

Miss Harriet Monroe, founder and editor of "Poetry, a Magazine of Verse," and known as the "patron saint of American poets," died yesterday at Arequipa, Peru, members of her family here were informed. She was 76 years old.

Miss Monroe left Chicago a month ago for a South American journey as the guest of the Pen club, an organization devoted to poetry. The party went to Buenos Aires, from where some of the members returned north along the eastern shore of South America. Miss Monroe and others chose to return by a western route. The high altitude in the Andes affected her and she suffered a heart attack, which caused her death.

Born in Chicago.

Miss Monroe was born Dec. 23, 1860, in Chicago. Her parents were Henry Stanton and Martha Mitchell Monroe, both of pioneer stock. She was educated at the Visitation academy in Georgetown, D. C., being graduated in 1879.

Her first literary efforts, written for Chicago newspapers, took the form of "Letters on Music, Art and the Drama." Her first book of verse was entitled "Valeria and Other Poems." Many other volumes followed, all except one on poetry. The exception was a biography of her famous brother-in-law, John Wellborn Root, who was first architect of the Columbian exposition in Chicago in 1893.

Miss Monroe was requested by the exposition committee on ceremonies to write a poem for the dedication. She composed the "Columbian Ode," commemorating the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America. The ode was set to music.

Art Editor of Tribune.

In 1911, while Miss Monroe was art editor of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, she interested a group of patrons in publishing a magazine of verse. The magazine "Poetry" was launched in September, 1912.

Among the names that have appeared in its pages, some of them in print for the first time, were those of Vachel Lindsay, Carl Sandburg, Edgar Lee Masters, D. H. Lawrence and a host of others. To its pages, too, came the occasional versifier, and at least 500 poetic efforts had to be rejected monthly. These poems Miss Monroe found "like handling naked souls." Her love for poetry as an art, her own verses, and her kindliness and inspiration to rising poets won for her an international reputation.

Noted for Her Modesty.

Many commentators talked to Miss Monroe at varions times in her career and wrote later of her modesty. Most of the famous literary folk who visited Chicago were entertained by her and noted how "she sits in the background among her poets, watching and listening."

In June, 1920, academic recognition of her achievements came from Baylor university at Waco, Tex. The honorary degree of doctor of literature was conferred on her at the commencement.

Among the volumes Miss Monroe published during her career were "The Passing Show—Modern Plays in Verse," "You and I," "The Difference, and Other Poems," "Chosen Poems—A Selection from My Books," and "Poets and Their Art" [prose essays]. In 1917 Miss Monroe and Alice Corbin Henderson edited "The New Poetry,' an anthology of 20th century verse. An enlarged edition was published in 1932.

Miss Monroe's home in Chicago was at 111 East Pearson street. She is survived by a brother, William S. Monroe, 64 East Elm street, president of Sargent & Lundy, Inc., consulting engineers, and a sister, Mrs. Lucy Calhoun of Peiping, China, widow of William T. Calhoun, one time United States minister to China. Another sister, Mrs. John W. Root, died several years ago.

Funeral arrangements have not yet been made.

OWNER OF FOUR STORES HELD IN $100,000 FRAUD

Charles J. Sachs, 41 years old, owner of the Home Appliance company, operator of stores in four northern Illinois towns, was arrested yesterday by City Marshal Joseph Huber of Elgin, on four charges of forgery. Sachs' frauds are expected to total $100,000, according to Huber and State's Attorney George D. Carbary of Kane county.

Sachs is accused of swindling finance companies by selling them spurious sales contracts. Carbary said he explained he had taken the money in order to bolster the condition of his company, which had expanded too rapidly.

Sachs' stores in Elgin, Rockford, Aurora, and Elmhurst were recently taken over by a trustee manager, Carbary said.

BODY OF WOMAN PIANIST EXHUMED FOR DEATH QUIZ

The body of Mrs. Viola Cole Audet, pianist, who was found dead in a bathing suit on the 79th street beach July 31, was exhumed at Oak Woods cemetery yesterday for a post mortem examination by the coroner's office. The cause of death was given as heart disease at an inquest the day after her body was found.

Dr. George O'Brien, who performed the autopsy yesterday, reported later that her death was apparently due to myocarditis, a heart ailment. A chemical analysis, however, will be made of the vital organs to determine definitly whether this was the cause.

Present at the autopsy yesterday were Mrs. Audet's brother, Victor E. Cole, 6722 Ridgeland avenue, who obtained a court order for the exhumation; his mother, Anna; Dr. Henry W. Cheney, the family physician, and Assistant State's Attorney William Lancaster. Mrs. Audet, who was the wife of F. Emile Audet, a French teacher, lived with her husband at 7861 South Shore drive. LIMA, Peru, Sept. 26. — (AP) — A strange cargo—the skull of a mummified Inca—went northward toward Rochester, Minn., in a commercial airliner today.

The skull shows a wound made, undoubtedly by a club or stone, during a battle attendant upon the Inca conquests. It shows distinct signs of an operation by primitive Indian surgeons, noted for their skill in the trepanation of craniums.

EXPECT TO BEGIN WORK THIS WEEK ON 16 ARMORIES

Contracts of Two Millions Are Approved.

Contracts for building 16 National Guard armories in Illinois at an approximate cost of $2,000,000 were approved yesterday by the Illinois Armory board and submitted to the Works Progress administration officials for the final stamp of approval. The WPA is to pay for one-half the work and funds are to be available this week.

The bonds for the state's share of the construction costs have already been underwritten, according to Roy D. Keehn, commander of the 33d division [Illinois National Guard] and chairman of the armory board, who said that practically all of the problems concerning the contracts have been ironed out with the WPA.

Hope to Start Next Week.

If the WPA approves and the contractors can post their bonds it is expected that work on the armories will be started this week in Carbondale, Lawrenceville, Mount Vernon, Salem, Dixon, Rock Falls, Urbana, Delavan, Joliet, Oak Park, Waukegan, Elgin, Sycamore, Streator, Champaign, and Pontiac.

Keehn said that the communities in which the armories are to be built had provided the sites and that the WPA would do the excavating and the rough construction work. The state's money will be used for the finishing and the interiors.

State Signs Rental Contract.

The state has signed a contract with the armory board to rent the armories for National Guard use for the next 25 years. The board expects that the rentals will amortize the bonds at the end of that time and the armories will then become the property of the state.

Keehn explained that plans to enlarge the 122d Coast Artillery armory here were abandoned when it was found that the work would probably take 15 months. The buildings planned are expected to be completed in 8 months and the board believes that the WPA work can be completed even if WPA is abandoned at a later date.

B. M. BALDWIN'S WIFE SUES FOR DIVORCE IN WEST

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 26.—[Special.]—Mrs. Nell Maxine Baldwin today filed a divorce against Baldwin M. Baldwin, grandson of the late E. J. [Lucky] Baldwin, millionaire California sportsman and capitalist. They were married in 1924. The divorce action ends years of separation and litigation between the couple, both socially prominent, which lasted from the time young Baldwin toured Europe with Suzanne Lenglen, French women's tennis champion, as the latter's manager and secretary.

Young Baldwin obtained a decree of divorce from his wife in Riga, Latvia, March 17, 1932, but his wife never accepted it as valid, and brought an action for separate maintenance here in July, 1932. Her current papers merely allege desertion, and note that she keeps custody of the couple's twin daughters, Anne and Dextra II. She also will receive $25,300 cash, besides accepting promissory notes for $80,000. Part of the Baldwin holdings inherited by Baldwin M. Baldwin's mother, Anita Baldwin, from her father, now compose the Santa Anita race track near Los Angeles.

BIRTHPLACE OF WILL ROGERS IS SOLD TO WIDOW

Claremore, Okla., Sept. 26.—(AP)—There was none of the glamor of the auction sale when the Will Rogers ranch was sold today.

Principals at the sale waited for bidders at the courthouse, and when no others appeared, the widow of the humorist went into an attorney's office where the deal was consummated behind locked doors.

Bidding for the Rogers' estate, Mrs. Rogers offered a reported price of $16,000 for the Rogers' birthplace ranch at Oologah, and a 20 acre tract near the Oklahoma Military academy here.

The tax sale was arranged with court sanction to marshal the assets of the Rogers estate on which $175,000 in state and federal income taxes and gift taxes is due.

HIRE STEWARDS FOR EASTERN AIR LINES; GIRLS OUT

Flight stewards instead of stewardesses will be placed on all planes of the Eastern Air Lines by Dec. 1, according to an announcement made here yesterday by Capt. E. V. Rickenbacker, general manager of the air lines company.

The stewards are to be added to the personnel of the air lines' Silver Fleet to provide personal service to passengers, not only while aloft, but also to see to their needs at the various stopping points.

Dispense with Stewardesses.

Eastern Air Lines, it was explained, was one of the first air transport companies to have stewardesses in 1932. Two years ago, however, the jobs were dispensed with and the planes have been operating without either stewards or stewardesses.

Capt. Rickenbacker declared that the flight stewards are to be aviation's counterpart of the steamship steward. The flight stewards, however, will not consider themselves as entertainers and their services will be offered only when desired.

Rule Against Tipping.

The announcement pointed out that one important rule of the service will be that no tipping is permitted. Stewards who accept gratuities will face the loss of their jobs.

Applicants for the forty steward jobs must be from 25 to 35 years of age and have experience in meeting and serving the public.

ORDERS GRAND JURY PROBE OF 3D DEGREE DEATH

Uniontown, Pa., Sept. 26.—(AP)—The Fayette County court ordered the September grand jury to reconvene next Tuesday to investigate the death of Frank C. Monaghan, 64, a hotel owner. The court acted on petition of Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti, who was named special prosecutor last night by Gov. George H. Earle.

Earle charged that Monaghan died during a "third degree" to force him to confess the stabbing of County Detective John C. Wall.

Margiotti's petition said he wanted the grand jury to inquire "into the conduct of certain officers, certain members of the Pennsylvania state police and others."

The attorney general said there were more than three persons involved and that "all the culpable persons will be prosecuted."

SNOW IN ROCKIES; SUBFREEZING IN YELLOWSTONE

Cold in New York State Mountains, Too.

Denver, Colo., Sept. 26.—(AP)—Wintry weather rode into the Rocky mountains today, heralded by the season's first snow varying from a light flurry in some sections to a eight inch downfall at Casper, Wyo. Subfreezing levels were reached in Montana, Utah, and Wyoming points, and Yellowstone National park. Wind, dust, and cold rains accompanied the sudden changes. Two Denver deaths were indirectly attributed to the light snow which blanketed the Utah-Idaho mountains in the wake of a north wind that tumbled temperatures as much as 45 degrees. The wind damaged orchards and frost wilted garden crops.

Charles E. Sheeley, 34, shielding his eyes with his arm, walked into the side of a moving automobile in Denver and was fatally injured. Harry Pittinger fell from a light pole where he was working in a 38 mile an hour wind.

First Nebraska Snow.

Harrison, Neb., Sept. 26.—(AP)—A 2 inch snowfall, the first of the season in Nebraska, covered the ground here today.

Cold in New York, Too.

Utica, N. Y., Sept. 26.—(AP)—Frank B. Seaton welcomed colder weather today because he said it inspired the hope that the house-wrecking woodpecker which has been boring holes in his roof had headed southward. The bird, a yellow bellied sapsucker, visited his house only briefly yesterday.

Saranac lake, which had snow yesterday, reported a heavy frost and two degrees below freezing. At Owl's Head, Adirondack source of cold weather stories, Mrs. Fannie Carpenter said water froze. The temperature was 22. At Malone it was 30.

Reports Balloon's Fall.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 26.—(AP)—The coast guard station here reported a radio message from the Erie, Pa., station this afternoon that a balloon had fallen into Lake Erie "about ten miles from Northeast, Pa., and three miles off shore." The message said a lifeboat had been sent out from Erie. The coast guard there said "from the description, the balloon might be down anywhere along the coast between Northeast and Barcelona, N. Y." Phone exchanges at Ripley and Barcelona reported they had not heard anything about the balloon.

NEW SAN ANGELO FLOOD

San Angelo, Tex., Sept. 26.—(AP)—Flood waters of the Concho rivers, which last week wrought damage estimated as high as $5,000,000 at San Angelo, threatened the city again tonight. Rains which fell last night added to the peril.

The North Concho was creeping into a residential section where many homes were destroyed and damaged in the record breaking flood of a few days ago.

Reports from upstream, however, indicated the stream would fall far short of last week's flood stage.

The crest on the Middle Concho approached Lake Nasworthy, near San Angelo, where engineers sought to hold the waters back until the crest of the North Concho passes.

At Robert Lee, 40 miles north on the upper reaches of the Colorado river, observers reported a 25 foot stage and the river rising. It was the highest level there since 1922. Several hundred miles to the south near Burnet the Colorado took the life of George Williams, who tried to swim the rushing current.

Federal officials evacuated the frontier offices there as the Mexican Rio Conchos and the turbulent mountain stream, Cibolo creek, rose steadily.

The crest on the Mexican Rio Concho was nearing the Rio Grande. An approach to the international bridge at Presidio was destroyed.

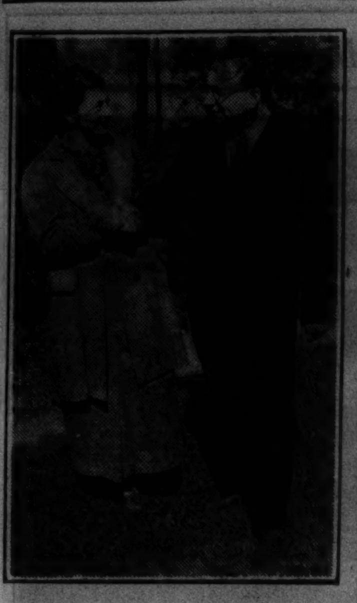
SAYS HE'S CURED



John H. Kern, former magazine writer of Broad Channer, N. Y., who announces that he is cured of agoraphobia, and Elsie Clark, who helped him to recover. For more than six years, he said, he feared to step beyond 200 feet from his cottage. Agoraphobia is a morbid dread of crossing, or being in the midst of open spaces.

FLEE CALIFORNIA FOREST FIRES IN TWELVE COUNTIES

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 26.—(AP)—Women and children joined men on the fire lines tonight as scattered brush and forest fires spread in a dozen northern California counties.

Fears of possible loss of life increased with reports from outlying districts of desperate struggles to save property and hopeless flights from burning homes.

The pioneer settlement of Oregon House, former stage station on the Marysville-Comptonville road, was destroyed. A hotel, postoffice, store, and eight homes were burned.

Thirty head of cattle perished in Placer county as flames swept the historic Whitney estate ranch.

The scattered fires, numbering more than 100, destroyed 14 ranch houses in Sonora county and swept over three ranches in Yuba county. Twenty residents of Pine Flat mining camp abandoned their homes.

State forestry officials at Sacramento planned to send 500 men tomorrow to reinforce the battle line crews, already numbering from 1,200 to 1,500.

Rock Island, Ill., Sept. 26.—[Special.]—The eightieth annual conclave of the Illinois Grand Commandery, Knights Templar, opened here today in drizzling rain. Drill work, scheduled for outdoors, was held in Augustania college gymnasium and the grand parade, it is hoped, will be held tomorrow afternoon.

East River Tube to Relieve Bridges.

New York, Sept. 26.—[Special.]—When President Roosevelt starts the first steam shovel and breaks ground for the new $58,365,000 East river vehicular tunnel, connecting Manhattan and Queens, next Friday afternoon, he will begin the Public Works administration's largest single nonfederal undertaking.

The PWA has made a loan of $47,130,000 and a grant of $11,235,000 for construction of the tunnel, the latest improvement in a $180,000,000 program begun locally with the aid of PWA funds.

The new twin-tube vehicular tunnel is to relieve trafic congestion on the four East river bridges and eliminate frequent trafic tie-ups.

It will have a capacity for 3,800 vehicles an hour. The tunnel will have double trafic lanes in each direction. The tunnels will be 7,790 feet long, 2,500 feet shorter between the portals than the Holland tunnel. The tubes will be 31 feet each in diameter. Each will have a 21-foot roadway and service walk and a clear head room of 13½ feet.

Local city officials already are considering a cross town vehicular tunnel to link the East river with the Midtown-Hudson tunnel, another PWA project, now nearing completion between West 38th street, Manhattan, and Weekhawken.

The East river vehicular tunnel is one of the four large transportation projects which the city of New York has been able to undertake with the assistance of PWA. The East river tunnel received its allotment after PWA had made allocations for the $60,000,000 triborough bridge, the $37,000,000 Midtown-Hudson tunnel, and the $23,350,000 extension of the municipal subway.

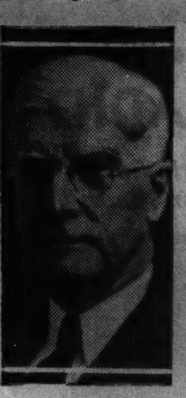
CONSTANT TAX BOOSTING ALSO ACTS AS BRAKE

Victor A. Matteson Raps Administration.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Lack of a definite businesslike economic policy, the tendency of the Roosevelt administration to increase taxes steadily, and a consequent complete lack of confidence on the part of the public have combined to keep idle billions of dollars available for building, Victor A. Matteson, Chicago architect and a fellow of the American Institute of Architects, said yesterday.



V. A. MATTESON. [Walinger Photo.]

Matteson, who also is a member of the Western Society of Engineers and the Illinois Society of Architects, has just been appointed national chairman of the architects' committee of the business, professional, and industrial committee of the Republican national committee. H. L. Palmer, financial secretary of the Illinois Society of Architects, was appointed vice chairman for Illinois to assist Matteson.

Billions Are Lying Idle.

"There are billions for building lying idle in this country which will be released as soon as one thing happens," said Matteson. "Those controlling funds that are available any time for necessary building in this country want one thing, and that is confidence. They want to know that when their money is invested they will have an investment that will stand up for years and not be subject to the vagaries of an administration that as yet has shown no signs of a definite businesslike economic policy to continue over a period of years.

"Building is needed everywhere in America. There are millions of homes to be built. For example, during the last year, within the city of Chicago, the building permits have shown practically a total absence of new private residential construction. There is a desire among people to build, but they are all holding off and waiting to see what happens on election day.

Mounting Taxes a Factor.

"Business is largely predicated on borrowed money, and people don't want to buy a mortgage now, or loan money for building, and in ten or fifteen years, when the mortgage is redeemed, get twenty-five cents back on their dollar, due to the unstable and fluctuating dollar of the New Deal.

"That is one thing that is holding up our building. That and the fact that there is a tendency under the New Deal continually to increase taxes.

"Throughout the country there are factories to be built and rebuilt. In fact, if a building program such as is actually needed in this country were put into effect, the funds required for it would run far into the billions, and these funds will be readily available once confidence is completely restored.

Would Aid All Workers.

"This building and rebuilding program would be the salvation of working men in every class. It would employ not only carpenters, bricklayers, plumbers, plasterers, and various trades of this nature, but it would extend into every line of activity."

"In all talk of stimulation of business by the New Dealers, we've found little boasting of what it has done for building, for the simple reason that this is one phase of recovery that the New Deal has been almost totally unable to stimulate."

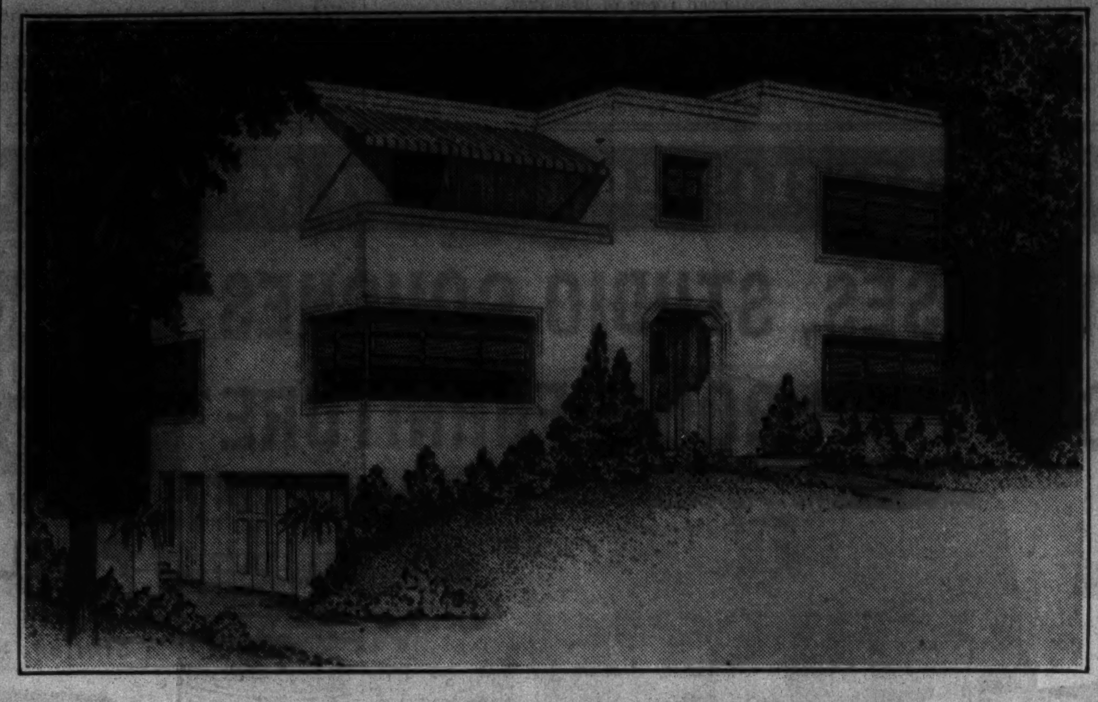
Plan $50,000 Remodeling for Evanston Structure

Bids are being taken for remodeling the three story building at 809 Davis street, Evanston, from plans by Architect Carl Hauber. It is expected the cost will be approximately $50,000, according to the Davis Building corporation, the owner. The basement will be lowered and the entire first floor air conditioned. A lease is now being negotiated with a large eastern five and ten cent chain, it was said, which will occupy the entire first floor and basement and part of the second.

NEW SHOE SHOP FOR LOOP.

V. H. Parrott, for two decades identified with the women's shoe business in Chicago, has leased the store at 70 East Madison street for five years.

Chicagoland's First Monolithic Concrete House



Stanley G. Cutler, Chicago structural engineer, is building the above residence, reported by the Portland Cement association to be the first modern monolithic concrete house to be erected in Illinois. It stands on the south side of Revere road, near Taylor avenue, Glen Ellyn. Carl Hauber of Elmhurst and Chicago is architect. This sketch was made by W. W. Harding. Details are given in a nearby column.

OLD TIME STRUCTURE IN EVANSTON TO BE ENTIRELY REBUILT

Complete modernization of the two story building at the southeast corner of Chicago avenue and Davis street into an old English style structure is contemplated, according to an announcement yesterday by Harry L. Wells, business manager of Northwestern university. Plans by Frederic B. Schmidt, Evanston architect, provide for partial use of the first floor by the realty firm, McGuire & Orr, which leased the corner for 99 years from Northwestern university and bought the building for an undisclosed consideration. The second story will be remodeled into offices for architects and builders.

The transaction came as part of Northwestern's program for placing certain of its properties back on the Evanston tax roll, it was pointed out by Wells. Properties owned outright by the university are not taxable, in accordance with an amendment to Northwestern's charter passed by the Illinois legislature in 1855.

The first structure on the Davis-Chicago corner was built during the civil war by Thomas C. Hoag, who in addition to his grocery business, operated a bank which was the precursor of the State Bank and Trust company of Evanston. In 1866 Hoag was made treasurer and business manager of the university and handled much of its business in his store.

The store and ground later were bought by George Taylor and housed his grocery business for half a century until his retirement in 1933. At that time they were purchased by Northwestern. The property is across from the North Shore hotel.

ADOLPH KRAMER PREDICTS GOOD REALTY MARKET

The opening of a seventh branch office, at the southwest corner of Madison and Central, was announced yesterday by Adolph F. Kramer, president of Draper and Kramer, Inc.

"This is further evidence of our confidence in the immediate future of Chicago real estate," said Kramer. "In 1893 we opened our first office on Dearborn street, near Washington, where our main office has since been located. Our first branch was established a year later at 47th, near Calumet, and has been in continuous operation since. Four more branch offices were opened later to serve the south, southwest, north, and northwest sides of the city.

"If business is let alone I am confident that the same order of real estate recovery will follow that we had in the late '90s, starting with 1910 and again in 1921.

"With families unscrambling and marriages increasing we are bound to have a housing shortage. The sale and construction of small residences already has started, and the next step will be a sales market in small apartment buildings. As rents increase the market will move on to larger buildings."

Kramer said his firm now has fifty more employés than during the peak in 1927 and are employing more than at any time during his forty-three years in business.

BEVERAGE COMPANY EXPANDS.

David Saul Klafter, Inc., is drawing plans for a one story 50x175 addition to the Henson Beverage company's plant at 1223 South Homan avenue to cost a reported $12,000.

Build State's First Poured Concrete House in Glen Ellyn

With walls, floors, and roof cast as one integral unit—a type of construction known as "monolithic"—a house claimed to be the first of its kind in Illinois is now being erected in Glen Ellyn, on the south side of Revere road, near Taylor avenue, in the McIntosh subdivision. Stanley G. Cutler, well known as a structural engineer, is builder and engineer of this seven room fireproof and tornado proof home. His wife planned the all-electric kitchen.

STANLEY G. CUTLER.

Designed by Architect Carl Hauber, Chicago architect, the house will represent a reported investment of approximately $15,000, exclusive of the site, but including equipment.

Has Many Visitors.

Although not yet completed, the house is being visited daily by persons interested in this type of construction, new to this area for home building, but common on the Pacific coast, Florida, and the east. It will be formally opened for public inspection about Nov. 1.

The double walls have an outer section of poured concrete, 4½ inches thick, and an inner section 3 inches thick, separated by a 1½ inch insulation board. The wall contains horizontal and vertical reinforcements of steel bars in both sections and steel bars unite the two wall sections securely. Both interior and exterior wall surfaces will be rubbed smooth and painted or papered, with the exception of the two bathrooms, which will be tiled. Blue will be the color note throughout the interior, with exterior walls of white.

Has Many Windows.

A feature of the house will be its large window area with "glass corners" used in all rooms. Steel casement windows, metal door frames, and plate glass will be used throughout. There will be a large recreation room, storage room, laundry, and a two car garage in the basement.

The 14 by 24 foot living room will have a large fireplace and its corner windows will occupy almost half of the exterior wall surface. Across the center staircase hall is a 14 by 14.8 foot dining room, with a 9 by 14 foot kitchen in the rear. At the end of the hall is an 8 by 10 foot den. On the second floor are three bedrooms and two baths, with two sun decks.

Now Live in Austin.

The heating equipment will consist of forced hot water circulation with a humidified and thermostatic control, with oil used as fuel. All water pipes will be of copper.

Mr. and Mrs. Cutler now are living at 585 Race avenue, in the Austin district. Cutler formerly was vice president for many years of Olney J. Dean & Co., structural steel dealers.

Scale Models, Inc., makers of scale model locomotives, railway cars, track, etc., have leased the entire seventh floor at 1510 South Wabash, giving the lessee considerably more space to care for increased business, according to Elliott Donnelley, president. H. J. Rogers of Sudler & Co. reports that the building is now 90 per cent occupied.

Mrs. Emma Reder sold for a reported $10,250 cash the three apartment building at 6334 North Wayne avenue to an undisclosed purchaser, through John J. Kern, Inc.

NEISNER LEASES LARGE STORE IN OAK PARK BLOCK

Neisner Brothers, Inc., operators of 103 "five cents to one dollar" stores throughout the country, yesterday leased space in the $200,000 building to be erected at 1137-39 Lake street, Oak Park, by the R. E. corporation and pictured in this department on July 19. The store, 54 by 190 feet, together with basement space, has been leased for a long term with a total guaranteed minimum rental of $425,000, plus a percentage of gross sales. Lester Simon & Co. represented the lessee and Hooker & Slosson the lessor corporation.

It will be made the dominant Neisner store in the Chicago area, according to Hooker & Slosson, who are agents of the building for R. E. Herman, representative of the R. E. corporation. It will be a replica in design of the company's Cincinnati store, which is reputed to be the chain's finest unit, and will be the concern's twenty-fifth store in the Chicago area.

Indicative of the prosperous condition of the Lake-Marion business section of Oak Park, it was reported that thirty-two prospective tenants applied for the four store units to be available. The other stores will be leased to representative organizations, it was said.

With the closing of the Neisner lease work on the new building will start at once, it was announced, with completion scheduled for early spring. Alfred S. Alschuler is architect. The building will be completely air conditioned.

PLAN BUILDING AT MILWAUKEE AND CENTRAL

Herman B. Meyer has purchased the southwest corner of Milwaukee and Central avenues from Mary E. Smith and will erect a one and two story business block from plans by J. Stanley Wick.

The new building will have a street frontage on the two thoroughfares of 160 feet. In addition to eight stores there will be five offices in the second story.

Jordan & Wilkinson, who were brokers in the sale to Meyer, are renting agents for the property.

Leases Entire Building at 664 North Clark Street

Joseph Winkler has leased the entire building at 664 North Clark street, containing two stores and a thirty-four room hotel, from the Northern Trust company, trustee for the Edward G. Clark estate, for five years at an undisclosed rental, through the Coffman Realty company. The lessee will remodel the first floor.

Rents Last Apartment in 2430 Lake View

George L. Mallery, president of the Security Mutual Casualty company, has rented the last available apartment in the 2430 Lake View building, a fourteen room duplex. Miss Kathryn Nelson, of Ross & Browne, negotiated the lease.

Downtown Model Home Opens Today

Workmen were putting the finishing touches yesterday on the "New American Home" at Michigan avenue and Roosevelt road, preparatory to its opening to the public today. It will be available for inspection daily until Dec. 15, according to Stuyvesant Peabody, chairman of the New American Home committee. John Howard Raftery of Frazier & Raftery is architect. More is told about this project in another column on this page.

"NEW AMERICAN HOME" WILL BE OPENED TODAY

The "New American Home," built at a reported cost of $15,500 at Michigan avenue and Roosevelt road by several nationally known corporations as an incentive to home building, will be open to the public this morning at 9 o'clock and daily thereafter until Dec. 15. An admission fee of ten cents will be charged. The receipts will be used to pay for the building, after which all funds will be given to charity, A. L. Fridstein, general manager of the project, announced.

The formal dedication will take place this afternoon at 3:50. Public officials and leaders of the home project will be present.

The "New American Home," designed by John Howard Raftery of Frazier & Raftery, was financed by R. Cooper Jr., representing General Electric company; Portland Cement association, Crane company, and a number of other corporations and individuals. It is being sponsored by the Federal Housing administration, with a "New American Home Committee of Chicago" headed by Stuyvesant Peabody in charge. Mayor Kelly is honorary chairman.

The first floor contains a large combination living room and dining room and an all electric kitchen, entrance hall, and utility room, with an inside entrance into a one car garage, which is an integral part of the building. On the second floor, reached by a spiral stairway, are three bedrooms and two baths.

Walgreen Company Rents Roosevelt-Kedzie Corner

The Walgreen company has leased the corner store in the building at the southwest corner of Roosevelt road and Kedzie avenue, for twenty years beginning Nov. 1, and will open a 43x82 store as soon as extensive remodeling is completed. Loewenberg & Loewenberg are architects. Gaytime Frock company leased the adjoining store at 3205 West Roosevelt road for five years. The George S. Lurie company and Lester Simon & Co. were brokers.

Contracts Awarded

Contracts awarded in Chicago the week of Sept. 18 to 24, according to figures supplied by the F. W. Dodge corporation, totaled thirty-three, with a combined cost of $623,200. For the corresponding week last year there were thirty-five contracts, totaling $631,773. So far this year the total cost of contracts is $28,754,100, compared with $17,468,709 for the same period last year.

BUSINESS BLOCK TO BE BUILT AT CICERO-MONROE

Plans are being prepared by Cedric Allan Shantz, architect, for a one story business block to be erected at the northeast corner of Cicero avenue and Monroe street, for James Katsivales, owner.

Fronting 135 feet on Cicero and 96 on Monroe, the building will be faced with terra cotta and will contain eight stores. It will be set back, with a thirty foot strip of grass and shrubs along the Monroe street side to conform to building line restrictions in this block.

According to J. A. Malooly & Co., renting agents, three of the stores already have been spoken for.

Prof. Noe Will Address Society of Engineers

Dr. Adolph C. Noe of the department of geology and paleontology at the University of Chicago, and an authority on mining and geology of coal will be guest of honor and principal speaker at the 67th annual meeting and dinner of the Western Society of Engineers, tomorrow evening at the Union League club. Dr. Noe will give an illustrated account of his recent trip to Southern Mexico where he inspected little known coal deposits.

KING OF GREECE CALLED PRISONER OF DICTATORSHIP

Metaxas Acts to Stifle All Opposition.

GENEVA, Sept. 26.—In view of complete lack of reliable information from Greece because of strict censorship, the report by a British official who has just arrived in Geneva has considerable interest.

He declares that the dictatorship's efforts are being concentrated on stifling all possible or even eventual opposition. Gen. Reppas, Col. Plizanopoulos and Admiral Oexonomou have been disgraced merely because they do not enjoy Premier John Metaxas' confidence. They are under police surveillance, though they have not been arrested.

It is reported that King George refused to sign the decree cashiering Gen. Reppas, one of the three officers who overthrew the Tsaldaris cabinet last year and restored the monarchy by the Oct. 10 coup.

King's Attitude Mystery.

Very little, however, is known of the king's real attitude, according to this informant, since he is held virtually incommunicado in his summer residence in Corfu, where he has received only Metaxas' new cabinet ministers for the taking of their oath before they assumed office.

Parliamentary leaders, particularly Alexander Papanastasiou and George Kafandaris, hope to be received by the king when he returns from Corfu and to be able to persuade him to renounce the dictatorial experiment. This, however, seems improbable as George would find it difficult to disavow Gen. Metaxas after the latter's Fascist speech at Saloniki and his repeated boast that his government is "permanent and unshakable and enjoys the king's fullest confidence."

Making full use of the unlimited facilities afforded by martial law, Metaxas' police minister, Maniadakis, has started a ruthless campaign against opposition and labor elements arresting not only labor union leaders, but also any workers seemingly able to take up union leadership.

1,000 Political Prisoners.

The actual number of political prisoners is difficult to ascertain, but there must be more than 1,000. Most of them have been deporterd to semideserted Aegean islands where they are not allowed to communicate with anyone. Conditions on these isles are bad, as adequate water, food, and medicine are lacking.

It is extremely difficult to gauge public opinion under such conditions, but there are several signs indicating a clear though impotent reaction against the dictatorship. One of them is the total lack of public interest in the newspapers which, since the censorship, have lost 60 to 90 per cent of their circulation. Those friendliest to Metaxas have lost most.

Another sign is the visible public disinterest in the premier's speeches. After the chilly reception he had at Saloniki he decided to speak only over the radio.

BLAME PERSONAL VENGEANCE FOR N. Y. AX MURDER

New York, Sept. 26.—[Special.]—Personal vengeance rather than gangland retribution caused the slaying of Thomas Kerins, 32, policy runner, the police decided tonight.

Kerins' body, hacked in many places with an ax, the head almost decapitated, was found at dawn today in "Poultry alley," near the New York Central railroad live poultry terminal.

The slayers dumped the petty racketeer's body in the alley after killing him elsewhere, the police said.

Witness Held in Chinese Murder Seeks Freedom

A habeas corpus petition was filed in Criminal court yesterday for Eng Ho, 45 years old, Chinese restaurant owner, held by the police as a material witness in the murder of John Eng, 60 years old, who was shot to death in his restaurant, the Paradise inn, at 4007 Madison street, Friday. On the plea of Assistant State's Attorney Walter McCoy Judge Rudolph Desort delayed the hearing until Tuesday to give investigators a chance to find Eng Ho's brother, Eng King, whose picture has been identified as that of the man who fired the fatal shot. The two brothers are owners of a restaurant at 18 South Pulaski road, around the corner from the Paradise inn.

TRACES OF POLAR EXPLORERS LOST IN 1912 FOUND

Clothing Discovered on Remote Isle.

MOSCOW, Sept. 26.—(AP)—Traces of an Arctic expedition which perished in 1912 were asserted today to have been found in the Kara sea as a party of modern explorers raced for port in the damaged Russian icebreaker Sadko.

The Russian hydrographic boat Toros reported to the All-Union Arctic institute it had discovered on a remote island in the Kara sea traces of the lost expedition of V. A. Rusanoff. Rusanoff perished in 1912 in the far north.

Members of the crew of the Toros said they found clothing, cartridges and small personal belongings which have been dispatched to Moscow for identification.

Tries to Reach Island.

The Toros was stated to be trying now to reach the island where it is believed Rusanoff's men perished.

At the same time, farther west above the Arctic Circle, the Sadko made for Murmansk after being damaged while trying to assist the Russian ice breaker Rusanoff from its icetrap off Randolph Island.

The Rusanoff was trapped Sept. 9 while scientists and members of its crew were trudging across an ice floe carrying supplies for the establishment of the northernmost camp in the world.

The Sadko, which had sailed July 24 with a pretentious scientific expedition in search of a mysterious "land of high mountains," rushed to the rescue and stood by until the Rusanoff broke free Sept. 21.

Ship Badly Damaged.

Today it was disclosed that the Sadko had been squeezed in the ice last week while trying to assist the Rusanoff, and was badly damaged.

The propeller and the rudder frame were affected and the crew was stated to have difficulty in steering the ship—which was considered dangerous because of the large icefields through which the ship must pass.

A diver was sent down to make temporary repairs, and the damage was found to be so serious that the All-Union Arctic institute ordered the ship immediately to make for the winter port of Murmansk.

Meanwhile, the Rusanoff was off for a new battle to get its expedition's supplies ashore on Randolpn Island. The ship sailed from Tikhaya bay in an attempt to unload material for the expedition, after which the plan was for it to return to Archangel. Explorers in the expedition planned to camp for the winter on Randolph Island.

PASTORS MUST GIVE NAZI SALUTE WHILE WEARING VESTMENTS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Sept. 26.—German pastors must extend the Nazi salute even when they are wearing their clerical vestments, the national committee of the German Evangelical church ruled today. This rule, however, does not apply to clergymen while they are officiating. They will be permitted to greet their congregations in the customary way. The clergymen, when raising their right arms, also are expected to add: "Heil Hitler." The church committee explained that to Christians this salue means "a prayer to God to bless the Fuehrer, the fatherland, and the nation."

Evangelist Aimee Clashes with Daughter on Policies

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 26.—(AP)—Roberta Semple said today if her mother, Aimee Semple McPherson, discusses from the Angelus temple pulpit tomorrow their argument over church management, she will take the platform to tell her version. The dispute affects the status of Giles Knight, new temple business manager. Miss Semple charged her mother would delegate to Knight powers vested in the board of trustees.

8 JAP WARSHIPS NEAR SHANGHAI WITH MARINES

Nipponese Demand China Give Better Protection.

[Copyright: 1936: By the Associated Press.]

SHANGHAI, Sept. 27.—[Sunday.]—Eight Japanese destroyers, loaded with marines, neared anxious Shanghai today.

Outwardly, the residents of the city were calm, but in official circles apprehension was heightened over possible recurrence of Japanese-Chinese "incidents" in the international settlement.

Ask More Jap Police.

Japanese naval leaders also pressed for more Japanese on the international settlement police force—a long debated issue in Shanghai.

Japanese consular officials in Shanghai earlier renewed their protests that the killing of a Japanese and the wounding of his two comrades had demonstrated that Chinese authorities are incapable of protecting foreigners' lives.

To this the Chinese replied that every possible" protection was being afforded by them and by the guardians of the international settlement.

Demand More Security.

"We have informed Shanghai international settlement authorities and Chinese officials of greater Shanghai that we demand great efforts to provide Japanese residents with a place of greater safety in which to live," a high official of the Japanese consulate declared.

"We hope these administrations comply with our desires which any reasonable person would consider reasonable. In the event they do not we will be forced to reply with our own efforts."

NOTED BACHELOR FRIENDS TO MARK BIRTHDAYSTODAY

Two prominent Waukegan bachelors will observe a joint celebration of their birthdays today in their home at 122 North Utica street, where they have lived for 32 years. They are Dr. Samuel W, Chidester, dean of the Waukegan ministers, who will be 82, and John E. Baggett, superintendent emeritus of the Lake Forest public schools, who will be 72.

For 32 years Dr. Chidester has been pastor of the First Presbyterian church at Waukegan. Mr. Baggett retired a year ago from his school post. On Wednesday the pupils and teachers of Lake Forest will gather there at the Gorton school to honor both men.

Queen Mary Quits Buckingham Palace Soon After 25 Years

LONDON, Sept. 26.—(AP)—Queen Mary of England, after more than twenty-five years as mistress of Buckingham palace, will move next week to the old home she first entered as a bride on the arm of the late King George, then duke of York.

The queen will take up residence in Marlbourough house, yielding her place in Buckingham to King Edward VIII. of England.

Preparing for the change, the queen today named the French chef Amelo to preside over her kitchens. He formerly was first assistant at Buckingham palace.

Supervises Decorations.

Details of decoration of her new home were supervised by the queen herself. Although Mayfair fashion at the moment decress patterned wallpapers with floral and abstract designs, Queen Mary followed her individual taste and chose simple papers remarkable for their texture rather than originality of design.

Her favorite hyrangea shades of pink, mauve, and blue have been chosen for private apartments—paint work in these colors having long been a feature of her majesty's suites at Buckingham palace and Sandringham house, Norfolk.

Marlborough house was built by Sir Christopher Wren, architect of St. Paul's cathedral and many famous London buildings, in 1708 on a site granted by Queen Anne to Sarah Jennings, first duchess of Marlborough and wife of the victor of Blenheim.

Once Home of Leopold.

The house was at one time residence of Prince Leopold, Queen Victoria's uncle and first king of the Belgians. When he left England it became for the first time the home of a widowed queen, King William IV., having acquired the mansion by act of parliament for the use of Queen Adelaide after his death.

King Edward VII., then prince of Wales, lived there from 1862 until he ascended the throne, and King George V., was born there and made the mansion his home until he succeeded to the throne in 1910.

Since King George's mother, Alexandra, died ten years ago, Marlborough house has been unoccupied.

ASK PEACE IN SUIT OF WIFE AGAINST FOX LAKE MAYOR

Arthur J. Amundsen, 57 years old, village president of Fox Lake, and his wife, Rose, 54 years old, may yet save their 35 years of marriage from ending in divorce. If Attorney Harry A. Hall can arrange it, they will try marriage again.

"I intend to confer with Mrs. Amundsen and her attorney in an effort at reconciliation," said Hall yesterday when he filed his appearance for Amundsen before Judge Ralph J. Dady of the Lake county Circuit court at Waukegan. "There is really no reason why this couple can't get together again."

Mrs. Amundsen sued for divorce on Sept. 10, charging her husband with excessive drinking, and being quarrelsome, abusive, and cruel. Amundsen did not learn of this action for several days, while he continued to live at home, eating her meals. Eventually Mrs. Amundsen locked him out, and the village president took up temporary quarters elsewhere.

Gold Franc Cut.

France, the last great power to maintain a gold basis for its paper money, went off the gold standard temporarily yesterday when debtors were authorized to suspend payments in gold and the stock market was closed for several days. Socialist Premier Leon Blum ordered an extraordinary session of parliament for tomorrow. Finance Minister Vincent Auriol announced that parliament would be asked to devalue gold basis of the franc by about a third.

To prevent an international currency war France obtained a gentleman's agreement with the United States and Great Britain that they would not devalue the dollar and the pound sterling in retaliation. Since Great Britain went off the gold standard in September, 1931, and the United States followed in March, 1933, their cheap money has given them an advantage in foreign trade.

Financiers have believed that this handicap made the devaluation of the franc inevitable. Increasing exportation of gold by Frenchmen since the radical Popular Front won the parliamentary election last May provided the crisis. The capitalists feared uncontroled inflation. The French cabinet was forced to protect the gold reserve which standardizes the franc by fixing a lower standard.

Holland ordered a gold embargo, Belgium joined the international money accord, and Switzerland announced it would consider devaluation tomorrow.

Before the war the franc was worth 20 cents. But France's debts and issuance of paper currency forced the franc down to 4 cents in 1926. Then Premier Poincare fixed the gold franc at 4 cents and until the depression France enjoyed financial stability and prosperity. The devaluation action of Great Britain and the United States made it difficult for the gold franc to compete with the dollar and the pound in foreign exchange. [See Business Review for complete analysis and main news section for latest developments.]

Spanish Revolt.

What's the Spanish civil war about? Who is fighting? After seventy days of bloodshed these questions still are asked daily. Here are some answers:

Q.—Who started the war? A.—Army officers, Fascists, and opponents of the Madrid radical republican administration, including many wealthy, "landed" families and some church officials.

Q.—Why did they rebel against Madrid? A.—They were pushed out of political power by the popular front government.

Q.—What is the popular front government? A.—A political coalition of Socialists, anarchists, communists and left republicans.

Q.—Who is head of the government? A.—The titular head is President Manuel Azaña, but the principal power, at present, is vested in Premier Francisco Largo Caballero, an extreme socialist.

Q.—Who are the leaders of the Fascist insurgents? A.—The Fascist leaders are Gen. Francisco Franco, leader of the Moors and foreign legion, and Gen. Emilio Mola, commander of the northern Fascist army.

From Monday to Thursday in the tenth week of the war the loyalist defense of Madrid against the encircling rebels seemed to be crumbling. But on Thursday the government, copying the Belgians who opened the dikes in the world war to delay the Germans, opened the Alberche river power dam thirty-six miles west of Madrid [see map] and flooded the lowlands to the south which the rebels occupied. The extent of the damage in rebel lives, war machinery and communication lines was uncertain, but it gave the loyalists an advantage in a great counter-offensive as the week ended.

The rebels capped a three weeks' thirty-five mile advance from Talavera to Maqueda with the capture of the highway junction forty miles southwest of Madrid on Monday. The motorized column led by rebel Col. Juan Yague had gained 210 miles in a month after the fall of Badajoz on the Portuguese border. In the capture of Maqueda rebel planes demoralized the loyalists by bombing and strafing [machine gunning] them from a height of ninety feet. The rebels immediately pushed northward to Santa Cruz and eastward to Torrijos. At these points they were stopped as Madrid drafted all able bodied men between the ages of 18 and 45 and poured reinforcements southward. Last night the rebels claimed to have captured Toledo and rescued their allies besieged in the Alcazar. This was denied by the government at Madrid.

Meanwhile the rebels bombed Bilbao on the north coast Friday and yesterday. [See main news section.]

Il Duce Slapped.

The league of nations generally can find a rule of procedure whenever it wants to dodge an issue. But last week it could find no way of barring the Ethiopia of exiled Emperor Haile Selassie as a league member. The question was whether Ethiopia, the country supported by the league [at least theoretically] in its defense against Italy, was ineligible as a member because it had been defeated in war by Italy.

Refusal of Premier Mussolini to send his Italian delegates to Geneva until Ethiopian delegates had been rejected forced the issue when the 18th league assembly began its meeting last Monday. Great Britain and France had insisted on Italy's return to obtain its coöperation in peace measures. Haile Selassie arrived from England to demand his rights. He shrewdly appointed Everett A. Colson, his American financial adviser, as a delegate. Thus the first American ever delegated to the league faced disbarment.

It was up to the league's credentials committee to decide how Ethiopia was to be unseated. Until Wednesday it was entangled in technicalities. Haile Selassie presented evidence that a tribal government at Gore in western Ethiopia recognized him as emperor. [See map.] Smaller nations, fearing they some day might be treated like Ethiopia, demanded that an Ethiopian government be admitted. The credentials committee at first debated a scheme to ask the advice of the world court on Ethiopia's eligibility and meanwhile exclude its delegates. Haile Selassie demanded to know exactly who was contesting his governmental authority. The answer was no one. Not even Britain wanted the responsibility. Italy, of course, was not present as an objector. The result was a recommendation to seat Ethiopia and the assembly did so.

In Rome Italians said the league's action might drive Mussolini to resign his membership, but it was reported that friendly powers had advised him to hurry the complete conquest of Ethiopia to eliminate its claim to a responsible government.

Japan in China.

Since Aug. 24 at least five Japanese citizens have been killed in China and at least seven incidents have been added to the countless attacks of Chinese on Japanese. Last Wednesday Chinese gunmen killed a Japanese marine and wounded two others in Shanghai. This climaxed the month's score which Japan has to settle with the Chinese government. Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita and Minister of Navy Osami Nagano at Tokio decided settlement of the almost innumerable anti-Japanese incidents in China should be done diplomatically. But the Japanese navy was concentrated on the coast of China, Japanese war machinery was paraded around Peiping and Tientsin in North China, and marines were landed at Pakhoi in South China, Hankow in central China and Shanghai on the eastern coast. [See map.]

In Shanghai the arrival of 2,000 marines to patrol the streets of various sections recalled Japan's naval bombardment of that city in 1932 to break a trade boycott and end the Chinese 19th route army's challenge of Japanese military domination of Manchuria [now Manchukuo and Japanese]. But last week the remnants of the 19th route army was far to the south in Pakhoi, where a Japanese had been killed. There the veterans attempted to prevent Japanese warships from landing investigating officers and marines. The veterans defied Nanking Dictator Chiang Kai-shek's order to withdraw until Tuesday. Then they decided to evacuate and permit the investigation.

Japan holds the national government of Chiang Kai-shek responsible for everything, although Chiang goes to great lengths to pacify Japan. He is hindered by his countrymen's natural resentment of Japanese imperialism in China.

Yesterday the tension was eased when Japan withdrew most of its marines from the Chinese section of Shanghai without explanation.

Last Parade

Seventy-one years ago Pennsylvania avenue in Washington, D. C., was packed with 200,000 marching soldiers. They were troops of the victorious Union army, passing in review before President Andrew Johnson. Last Wednesday fewer than 700 aged and feeble veterans—their average age was 92—of the same army marched down Pennsylvania avenue for the last time. They were in the capital for the annual convention of the Grand Army of the Republic.

C. H. Williams Ruhe, 87, of Pittsburgh, who ran away from home at the age of 15 to join the Union army, was elected commander-in-chief of the G. A. R. The veterans voted down suggestions to designate the convention as the last national encampment and chose Madison, Wis., as the scene of the 71st annual encampment in 1937.

Politics

With Gov. Landon.

In three major campaign speeches last week Gov. Landon continued to carry the fight to his New Deal opponents. At Des Moines, Ia., Tuesday evening, before a huge crowd at the state fair grounds, he met the challenge of the farm problem by presenting a definite program of protection for the family type farm.

"I believe the American farmer should be lord on his own farm," he said.

The Republican nominee took direct issue with the New Deal policy of permanent control of agriculture from Washington. He expounded the Republican ideal of a program of plenty as opposed to the New Deal's planned scarcity and destruction of crops. Gov. Landon pledged himself to payment of cash benefits limited to the production level on the family type farm.

In Minneapolis on Thursday evening the candidate demanded foreign trade bargaining based on the interest of the American producer. This speech, a denunciation of the New Deal's "star chamber" reciprocal trade agreements, was complementary to his address on agricultural problems.

"With the most intelligent and capable farm population in the world," he said, "and with unsurpassed natural resources, we are now one of the largest importers not only of those things we do not produce, but of those we are adapted to produce. This is a scandalous situation!"

Last night the governor made the third speech in Milwaukee. He attacked the administration's social security law as "unjust, unworkable, stupidly drafted, and wastefully financed." [See main news section.]

From Topeka to Des Moines and throughout the tour the governor made scores of rear platform addresses to large crowds in towns through which his special train passed. Everywhere he was hailed with enthusiasm. The response in Minnesota and Wisconsin gave party leaders high hopes that these states, considered in the doubtful column, would swing to Landon in November.

The governor planned to spend today conferring with former Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois at the latter's Sinissippi farm, near Oregon, Ill., leaving for Topeka tonight.

Roosevelt Campaign.

The highlight of the Roosevelt week were conferences at his Hyde Park, N. Y., home with Democratic leaders, at which plans for the forthcoming tour of the west were drawn. [See main news section.]

With less than forty days of the campaign remaining Democratic strategists were reported to have urged Mr. Roosevelt to speed up his program. He is to make two major addresses this week. Next Tuesday he will address the New York state Democratic convention in Syracuse and Thursday he will speak in Pittsburgh.

The major tour will take the President as far west as Denver. He also will speak in Chicago and may speak in several other cities of the middle west. [See map.] Following his invasion of the west Mr. Roosevelt will tour New England and New York state, winding up the campaign with a speech in Madison Square Garden, New York City, on the last Saturday before election day.

Mr. Roosevelt last week discarded for the first time the mask of "nonpolitical" activity. He frankly assumed the rôle of a candidate seeking reëlection and told his associates he intended to center his fight in the middle west and the industrial east.

Al Smith Defers.

Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York, one of the leading Democrats now opposed to the New Deal, sent President Roosevelt a telegram. In it he said he had changed the time of the radio broadcast of a speech he will deliver in New York next Thursday in order to prevent a conflict with the broadcast of the President's speech from Pittsburgh.

In closing, the telegram said:

"In deference to the high office which you hold, I do not wish to interfere with your having a nation-wide audience. . . ."

On Friday a curt, twelve word reply, signed by Marvin H. McIntyre, assistant White House secretary, was sent to former Gov. Smith. It read:

"The President asks me to thank you very much for your telegram."

Political Notes.

In the fourth weekly announcement of results in the Literary Digest presidential poll it was shown that Gov. Landon is maintaining a lead of more than 3 to 2 over President Roosevelt. Votes from twenty-one states totaled 503,509. Landon received 293,972, Roosevelt 185,495, and William Lemke, Union party candidate, 19,632 votes.

Formally indorsing a political candidate for the first time, H. L. Mencken, author and critic, writing in the October issue of the American Mercury, advocated the election of Gov. Landon. "I believe," he says, "it will be a good idea to try the Hon. Mr. Landon of Kansas. . . ." Elsewhere in the article he indicts the New Deal on many counts. He charged that the New Deal, "for all its pretensions, is at bottom a scheme to buy votes, and there is no getting away from that fact."

Reports from Rome that the vatican was displeased with the continued political activity of the Rev. Charles Coughlin, Detroit radio priest, brought a statement from the priest Friday. "I'll keep on going just the same as I am," he said, after expressing the belief that he expected no rebuke.

Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President, speaking in Chicago on Thursday, criticized the New Deal and said: "It is fantastic for the New Dealers to talk of their love for democracy in view of the records of Democratic governors."

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace on Friday delivered the Roosevelt administration's reply to Gov. Landon's Des Moines farm speech. His talk, broadcast from Washington under auspices of the Democratic national committee, was a tirade against the bankers, the munitions makers, the Liberty league, and "the forces which have been behind the Republican party since the great war."

John D. Rockefeller Jr. replied in New York to Democratic criticism of his contribution to the Republican campaign fund in Maine. Speaking for himself, his wife, and his son John, Rockefeller said: "We believe not only that it is our right as citizens to make such contributions as we wish toward the legitimate expenses of the political party in whose principles and leadership we have faith, but also that it is our clear duty to do so."

Twenty-two years ago Armand J. Bolon deserted from the French army. Recently authorities found him in the attic of his father's home in Nancy, France. He had been living in the attic since his desertion.

Frank B. Seaton, a deputy county clerk at Utica, N. Y., asked permission from state and city officials to shoot a woodpecker. "The bird is slowly but surely eating my house," he said.

One of a pair of love birds owned by C. S. Woodward of Walla Walla, Wash., died. The surviving bird refused to eat. Woodward put a mirror in its cage and the bird regained its appetite.

T. C. Naramore's house is on the edge of a steep hill in Los Angeles. He was standing under a tree in his front yard. Suddenly most of the yard disappeared in a landslide, leaving the house perched precariously on the edge of the hill.

Farmer Elmer Mains of Delaware, O., wanted to sell a cow. He advertised in a newspaper thusly: "I don't know what is the matter with this cow. Some days she will give three gallons and other days only a quart."

David Abrahams, 18 months old, strayed from his home at Kittanning, Pa., to a nearby railroad track. He fell asleep between the rails. A 100 car freight train passed over him. The baby's only injury was a cut on the forehead.

The official temperature at Traverse City, Mich., was 90 degrees, a September heat record, on Wednesday. Next day the temperature was 45 and snow fell.

BARBER AND HIS BRIDE.

While vacationing on her ranch in Arizona, Laurette Robeson, Rhode Island heiress, met and fell in love with Lawrence Tidrick, Flagstaff, Ariz., barber. They were married. Returning from their honeymoon in Colorado, Mrs. Tidrick said: "We had one swell time." The bride and her husband will live on Mrs. Tidrick's ranch.

The City

County's Woes.

Old and new troubles in the county building—coming as its Democratic occupants concentrated on holding their offices in the November elections—piled up last week. The developments:

1. Frank V. Zintak, clerk of Superior court until two weeks ago when he was charged with embezzlement of $22,560, appeared Monday before Chief Justice Michael L. McKinley and pleaded not guilty. This plea was immediately withdrawn and Zintak's attorney, Stephen Love, informed the court a motion to quash the embezzlement indictment would be filed. Justice McKinley postponed Zintak's arraignment until this Tuesday. Love handed out a statement in which Zintak denied he ever had confessed a shortage in funds in his custody to State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney and Clayton Smith, county board president, as they said he did. Likewise Zintak denied knowledge of any shortage.

Meanwhile investigation of Zintak's conduct as court clerk was expanded in several directions, including his private and public bank accounts. After obtaining a search warrant and opening a safe deposit box belonging to Zintak, investigators on Friday asked a second indictment—charging him with the larceny of $3,000 in government bonds. These, according to testimony, had been diverted as collateral for a personal loan after they were deposited in a damage suit.

Zintak, who previously had turned a deaf ear to suggestions from party leaders that he quit the Democratic ticket, finally withdrew last night. In a statement he repeated denials that he was guilty of fraud. [See main news section.]

2. John O. Rees, director of the committee on public expenditures, on Tuesday announced that enforcement by county judges of existing laws governing the handling of public funds would greatly reduce shortage frauds. Within two years twenty persons, including ten employés, have made off with county funds totaling $680,000. Included is the $533,817 shortage auditors found last year after Robert M. Sweitzer left the office of county clerk. This led to legislation fifteen months ago requiring all public officials to deposit all funds with the county treasurer each month, and restricting his disbursement of these funds. Rees said officials and judges had failed to obey this law through indifference.

Rees' statement brought promises of action on Thursday. Board President Smith said the state's attorney's office had notified him of the law and that he in turn had notified county officials that they should turn over their funds to County Treasurer Joseph L. Gill. Little more had been done. County Clerk Michael J. Flynn said he had offered to turn over the tax redemption fund [involved in the Sweitzer shortage], but that Gill had objected that it would require a special department. Gill denied this. One by one heads of county offices, including Brig. Gen. Edward H. White, Zintak's temporary successor, responded to public criticism and agreed to obey the law.

3. Courtney and Smith on Thursday demanded an investigation of charges that certain county officials were accepting "commissions" for assigning their business to stenographic agencies. This was disclosed in a federal government attempt to collect a 1934 income tax from Edward J. Walton on $15,458 he had written off as business "commissions." Walton's agency does the bulk of city and county stenographic reporting. Walton declared that paying a "kickback" to county officials for bringing him business was an "ordinary practice," but he refused to say whom he paid. Largest appropriations for stenographic reporting are $62,000 for Coroner Frank J. Walsh and $52,000 for Courtney. Walsh said he had proved to revenue agents that he had received no such "commissions," and suggested the money might have been contributed to the Democratic party campaign funds. Courtney proposed that the county board investigate and Smith said it would be a "fine thing" if Courtney did.

Sabath Quiz.

For two years Congressman A. J. Sabath's congressional committee has been investigating real estate bondholders' committees, reorganizations, receiverships, and related subjects. But persons who have acquired leases on property and their associates have consistently avoided questioning by J. L. Tupy, investigator for the committee.

Last week in Chicago 21 persons were served with summons to appear before the committee or face citations for contempt of court. Two of them were Attorney Stephen Love, now retained in the Zintak shortage case [see County's Woes], and Samuel Leeds, lessee of the Garfield Arms hotel. Tupy charged that Leeds, in the presence of Love, had told Harold W. Gift, a Garfield Arms clerk, to lie in his testimony. Love denied it.

"This is one of the worst cases before us," said Congressman Sabath when Leeds avoided citation by appearing. "Mr. Leeds has obtained leases on five or six hotels for one-half or one-third of what the leases were worth. Records were said to have been falsified and money withheld which should have been accounted for, and thereby the bondholders have been cheated. If half what we have been told about Leeds is true, he should be indicted."

After hearing similar cases, the committee adjourned until Oct. 13. Then it will attempt to ferret out "rockbound proof of fraud."

Relief.

Chapman & Cutler, bankers' attorneys, indicated that new legislation [see Legislature] had removed all legal objections to the city's sale of warrants to banks against 30 cent tax per $100 property valuation which the city council voted to levy for relief. The city obtained no funds on this tax since taking over the state's relief administration last July because the bankers' attorneys found that it threatened the taxpayers of overlapping local governments with double taxation. Bills passed last week empowered Cook county to change township lines which cross Chicago's limits. Lacking the tax funds and unable at first to obtain increased aid from the state, the city has been forced to cut relief far under the needs.

City Notes.

James L. McManus, a realty operator who has been inconvenienced by all-night automobile parking on 64th street, sued in Superior court for an order compelling Mayor Kelly and Police Commissioner Allman to enforce the parking law. This prohibits parking longer than 30 minutes between 2 a. m. and 6 a. m. on any Chicago street. The law has been poorly enforced. Trafic engineers have estimated that about 100,000 motor cars are parked overnight on Chicago streets.

The city council learned it will have to lay off 24,000 men in the street department on Oct. 1. This is necessitated, it was said, because the city is paying $1,530,711 from the 1936 appropriation for restoration of employés' salary cuts made in 1931. The cost of taking a permanent registration of voters raised the shortage to $2,045,379. To continue street cleaning and collection of garbage without curtailment from October to January, Oscar Hewitt, city commissioner of public works, requested federal officials to furnish WPA labor.

FINANCE-SPORTS

Reviews of the week in finance and general business and also of sports are to be found in the finance and sports sections.

Washington

The new United States maritime commission came into being Thursday and will begin to function shortly. The commission, appointed by President Roosevelt, is composed of Rear Admiral Henry A. Wiley, retired; Rear Admiral Harry G. Hamlet; and George Landick Jr., chief of the planning section of the treasury's procurement division. Until Hamlet's retirement from the coast guard next month Rear Admiral Montgomery M. Taylor will serve as a temporary member. Under the terms of the new ship subsidy act these men will be vested with the broadest dictatorial powers in the history of the nation's shipping.

Authority of the commission over shipping interests that accept the government's direct cash subsidies will include the right to snoop into all books and records, general supervision and audit of accounts, enforcement of recapture of profits and provisions forbidding lobbying. The new law also provides for limiting the salaries of shipping officials to $25,000 a year.

Violations will be punishable by a fine of $10,000 for an individual and $25,000 for a corporation. The commission may declare offenders ineligible for subsidy benefits for five years. The act provides for the termination of postal subsidies under the old ocean mail act. Ship operators were granted one year in which to settle present mail contracts and negotiate for direct subsidies.

The senate committee headed by Robert M. La Follette [Prog., Wis.], which is conducting an inquiry into "civil liberties violations in industrial disputes," resumed taking testimony. The committee heard that one company selling instruments of industrial warfare, chiefly tear gas and tear gas guns, started an intensive selling drive when the Committee for Industrial Organization [CIO], the labor group which broke away from the American Federation of Labor, started its effort to unionize the steel industry.

A principal witness was A. F. Aisles, an executive of the Lake Erie Chemical company of Cleveland. He said he had participated in demonstrating tear gas attacks for officials of several large steel companies last July, but that no sales resulted. Aisles described a new tear gas projectile, the "Tru-Flite" shell, which he admitted could cause serious injury or death.

Early in the week the committee was encouraged by indictment of six business officials by the District of Columbia grand jury. The six are officials of the Railway Audit and Inspection company, including the president, W. W. Groves. They were charged with failing to appear at a hearing of the committee.

Representatives of 43 private organizations and 38 public agencies assembled in Washington for a two day conference on drouth control. The sessions were directed by Morris L. Cooke, chairman of the long range drouth committee named by the President. The conference was believed to be the first of its kind ever held. Taking part in the discussions were 400 engineers, soil experts, climatologists, and other specialists in conservation.

Since June world war veterans have been paid a total of $1,238,244,560 in cash, or 70 per cent of the outstanding bonus, the treasury announced. The amount paid revealed that approximately three-fourths of the veterans preferred cash to holding their bonds for an accumulation of 3 per cent interest up to 1945. In addition to redemption of the bonds cashed, the treasury has cashed a total of $80,182,292 in checks representing odd amounts not covered by the even $50 denomination of the bonds.

It was reported from Moscow that soviet officials consider William C. Bullitt, recently appointed United States ambassador to France, still is ambassador to Russia. The state department announced, however, that Russia had been officially notified of Mr. Bullitt's transfer. A new envoy to Russia has not been appointed.

Officials of the AAA announced that federal benefit payments to 6,000,000 farm owners, operators, and tenants would begin in October. Many appeals, especially from drouth states, have been received, said H. R. Tolley, farm administrator.

Donald Wakefield Smith, Washington attorney, was appointed to the National Labor Relations board by the President. He succeeds John M. Carmody, who resigned to accept an appointment with the Rural Electrification administration.

Public works projects estimated to cost $21,733,568 were approved by President Roosevelt. The government agreed to make grants of $9,531,459 and loans of $264,000 toward these projects in 33 states, Porto Rico and Hawaii. The largest grant, $3,000,000, was to Seattle, Wash., to help meet the cost of constructing additional power generating and transmission facilities, including a reservoir and dam on the Skagit river.

Crime

Chicago police were confronted Friday with another hotel rape and assault mystery. The latest of the recent series of similar attacks occurred in the Washington hotel, 167 West Washington street. The victim, Miss Alda Deery, 25, a vaudeville actress, was assaulted with a brick and raped about 4:30 a. m. Before leaving the attacker tied one of her stockings around her neck, apparently in an attempt to strangle her, and then, as he fled, threw a lighted cigaret into the clothes closet of the room. Miss Deery was in a serious condition yesterday, suffering from a brain concussion. Pneumonia developed because of her exposure after the attack.

Police were attempting to learn whether there was any connection between this crime and the murders of three women in other hotels in recent months. Miss Deery said she had no idea of her assailant's identity. In their hunt for clews police were seeking friends of the victim who had been with her on a drinking party earlier in the night. [See main news section.]

The United States courthouse in Chicago was the scene last week of a hearing which recalled one of the city's most sensational murder mysteries—the slaying on the night of Feb. 2, 1935, of Louis K. Straub, who was shot to death in the Saddle and Cycle club at Sheridan road and Foster avenue, where he was night bartender.

Master in Chancery Jacob L. Grossman took evidence on the question of whether Mrs. Melba Straub, widow of the murder victim, shot and killed her husband. Mrs. Straub was not on trial. She was formally accused, however, in the civil action by a brother and two nephews of the slain man, who protested against the payment of Straub's $20,410 life insurance to her. If Master Grossman is convinced by the evidence that Mrs. Straub killed her husband he will recommend that the insurance be paid to the brother, Ernest, manager of the Saddle and Cycle club, and the two nephews.

The sensation came Thursday when Mrs. Straub, on the witness stand, denied she had killed her husband. She testified she loved him at the time of his death. Later attorneys for the other side attempted to prove she had made many conflicting statements to police at the time the crime was being investigated. [See main news section.]

Hearing of evidence in the trial of twelve men accused of the Black Legion murder of Charles A. Poole, WPA worker, ended Friday in Detroit. Yesterday defense and prosecuting attorneys were preparing final arguments. During the week the defendants testified. One of them, Harvey Davis, so-called Black Legion colonel, named as the man who plotted the Poole murder, denied the charge and accused Dayton Dean, confessed trigger man of the terrorist society, of being entirely responsible for the crime. Dean, earlier in the trial, testified for the state and made similar accusations against Davis, as well as naming the other defendants as participants in the murder.

Business rivalry between the operators of two Chinese restaurants was believed by police to underlie the murder Friday in Chicago of John Eng, 60, a wealthy Chinese, in his restaurant at 4007 Madison street. Sought as the slayer was Eng King, a Chinese educated in an American university. His photograph was identified by witnesses of the shooting.

A New York state police guard remained on duty in the Norwalk, Conn., hospital room of Don Burdick, New York broker, who faces a charge of shooting with intent to kill his father-in-law, Harry E. Byram, former railroad magnate. Byram has recovered. Burdick was seriously injured in an automobile accident shortly after the shooting in Mr. Byram's Westport, Conn., home on Sept. 4.

The following composite description of the typical American criminal of today was presented in Kansas City, Mo., at the convention of the International Association of Police Chiefs:

"A lazy, vain, moderately educated city youth whose parents have separated; shielding his laziness and an inferiority complex behind a false bravado that leads him into crime; motivated by a desire to impress 'the girl friend' with a flashy appearance of wealth."

The typical criminal, as pictured, can be rehabilitated, in the opinion of the police chiefs.

The North Carolina Supreme court announced it would review the conviction of Martin Moore, colored, who was sentenced to die Oct. 2 for the hotel murder in Asheville, N. C., of Miss Helen Clevenger, New York co-ed. Moore admitted the crime to police, but later repudiated his confession.

Frank Tallach, 17, calmly confessed at the state's attorney's office in Chicago yesterday that he had shot and killed one man and wounded another a week ago last night. The victims were Martin Damamiskis, who was killed at the rear of his home at 2024 Ruble street, and Louis Rolanec, who was shot and severely wounded in front of 1849 Laflin street. Tallach named William Miller, 18, as his companion. Miller is sought. [See main news section.]

Medicine

A fundamental problem which most practicing physicians must face at one time or another is whether a baby malformed at birth should be encouraged to live at whatever cost to itself and to society. Advocates of scientific race and social betterment would say no if the malformation would seriously cripple the baby's mind or body. Under their Hippocrates' oath physicians are sworn to save life. This was the situation that last week confronted Dr. Lewis K. Eastman, chief of staff of the Danish-American hospital in Chicago, in a highly publicized case.

A baby boy was born to Mr. and Mrs. Julian Tafel. Dr. Eastman found that the infant had an imperforate anus—the absence of an intestinal outlet—and a misplaced large intestine connecting with the bladder. Proper nourishment could cause the baby to die of uremia, or poisoning due to lack of elimination. No nourishment would mean death by starvation. At least two operations would be necessary to correct the baby's condition.

Dr. Eastman informed the parents that these operations might be fatal and that if the child survived he might be handicapped physically. The father, 24, an automobile mechanic, objected. His son, he felt, might grow to be a hopeless cripple. The mother, 22, pleaded for her baby. Five days after the child's birth Tafel agreed to the operation and it was performed. But the baby by this time was too weak to survive the surgical shock and resulting complications and died 28 hours later. "I'm glad," said the father. The mother sobbed, "I suppose it is all for the best."

More than 175 cancer specialists attended a post-graduate course of the tumor clinic of the Michael Reese hospital in Chicago all last week.

Dr. Max Cutler, head of the tumor clinic, declared that cancer of the mouth is now 100 per cent curable. The use of radium "molds" in his clinic's experiments for the last five years upheld his declaration, he said. These molds, made of plastic fiber lined with lead, may be fitted into any portion of the mouth like false teeth and make radium treatment more accurate, Dr. Cutler explained. Development of delicate electrical apparatus at the clinic has disclosed that fillings of different metals in the teeth set up electrical currents in acid mouths. These currents, said Dr. Cutler, contribute to lesions leading to cancer in persons susceptible. He said smoking may be a factor leading to cancer only in mouths which have sensitive linings.

Dr. Henri Coutard, director of the X-ray department of the Curie institute of Paris, expounded proof of his theory that cancer cells periodically resist X-ray treatment. In the last ten years Dr. Coutard has found two groups of cancers, one which responds to X-ray treatment and another which does not. Recently, he said, his institute determined that the resistant groups at times were receptive to X-ray treatment.

Sir George Lenthal Cheatle of London gave evidence that cancer was caused by a virus [poison which transmits disease]. He said a filtrate from a cancerous animal had produced cancer in another healthy one. The filtrate contained no germ matter. Dr. Cutler disagreed with the theory.

Humanity has suffered because society has outlawed the toothpick, Dr. W. J. Charters of Des Moines, Ia., told the Southern California Dental association. Manipulation of the toothpick, he said, gave the tissue between the teeth necessary stimulation.

Science

The human race is growing taller and heavier, according to the Journal of the American Medical association. Investigators found that young men entering Harvard are 2 inches taller and 7 pounds heavier than their fathers and grandfathers who went to Harvard. Army recruits in Norway are taller than recruits of 50 years ago. Boys in Germany are bigger than boys of corresponding age in previous generations. Students in Massachusetts are among the tallest in the world. Young women attending Vassar, Wellesley, Smith, and Mount Holyoke colleges are not only taller but heavier than their mothers who attended these schools, it was found.

Harvard university's astronomical observatory confirmed the discovery of a comet by Prof. Cyril Jackson of the Union observatory, South Africa. The comet is of the 12th magnitude in brilliance and located in the constellation Aquarius in the southern skies. A celestial object of the 6th magnitude is the smallest visible to the naked eye. Harvard astronomers also confirmed the discovery of a nova by Nils Tamm of the Kvistaberg observatory at Bro, Sweden. The nova is an exploding star which, for reasons not understood, flares brightly and then fades. Tamm's nova, discovered near the bright star, Vega, is only of the 8th magnitude and is believed to have passed its maximum brilliance.

Dr. Israel Castellanos, director of the Cuban national bureau of identification, told members of the International Association of Police Chiefs at their recent convention in Kansas City how his agents capture many criminals by identification of hair found at the scene of the crime. The analysis of a single hair, he said, can determine whether it is human or animal, the age and sex of its owner, whether the hair is dyed and with what, whether it fell or was pulled out, and frequently the occupation of the owner. If the hair is from a corpse, microscopes will disclose if the person was shot or poisoned, he said.

Mme. Irene Joliot-Curie, daughter of the discoverers of radium, resigned her position as undersecretary of scientific research in the French cabinet, because of "technical differences with the government." Mme. Joliot-Curie, an ardent Socialist, accepted the post in Premier Leon Blum's cabinet because of her Socialist affiliations, believing the additional income would further her scientific research. She and her husband, Prof. Frederick Joliot-Curie, won the Nobel prize in 1935 for their discovery of artificial radio activity and radium substitutes.

"Chocolate bars" made of coal tar are being sold in Berlin [Germany] confectioneries. They look like soap, but taste like chocolate. The synthetic food manufacturers made no attempt to color the bars brown. The candy was the first appearance of "new raw material" announced by Hitler at Nuremburg in his four year plan for a self-sufficient Germany. [See Foreign Notes.]

A LOVING MOTHER?

Reports that Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson, Los Angeles evangelist, and her daughter, Roberta Semple, have quarreled over the management of Angelus temple gained headway last week, although Mrs. McPherson said she had "nothing but love" for her daughter. Roberta threatened to take the pulpit to tell her version of their differences if her mother does so. [See main news section.]

Religion

At a solemn high mass offered in his honor at Holy Name cathedral in Chicago, Cardinal Mundelein observed his 27th anniversary as a Catholic bishop. The service was attended by faculties and students from Quigley Preparatory seminary and St. Mary of the Lake seminary. The cardinal-archbishop was appointed to succeed the late Archbishop James Edward Quigley in 1915 after serving as auxiliary bishop of Brooklyn, N. Y., since 1909.

Women may soon be eligible for ordination as ministers of the United Church of Canada, membership of which is composed of Presbyterians, Methodists, and Congregationalists. A church poll revealed that a large majority of the members favor admitting women to the clergy.

Privations of the Mormons who emigrated from Nauvoo, Ill., 90 years ago and crossed the continent to Utah, were recalled at Omaha, Neb., when a monument to 600 Mormon martyrs was dedicated. The Mormons who died suffered from exposure at winter quarters near Omaha.

Cardinal Pacelli, papal secretary of state, issued a call for a world crusade in the Catholic press against neo-paganism. Addressing the International Congress of Catholic Journalists in Rome, he said the new paganism is producing "the same state of low world morals and dedication to materialism" as flourished in the time of pagan Rome.

The Rev. M. E. Aubrey, moderator of the Federal Council of Free Churches in England, asserted in London that the free churches—Methodists, Baptists, and others—are entitled to the same recognition in relation to the state as the Anglican church. The Church of England is the only church officially recognized by the British government. Bishops of the Anglican church are members of the house of lords.

Champaign, Ill., was the scene of the 86th session of the Illinois convention of the Disciples of Christ, which closed Friday. The Rev. Clark W. Cummings addressed 1,000 delegates at the opening meeting.

The Legion.

Glittering in bright uniforms, stepping smartly to the rhythm of scores of drum and bugle corps and bands, thousands of American Legionnaires marched in Cleveland on Tuesday. It was the annual parade, climaxing the 18th national convention of the war veterans. Judged best of the drum and bugle corps was the entry of Commonwealth Edison post of Chicago. A crowd of 250,000 watched the procession which continued for 12 hours.

At the final session of the convention Thursday, Harry W. Colmery, Topeka, Kas., lawyer, was elected national commander. Business sessions were held in the same hall in which Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas was nominated for President by the Republican party. A principal speaker was Newton D. Baker, secretary of war in the wartime administration of President Wilson.

The delegates adopted a flood of resolutions defining the Legion's policy for national affairs. Dominant among them were appeals for maintaining peace.

LUCKY HAMLET.

Sir Henry Wellcome, Wisconsin-born scientist, who died recently in London, directed in his will that $250,000 be paid within 25 years to Garden City, Minn., a hamlet of 225 persons, where he once lived, for building a library, auditorium, and sports field. The buildings are to be erected as a memorial to his parents. When they are completed the village will receive an additional $150,000 endowment fund.

Foreign Notes

Since Premier Mussolini bluffed Great Britain, got away with Ethiopia and challenged any power to contest his conquest, the mouthpiece Italian press has taunted Britain for backtracking on its old imperialism. Britain, meanwhile, has rushed to rearm and to protect its "empire life line" through the Mediterranean. Last week Britain not only sanctioned the league of nations' rebuff to Italy by seating Ethiopia [see Foreign], but acted like its old imperial self in a forthright way.

Sir Samuel Hoare, first lord of the admiralty, returning to London from an inspection of British military projects in the Mediterranean, warned in a direct reply to Italy:

"Great Britain is determined to maintain . . . at all costs its position in the Mediterranean and to modify and consolidate its naval, military, and air defenses between Gibraltar and the Suez canal in the light of recent experience."

Hoare clearly indicated his belief that Italian air power has not endangered Britain's Mediterranean position. His statement was apparently provoked by Italian charges that King Edward's recent diplomatic vacation in the southern Mediterranean and Hoare's inspection trip were attempts to "encircle" Italy.

Observers have agreed with Italians that Britain's dispatch of troops to Palestine was not solely for the purpose of suppressing the Arabian revolt against the Jews. Senator Royal S. Copeland of New York returned from a tour of the Holy Land and told the state department at Washington that the revolt had caused more than 1,000 deaths since April and that "the British government is not doing its duty under the mandate [and] has refused to take any action until the Arabs discontinue their atrocities." One American correspondent in Palestine recently charged that Britain, rather than simply enforcing law and order, wanted a full sized revolt as an excuse to assume more complete military control of Palestine than the league of nations' mandate permits. Meanwhile, forty-four Arabs were reported killed in one battle last week with British troops. Lieut. Gen. John G. Dill, new British commander in chief in Palestine, began organizing a force of 30,000 men, including 12,000 en route from England, and prepared to establish martial law.

Germans pondered the widely circulated report that Adolf Hitler may resign as Nazi chancellor and change his title from "Reichfuehrer" [Realmleader] to "Der Fuehrer" [The Leader]. The report named Col. Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, minister of aviation and governor of Prussia, as the probable chancellery successor. The change would be in keeping with Hitler's thesis that he is the prophet of Naziism. If Goering became chancellor it would be his job to execute the policies which Hitler, as "high priest," would pronounce. To the prediction of the change, authorities merely said, "We have not heard of it."

While Germany's costly army went through the biggest maneuvers since Kaiser Wilhelm twenty-two years ago turned similar scheduled maneuvers into a march to war, German economists, industrialists, and housewives went about the four year plan to restore the German self-sufficiency which Hitler announced three weeks ago. To offset their lack of natural resources, Germans are trying to produce commercially artificial rubber, cotton, wool, sugar, and gasoline. Experimental success has been achieved, but British experts believe that quantity production will take Germany years more. To reduce the shortage in essential metals, German mines abandoned as unproductive are being worked over. Germans are even asked to save their metal shaving tubes for salvage. Germany faces a shortage of butter, eggs, fats, and meats and housewives this winter will be given ration cards.

Czechoslovakia and Rumania protested to the German foreign office against charges that their relations with Russia were conspiracies to open a road for bolshevism through central Europe. They denied charges that Russia is building the air fields of Czechoslovakia and that Rumanian railroads are being linked with Russia. Meanwhile, Baron Konstantin von Neurath, German foreign minister, ended conferences in Budapest, Hungary. Pro-German Hungary reportedly had agreed to rearm, build airports on Czechoslovakian and Rumanian borders, and trade produce for German airplanes. The rearmament report was denied.

Cuban police arrested twenty members of the Spanish-Socialist circle in Havana after a truckload of dynamite cached outside the offices of El Pais, a Havana newspaper, exploded, wrecking the printing plant and a nearby Catholic church. El Pais was sympathetic with Fascist rebels in the Spanish civil war. The Socialist circle circulated handbills attacking it as well as the conservative newspaper Diario de la Marina. Alert policemen prevented destruction of the Diario's offices by disconnecting wires attached to 1,000 sticks of dynamite found outside. Later one person confessed his participation and named a group of Spaniards as the "intellectual authors" of the dynamiting. He told of dealings with professional Cuban terrorists and of a $5,000 fund contributed by Spanish radicals for explosives.

Fulvio Suvich, new Italian ambassador to Washington, may discuss Italian financial relations with the United States this fall. The discussion would concern a refunding on a much lower scale of Italy's billion dollar war debt, and the possibility of floating a new loan here. Although Premier Mussolini declared opposition to war debts, and Italy defaulted her June payment, officials believe he is anxious to have full financial and commercial relations with the United States. An act of congress prevents Italy, a defaulted war debt nation, from obtaining new loans here.

Legislature.

The Illinois general assembly resumed its special relief session in Springfield. Seven bills, designed to remedy the questionable constitutionality of the special 30 cent relief tax, were passed without controversy by both house and senate. The house refused, however, to approve a measure backed by Representative Frank Holten [Dem., East St. Louis]. He proposed that downstate relief administration costs should be increased from 5 to 10 per cent and in Cook county from 8 to 10 per cent. With the passage of the validating program accomplished both house and senate adjourned the special relief session to Oct. 13.

Floods in Texas.

Raging flood waters of the Concho and Colorado rivers, already having taken a terrific toll of destruction, again threatened Texas cities late in the week. The death toll had reached twelve and was expected to increase. More than 1,500 persons were homeless. Property and crop damage was estimated at more than $5,000,000. The surging streams covered thousands of acres following cloudburst rains.

Heaviest damage was reported from San Sabas county, where all residents of farms and small towns were forced to evacuate their homes. The swollen rivers reached a stage of 62 feet. Austin, the state capital, was threatened for a time by the flood waters. [See main news section.]

Flying

Pan-American Airways announced last week that a passenger service on the air route across the Pacific will begin on Oct. 21. On that day the 24th round trip flight between San Francisco and Manila will start. Authorization for a passenger service was based on reports from inspectors of the bureau of air commerce who flew over the 8,200 mile route.

Aided by the hurricane winds which caused havoc along the Atlantic coast line, the German Zeppelin Hindenburg completed a fast crossing from Germany to Lakehurst, N. J., in 59 hours. The big ship carried seventy-two passengers. Capt. Ernst H. Lehmann, commander, utilized storm winds along the southern coast of Nova Scotia to attain a speed of 160 miles an hour. Among the passengers was Commander Charles E. Rosendahl, U. S. N., head of the Lakehurst naval air station.

The German flying boat Aeolus completed a round trip flight between the Azores and New York City. The 10 ton ship made the hop from New York to the Azores in the fast time of 17 hours 47 minutes. The trip's purpose was to check weather conditions over the Atlantic.

Mrs. Beryl Markham, whose recent solo flight from England to New York ended in a crash landing in Nova Scotia, sailed for home. Before leaving she said she had "vague" plans for a future flight from New York to Paris.

A miniature airplane, weighing three pounds and carrying one pint of fuel, made a new world's record of 1 hour 47 minutes in the air at Los Angeles. The ship, designed and owned by Reginald Denny, film actor, was observed in the air from a commercial plane by an official of the National Aeronautics association.

Edwin C. Hedler, an engineer for the Bendix Aviation corporation, set a new record of fifty-two turns in a tailspin at South Bend, Ind. Hedler climbed to 10,000 feet, pulled his ship into a stall and then let it fall, out of control, for slightly more than a minute. He pulled out of the spin and regained control at 1,800 feet.

Dick Merrill, veteran pilot, and Harry Richman, night club entertainer, whose round trip flight to England from New York ended in a crash landing in Newfoundland, returned in another plane to New York. There Richman attacked a reporter for a newspaper which had published a story of a quarrel between Merrill and himself. Yesterday Merrill revealed that next year he plans to fly the Atlantic again—but alone—as a contestant in the New York-Paris race. [See main news section.]

Capt. James Mollison, British trans-Atlantic flyer, arriving in New York on an ocean liner, said he would purchase a new monoplane in which he plans to fly from London to South Africa in an effort to establish a new speed record. The present record, 4 days 7 hours, is held by his wife, Mrs. Amy Mollison.

A "flying automobile" of the autogiro type, equipped with three wheels and capable of flying 100 miles an hour, was demonstrated at Pitcairn field, near Philadelphia, for department of commerce officials. The unusual machine runs on a road like an automobile. In leaving the ground, folded wings spread out and the driving power is transferred from the wheels to the propeller.

THE BALLET MASTER PAYS.

A court in New York gave Vitale Fokine, famous ballet master, the choice of paying his estranged wife, Marie, noted ballerina, $350 back support money or going to jail. Fokine paid. He had tried unsuccessfully to block his wife's demand for maintenance by asserting that he had found her with another man in a Riverside drive apartment in 1927.

Labor

Violence flared last week in the critical Minneapolis strike situation. Gov. Hjalmar Petersen ordered National Guard troops mobilized. Their use in patroling the strike fronts was postponed Friday pending the outcome of conferences.

For more than a month the Minneapolis flour and feed milling industry has been paralyzed and delivery of wholesale groceries to stores stopped by strikes. Until last week, however, there had been little violence. On Wednesday rioting broke out in the vicinity of several mills. Sherif John Wall of Hennepin county immediately appealed to the governor for troops, saying the situation was out of control.

There were many sluggings and one shooting. One plant was a target for rocks and stones thrown by striking workers.

Representatives of the department of labor, city and state officials and representatives of employers and unions, after lengthy conferences, yesterday succeeded in ending the mill and elevator workers' strike, and the National Guardsmen were demobilized. The mill operators agreed to recognize the right of collective bargaining. The strike of grocery truck drivers continued. [See main news section.]

Investigation by a federal grand jury of reports of peonage in the east Arkansas cotton belt resulted in an indictment against City Marshal Paul D. Peacher of Earle, Ark., on a charge of violating the anti-slavery laws. A few hours earlier a Crittenden county grand jury had denied that any peonage conditions existed there. The federal investigation has been under way since early summer when many instances of violence brought national attention to a strike of cotton share croppers in Arkansas.

A serious labor shortage continued to harass cotton growers of the Mississippi delta. It was estimated that 10,000 cotton pickers would be needed immediately to harvest the crop before the rainy season begins.

Ship loading operations at all west coast ports were rushed in an effort to clear the ships before next Wednesday, when agreements between water front employers and unions expire. Efforts to negotiate new agreements have made little progress. Shippers recalled the prolonged and bloody 1934 strike of longshoremen and expressed fear that steamship service from Pacific coast ports again would be disrupted. [See main news section.]

MASQUERADE.

Death revealed that a San Francisco social worker, known for forty years as Jack B. Garland, a former newspaper man and writer, was a woman. A friend, Mrs. Mary Haines, reported that "Jack" Garland began masquerading as a man many years ago as a means of facilitating her desire to help the needy. Her real name was Beatrice Garland.

14-Tube TWIN SPEAKER MANCHESTER* RADIO

MILLION RADIO & TELEVISION LABORATORIES
CONSULTING ENGINEERS
361-99 W. Superior Street
CHICAGO, Illinois

August 29, 1936

Mandel Brothers
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:

We beg to report that the following conclusions have been arrived at as a result of a series of tests made on a 14-tube Console Radio named "Manchester", submitted by you for our examination:

Sensitivity - - - - 1 micro-volt
Selectivity - - - - 10 K.C.
Tone Quality, - - - - capable of reproducing tones from 70 cycles to 10,000 cycles.
Power consumption - 120 watts
Maximum power output - 13.5 watts

The above specifications in our opinion are equal to those of the average high grade standard receiver retailing for $175.00 to $200.00.

We find that the large speaker reproduces tones from 70 cycles to 7000 cycles, and the small "tweeter speaker reproduces tones from 200 cycles to 10,000 cycles giving a coverage impossible to obtain with a single speaker.

At the conclusion of the laboratory test, the receiver was given a listening post test from 2:00 P.M. August 25th to 2:00 A.M. August 26th. In spite of the severe thunderstorms and unfavorable conditions attending same, the following foreign stations were logged:

EAQ - Madrid, Spain — XEFT - Vera Cruz, Mexico
DJD - Zeesen, Germany — HI2ABE - Dominican Republic
12RO3 - Rome, Italy — TYA - Pointoise, France
GSD, GSC, GSO - Daventry & Rugby, England

In addition to the above foreign stations we logged a number of Canadian stations, amateurs from all over the United States and Broadcasting stations from the Atlantic to the Pacific Coast. - - - In conclusion, we beg to report that the 14-tube "Manchester" Radio is well constructed and contains nothing but first quality materials.

Yours very truly,
John W. Million Jr.

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 26.—[Special.]—Minnesota's Gophers, accepted as national football champions for the last two years, today continued their victory string when they defeated the University of Washington, 14 to 7, before 40,000. The game was one of the most bitterly fought the Pacific coast has seen in years. The Gophers won it in the fourth period on a pass from Andy Uram to Ray King, who was standing in the end zone.

The Gophers had to overcome disheartening breaks in the first and third quarters before they won their eighteenth straight triumph. Though lacking the polish and blocking that Bierman teams usually have, they scored in the second and fourth quarters, while Washington picked up its lone touchdown in the third period.

Huskies Start Well.

Washington proved even stronger than anticipated and so broke up the Minnesota offense that for a time it appeared that the Big Ten champions might be fortunate to get a tie.

The Gophers found themselves backed up against the wall at the start of the game when the Huskies marched 50 yards from the kickoff and with the aid of a 15 and a 5 yard penalty moved to within 23 yards of the Minnesota goal line. A pass over the goal line was incomplete and the Gophers took the ball.

After an exchange of kicks Ed Widseth, co-captain, hit Cain of Washington so hard after he had received a lateral pass that the Husky back fumbled and was so badly hurt that he had to leave the game. On the first play, Matheny, subbing for the injured Uram, knocked off 32 yards on a sweep around the home team's left end to the 23 yard line. Matheny then raced to the 17 yard stripe. On fourth down, Alfonse picked up nine yards on a sweep. Matheny added five more and at this stage Bierman rushed in Rork, injured full back, and in two smashes he was over the goal line. Wilkinson kicked goal.

Huskies Score on Pass.

On the second half kickoff, Matheny fumbled on his 27 yard line. Waskowitz recovered. On fourth down, the latter passed to Logg for 17 yards and a first down. For three plays the powerful Gopher line held the Huskies, but on the fourth down Haines passed to Johnson, left end, in the end zone for a touchdown. Logg kicked goal.

The Huskies, thanks to Logg's sensational 68 yard punt that went out of bounds on the Gophers' one yard line, again started a march for the goal line, but Bud Wilkinson, making his debut as a quarterback, intercepted a pass on his five yard stripe and raced 49 yards down the field before he stumbled and fell with an open field ahead.

The Huskies managed to move to the Minnesota 20 yard line near the end of the third period, but Svendsen intercepted a pass. Then came a break. Tuffy Thompson got off a great kick with the help of the wind to Quarter Back Logg. He fumbled on his 30 yard line when hit hard and Ray Antil recovered for the Gophers.

Gophers Make Good on Break.

On the second play, Alfonse hurled a pass to Wilkinson, who was downed ten yards from the touchdown line. On the next play, Uram, who had come in for Thompson, threw a pass to King in the end zone for the winning touchdown. Wilkinson again kicked goal.

The Gophers didn't have their usual class today as the long trip, lack of practice, the fire in Missoula, all combined to slow them down. They got only one real break in the four quarters and made the most of it to

Westbury, N. Y., Sept. 26.—(AP)—Argentina's wild riding four horsemen, mounted on winged steeds today rode away with the Americas cup, emblem of international team polo supremacy.

As 39,000 spectators, second largest throng to watch a polo match in this country's history, applauded the daring of the invaders, the Argentines clinched their triumph by crushing Greentree, United States team champion, 8 to 4, for the second successive time.

First Loss in 22 Years.

The triumph, following up last Sunday's 21 to 9 rout, marked the first time in 22 years that the United States has been defeated in international polo competition. England's great four, led by Leslie Cheape, was the last to turn the trick, winning the Westchester cup in 1914.

The Argentines can probably thank the fleetest polo ponies ever herded together for their decisiv victory. Greentree's stars, headed by Tommy Hitchcock and G. H. [Pete] Bostwick, were a close match for the riders from Argentina, and their passing and shots were just as precise. But the ponies—they were the big difference.

Duggan Leads Argentines.

Luis Duggan, mounted on the fastest pony of all, led the Argentine attack, scoring three goals. No sooner had the game begun than he broke into the clear, nursed the ball along and then chipped it into the goal. Back again, Duggan snared the ball and passed it to Roberto Cavanagh, who crossed the field and took it over without trouble. Bostwick gave a great exhibition of ball sticking near the close of the period as he survived some bad bumping and scored America's first goal.

Gazzotti Rides Length of Field.

Greentree was blanked in the second and third chukkers as Andrew Gazzotti galloped the entire length of International field to tally in the second and Duggan counted again in the third. The fourth chukker saw the hardest and roughest riding of the match with Gazzotti and Bostwick scoring. There was some hope in the fifth when Hitchcock scored to cut Greentree's handicap to 3-5, but the Argentines opened up in the sixth with two rapid fire goals in the final two minutes—one by Duggan on a long, angular pass from Gazzotti, and the other by Cavanagh. That broke the last hope of Greentree.

ILLINI WIN, 9-6, ON PLACE KICK IN FOURTH PERIOD

BY WILFRID SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Champaign, Ill., Sept. 26.—Lowell Spurgeon's placement from De Paul's 27 yard line, with sophomore George Wardley holding the ball, scored the points early in the fourth quarter which whipped De Paul university, 9 to 6, today in Memorial stadium. The place kick opportunity came after a fumbled punt which Capt. El Sayre recovered for Illinois on De Paul's 15 yard line.

Eighteen thousand, more than half of whom were high school students, guests of the Illini, watched the opening game, the first half of which was played in a driving rain that left the field slippery and soft.

Rain made the ball difficult to handle. It also convinced the Illini that it was no afternoon for forward passes, and they tried only three, completing none. But while the Illini had difficulty handling the ball behind the line of scrimmage, they recovered all their misplays and always held on to the ball when tackled.

Fumbles Are Costly.

De Paul fumbled three times and didn't recover any, the final blow costing the Chicago eleven at least a tie. Coupled with this inability to follow the ball was indifferent covering of punts so that Illinois' safety men, Tony Mazieka and Leo Stasica, repeatedly nullified De Paul's superior kicking by their returns.

De Paul scored in the first quarter against the Illinois second team. Illinois tied these six points late in the second quarter. Then, after a scoreless third period, Spurgeon's place kick gave the Illini the lead.

Here De Paul climaxed its bid for victory over a Big Ten opponent with a brilliant drive that fell twelve yards short of a touchdown only because of Wardley's brilliant defensive tactics which enabled Bill Johnson, sophomore end from Maywood, Ill., to tackle Walter Hehn, De Paul half back, from behind after his run of fifty-four yards.

Illini Dfense Braces.

This was the peak of De Paul's drive, for an aroused Illini line refused to yield, stopping four plays without gain, and took the ball.

De Paul received Spurgeon's kickoff after the Illini had gone into the lead, 9 to 6. Willie Phillips returned eleven yards to De Paul's 25 yard line. On two attempts the Demons picked up nine yards. On the next play Phillips took the pass from center, handed the ball to Hehn, who shot inside Illinois' left tackle and set out straight down the field.

Three blue shirted mates were in front of him while the Illini were strung out in pursuit. Wardley retreated from his safety position and kept himself in front of the would-be blockers. The apparent impasse caused Hehn to slow up just enough so that Johnson, racing up from the rear, smashed into him with a diving tackle on Illinois' 12 yard line.

Phillips failed to gain. Then Hehn's forward pass over center was

Defending the thesis that the world didn't end when Jay Berwanger was graduated, Chicago's Maroons rolled over Lawrence college of Appleton, Wis., 34 to 0, in their season opener at Stagg field yesterday. It was the biggest score the Maroons have made since they defeated Dartmouth, 41 to 0, in 1933.

Jay was clearly missed, but the leading claimants to his rôle appeared not among the promising sophomores but from the veteran ranks. The most outstanding of these was the senior, Ned Bartlett, who had been listed among the practice casualties.

Shows Old Form.

In eclipse last year, Bartlett, in three brief appearances, showed some of the form which enabled him to score two touchdowns in six minutes against Michigan when he was a sophomore. He carried the ball six times for 84 yards, scored once on a 41 yard run and again on a 10 yard dash, and kicked a point after touchdown.

Warren Skoning, veteran full back, who shared honors with veterans Fred Lehnhardt and Bartlett, scored the first Maroon touchdown on a short plunge six and a half minutes after the opening whistle. There was no further scoring until the third period, when Bartlett made his two contributions. Chicago's fourth and fifth touchdowns came in the last quarter when the Maroon team was manned chiefly by reserves.

Haze Makes Visibility Poor.

BILL LEE HOLDS CARDS IN CHECK; CUBS WIN, 12-2

BY EDWARD BURNS.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 26.—The Cubs this afternoon treated the Cardinals' staf of pitching miscellany like they should have many a sad afternoon during the summer, and the result was a 12 to 2 victory for Bill Lee and associates. Lee had a three hit shutout in prospect until the ninth.

Leading the gents who accomplished 16 hits was John [Twinkletoes] Gill, who made a homer, two doubles, and two singles in five times at bat, assaulting four pitchers to accomplish his purpose. Phil Cavarretta was runner up with a double, a homer and a single in the first four innings before the day looked like such a rich harvest. Augie Galan also hit a homer. Every Cub except Bill Herman made at least one hit. Herman, with a chance to finish fourth in the National league standings, has made only two hits in his last 26 times at the plate.

Sure of Third Place.

The fourth place hazard which menaced the Cubs when they arrived at the ball park this afternoon was destroyed when the Pirates lost in Cincinnati before the verdict here was established. But by their own hands the lads established the privilege of fighting it out for a second place tie with the Cards in tomorrow's season final here.

The victory was Lee's No. 18. He held the Cards to one single in the first six innings and to two singles in seven innings. He was nicked for a double with two out in the eighth. And in the ninth a spurious double by Pepper Martin, a legit single by Mize and a double by Gelbert gave the Cards their two runs.

Score One in First.

The Cubs had runners on third and second with none out in the first inning and scored one run before they sang just one verse of their 1936 theme song, "Let 'em die on third." Winford walked Galan and Cavarretta doubled off the right field wall, Galan stopping at third. Herman flied to Moore, Galan scoring and Cavarretta reaching third. Demaree popped to Gelbert and Hack walked. Then Hartnett struck out.

Gill led off the second by beating out a high bouncer to Garibaldi. Jurges flied to Moore, then somebody thought about the sacrifice play and Lee laid down a bunt, Gill advancing. Galan tapped to Garibaldi.

Jurges joined Cavarretta and Gill in the hitting department in the third. Cavarretta led off with a homer over the right field pavilion. Herman grounded to Gelbert, but Demaree and Hack walked. Hartnett flied to Medwick. Then Gill produced a double to the right field screen, Demaree and Hack scoring. Jurges singled to left, scoring Gill. McGee replaced Winford and Gelbert threw out Lee.

Gill Hits Homer.

SECOND PLACE BECKONS; NO. 10 FOR LYONS, 5-3

Take Second Game in Rain, 8-6.

If—

If the White Sox win today from the St. Louis Browns and Cleveland defeats the Detroit Tigers today the White Sox will wind up the season in second place. The standing would be:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Chicago	82	70	.5394
Detroit	83	71	.5389

If either the White Sox or the Detroit game is rained out it would be impossible for the White Sox to finish in second place.

The White Sox can wind up in fourth place if they lose to the St. Louis Browns and the Washington Senators defeat the New York Yankees. The standing would be:

Washington	82	71	.536
Chicago	81	71	.533

The White Sox can finish in third place if they are rained out and the Washington Senators win. The standing would be:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Chicago	81	70	.5364
Washington	82	71	.5359

The Cubs can tie the Cardinals for second place by defeating St. Louis. The standing would be:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Chicago	87	67	.565
St. Louis	87	67	.565

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The White Sox haven't abandoned hope of staking out a claim on second place world series money before the 1936 campaign closes this evening. They renewed their threat yesterday when they battered down the St. Louis Browns in a double-header and jumped to third place, less than a game on percentage points behind Detroit's Tigers, the second place occupants. The scores were 5 to 3 and 8 to 6, the latter being limited to six and one-half innings by rain.

In the course of the wet afternoon's proceedings Luke Appling, the Sox's key man, just about eliminated all challenges for the American league's batting championship. Luke couldn't help himself in the first game, but in the second he exploded two hits in three attempts, leaving his average stationary a .388, thirteen points ahead of Earl Averill, the Cleveland outfielder who has been trying to catch him.

No. 10 for Lyons.

There wasn't much to the first game because of the pitching of Ted Lyons. Remembering the four straight bruisings the Browns handed them recently the Sox broke loose in the first inning with three runs, thereby erasing a two run lead the Browns had established. Given an edge Lyons really went to work and allowed only six separated hits in the last six innings. It was the tenth triumph for the veteran, who, after 14 big league campaigns, finally knows how it feels to escape the second division.

The Sox followed their first game pattern in the second contest. They hopped off to a three run lead due to a triple by Appling with the bases loaded. They scored once more in the second, and in the sixth added a cluster of four, two of them on a homer by Manager Jim Dykes. This gave the locals an 8 to 0 lead, but much happened in the Browns' seventh, and Monty Stratton, who previously had been separated from only one hit, was driven from his job. Clint Brown cleaned up after six had scored, whereupon the umpires surrendered to the elements.

Monty Is All Right.

Stratton's sudden collapse wasn't as bad as it appeared. The rain, which was on the job in earnest while the final half was being played, undoubtedly annoyed the lanky Texan, and if Dykes had come up with

CINCINNATI WINS OVER BUCS, 5 TO 1, ON FLUKE HITS

Victory Assures Reds of Fifth Place.

Cincinnati, O., Sept. 26.—(AP)—The Cincinnati Reds assured themselves fifth place in the final National league standings by defeating Pittsburgh 5 to 1 today. The defeat jolted the Pirates' hopes for third place.

Fly balls lost in the sun gave the Reds victory. In the second inning Young lost track of Scarsella's hit and it went for a single, enabling him to score when Riggs singled off Vaughan's ankle.

In the third inning, with the bases loaded on a walk, single and hit batsman, Lombardi hit a long fly to the scoreboard which Lloyd Waner lost in the sun and it went for a double, scoring Walker, Goodman, and Cuyler.

Cubs Stay in 2d Place Fight; Rout Cardinals

fourth inning, Cavarretta came through with his third hit, a single to left. But he was forced by Herman and Herman was forced by Demaree.

Gill contributed to his two man show with Cavarretta in the fifth. After Hack had been called out on strikes, Hartnett singled to center. Then Gill drove a homer into the stand in right center, scoring behind Hartnett. Jurges and Lee supplied infield outs.

The game was suspended at the end of the fifth because of a shower, which gave Lee a chance to reflect upon a swell record up to that point. In five innings, he had allowed one hit, a single by Gelbert with one out in the second, an effort that forthwith was blotted out in a double play. During those five innings not an outfielder had been called upon to execute a putout or an assist. The only walk was a pass which Bill gave to Martin with two out in the first inning.

Pippen, fourth Cardinal pitcher, let a couple of non-hitters click in the seventh. Demaree singled to left and went to third on Hack's single to center. Hartnett hit into a double play, Demaree scoring, after which Gill delivered his fourth straight hit, a single to center, and reached second on a wild pitch. Gelbert threw out Jurges.

Lee Eases Up.

Lee eased up a little in the home seventh. Garibaldi singled for the second Cardinal hit. Martin fanned and Medwick flied to Demaree. Mize and Gelbert walked, filling the bases, but Gutteridge flied to Galan.

Lee and Galan joined the list of hitters in the eighth. Lee opened with a triple to left center and scored on Galan's homer to the roof of the right field pavilion. Cavarretta was hit by a pitched ball, but Herman grounded into a double play. Demaree singled to center, but Hack flied to Medwick.

The Cubs made it an even dozen runs with two in the ninth. Hartnett walked and stopped at third on Gill's fifth hit. Earnshaw's wild pitch let Hartnett score while Gill took third. Gill scored on Jurges' single.

Washington of St. Louis Beats Bradley Tech, 32-0

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 26.—(AP)—Washington university of St. Louis easily defeated Bradley Tech of Peoria, Ill., today, 32 to 0, in opening its 1936 football season. A forward pass, three line bucks, and an end run brought Washington its five touchdowns, three of them in the second half. Bukant and Yore scored two each, O'Toole the other.

NEARING LEAGUE BATTING CHAMPIONSHIP

Luke Appling, slugging White Sox shortstop, in action against the St. Louis Browns at Comiskey park yesterday. Appling made two hits in six times at bat and retained his average of .388. Earl Averill of the Indians, Appling's closest rival for the American league title, went hitless in four times at bat and his average dropped to .375. It will take more than a miracle to beat Appling out. Hemsley is the St. Louis catcher.

GRIMM NAMES LEE FOR OPENER OF CITY SERIES

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 26.—[Special.]—On the strength of his brilliant pitching today against the St. Louis Cardinals, Manager Charley Grimm of the Chicago Cubs announced that the tall right hander had earned the starting assignment against the White Sox in the first game of the Chicago city series starting Wednesday at Wrigley field. Lee yielded three hits until the eighth inning, and then with a 12 run lead eased up, permitting three more hits and two runs in the ninth.

Lon Warneke previously had been picked to start the city series.

Sox Defeat Browns Twice, 5-3 and 8-6

a scratch hit the inning would have closed with no runs home. Stratton's next appearance probably will be against the Cubs in the city series at Wrigley field next Wednesday.

FIRST GAME

One of the two runs which gave the Browns a momentary lead in the opening inning of the first game was a home run to left by Lary, his second of the year. Clift followed with an infield single and nobody was retired on Solters' tap when Lyons' throw to second was too late to nip Clift. Clift scored later on a single by Bottomley.

The Sox opened their attack with three runs. Knott invited trouble walking Rosenthal and Haas after Radcliff had flied to Solters. Bonura doubled off the left field score board, Rosenthal scoring. Haas scored and Bonura moved to third on Appling's infield out. Hayes beat out a bounding hit over Knott's head, Bonura going home.

Sox Get Two More.

Additional protection was fashioned for Lyons in the fourth, two scoring. Dykes led off with a single. On a hit and run play, Sewell singled to left and when Solters permitted the ball to roll through his hands, Dykes scored and Sewell took third. After a pass had put Lyons on first, Radcliff singled to left to score Sewell.

Dykes' curiosity got the better of him in the seventh and it resulted in a run for the Browns. Carey led off with a single and Coleman was nominated to bat for Van Atta. Coleman grounded to Hayes close to second and Dykes ran over to get a close up of the play. This left third base unguarded so Carey went there without trouble. This put him in position to score on a fly ball hit by Lary.

SECOND GAME

The Sox began the second game with a three run assault in the first inning, largely because of Appling. Radcliff survived on a fumble by Lary, Rosenthal doubled, Haas was tossed out, and Bonura walked to load the bases. Appling worked the count to 3 and 2 before getting his first hit of the afternoon. It was a triple to the right field corner, Radcliff, Rosenthal, and Bonura scrambling over the plate.

A couple of hits in the second inning added one more run. After Stratton had been tossed out, Radcliff singled into left and loitered around first base while Rosenthal flied to Solters. The enemy outfield shifted over to the right side and Haas fooled them by dropping a double close to the left field line, Radcliff scoring.

The Browns' sixth was marked by a double off the bat of Lary, the first hit off Stratton. The Sox then promptly got together and gave Caldwell the works. Rosenthal led off with a triple to right. Haas was thrown out and Bonura survived on a fielder's choice that was calculated to get Rosenthal at the plate. But Rosey scooted safely back to third. Appling singled, scoring Rosenthal. Bonura scored on Hayes' fly. Then Dykes made it four for the inning by whacking a home run into left. It was his seventh homer of the year.

Brown to the Rescue.

Stratton had two men out in the seventh before the Browns turned loose the six run, six hit bombardment. Bottomley and West singled and Hemsley walked, filling the bases. Carey scratched a hit to Dykes and Bottomley scored. Coleman batted for Caldwell and did pretty well. He doubled to left center on the first pitch, scoring We..., Hemsley, and Carey. Coleman scored on a single by Lary and out went Stratton. Brown stepped in and Clift doubled, scoring Lary. Then Solters flied to Haas and the game was called.

Hotel Fire Routs Gopher Eleven Review of Week's Sports

A newspaper man wandering about the lobby of the Florence hotel in Missoula, Mont., at 4 o'clock in the morning Thursday smelled smoke. Hasty examination revealed fire in a drug store. He sounded an alarm and Minnesota's football team, en route to Seattle, Wash., to open its season against Washington, rushed from the room in pajamas, leaving clothes, valuables, and $1,000 worth of medical equipment and supplies to be destroyed in the $500,000 blaze. The players spent the rest of the night in Pullmans hastily prepared for them and continued their practice the next day.

At Wisconsin hopes for a successful season, remote at best, were enhanced by the return of varsity Full Back Ed Jankowski, who met scholastic requirements by successfully passing an examination.

Purdue's football team prepared to open the season inspired by a mass demonstration of loyalty arranged and staged by the citizens of Lafayette, Ind., who vow allegiance to the university and its football team in their fight to surmount the handicaps placed upon it by the loss of two star men, Carl Dahlbeck and Tom McGannon, in a locker room explosion two weeks ago. It was one of the most unusual demonstrations in the history of collegiate athletics.

Packy McFarland, Former Lightweight Boxer, Dies.

Patrick Francis [Packey] McFarland, one of the greatest lightweights of all times, died at his home in Joliet, Ill., after a two months' illness. Death was caused by a mysterious malady believed by specialists to have been an infection which had become localized near the heart. Born back of the yards in Chicago, McFarland rose to a place of prominence in the ring, saved a quarter of a million dollars and retired on New Year's day of 1918 to enter business in Joliet, where he entered politics, bought a brewery, and became vice president of a bank. He was a member of the Illinois boxing commission at time of his death.

Other deaths which received sports page notice was that of William Hart, 71, former Brooklyn, St. Louis, Pittsburgh, and Cleveland player and for a long time an umpire, and Arthur Laemmle, 31, of Watertown, S. D., a former Minnesota football and basketball player who was found dead of knife wounds, apparently self-inflicted, in his room at Columbia university.

Giants Clinch National League Pennant.

Carl Hubbell won his 16th consecutive victory and Hal Schumacher pitched the Giants to the triumph that clinched the National league championship. The Cubs were definitly eliminated from the pennant race when P. Waner singled off Lon Warneke in the 10th inning to give the Pirates a 7 to 6 victory. A challenge was issued immediately for a city series and the White Sox, beaten four straight by the lowly Browns to drop out of second place, as quickly accepted.

In the American league the Yankees continued to win although they had long since clinched the pennant, but the Washington Senators set the pace by winning four of their five games, tying the record of the Pirates, who led the National league in the week's play. The biggest loser was Boston in the American league which lost its five starts.

Avery Brundage, returning to America from the Olympic games, upheld the decision of the Olympic committee in suspending Mrs. Eleanor Holm Jarrett, revealing the heretofore unpublished facts that 20 men voted unnaimously to oust the comebly backstroke champion, that Brundage did not vote, that Mrs. Jarrett with other members of the team had signed a training pledge which clearly stated the rules governing athletes' conduct, and that Mrs. Jarrett's roommates on the trip were two girls 15 and 16 years of age. Brundage said he would not be a candidate for reëlection as president of the National A. A. U.

Argentina's crack polo team won its drive for the Cup of America and international supremacy by whipping the Greentree four, 21 to 9, in the first game of the series. Needing one more victory to lift the cup and the title, the invaders, thwarted all week by inclement weather, have yet to meet the United States in the second game in which American ponies again are expected to be no match for the fleet mounts from Argentina.

Joe Louis, sensational young heavyweight challenger, resumed his successful comeback by knocking out Al Ettore, chunky Italian, in the fifth round at Philadelphia. Attendance reached 50,000 and receipts $210,000, of which Louis received $60,000. Ettore was down three times and collapsed attempting to regain his feet after the third knockdown.

Kennedy to Try for 22d Victory for Sox Today

In the closing game of the season for the White Sox today Vernon Kennedy will make his third attempt to nail down his 22d victory. The Browns will start either Tommy Thomas or Ivy Andrews.

J. Louis Comiskey, owner of the Sox, announced yesterday that deals were under way for an experienced catcher and an experienced first baseman.

Rain descended in the third inning of the second game and the umpires, who hope to avoid the expense of a suit pressing until next spring, shooed themselves and the athletes to cover. The ground crew immediately spread the infield cover, but the rain stopped and their work program had to be reserved. Later on the shower did a come back.

Jocko Conlan, former Sox outfielder, who had his baptism as an umpire this season in the New York-Pennsylvania league and proved good enough to be picked for the circuit's split season playoff, was among the 5,000 present yesterday.

NAME UMPIRES FOR WORLD AND CHICAGO SERIES

New York, Sept. 26.—[U. P.]—The appointment of George Magerkurth and Charles Pfirman as the National league umpires for the world series was made today by President Ford Frick.

Pfirman has officiated in two previous world series, the Yankees-Cardinals in 1928 and the Giants-Senators in 1933. Magerkurth worked in the 1932 series between the Yankees and Cubs.

Frick also announced the appointment of George Barr and William Stewart as the National league umpires for the Chicago city series between the White Sox and Cubs.

HARRIDGE NAMES TWO.

Harridge also appointed William A. McGowan and Emmett Ormsby to officiate in the Chicago city series.

MELBOURNE, Sept. 26.—[U. P.]—Gene Sarazen today won the Australian open golf championship with a record score of 282.

YANKEES DEFEAT WASHINGTON, 3-1; SET NEW MARK

Break Season Record for Total Bases.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 26.—(AP)—The New York Yankees added another record to their long string today as they defeated the Washington Senators, 3 to 1. In getting eight hits the Yanks surpassed the American league mark for total bases by one club in a season. The seven singles and a double boosted their total bases to 2,660, compared to the old league record of 2,657 compiled by the Yankees of 1930.

Lefty Gomez and Bump Hadley divided the mound assignment for the Yankees, it being Manager Joe McCarthy's plan to work as many of his pitchers as possible in the season's last two days to give them final tuneups for the world series. Between them, Gomez and Hadley, they held the Senators to three hits.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 26.—Lon Warneke will be pitted against Dizzy Dean in the season final here tomorrow, a battle which is to determine whether the Cubs and Cardinals will pool second and third money and split it because of a Cub victory. If the Cards win they will take second mone and the Cubs third.

Warneke will be trying for his 16th victory; Dean for his twenty-fifth.

The Cubs and Cards will clash in a field meet before tomorrow's game.

The Cards used five pitchers today and four yesterday and not one picked up a bat, which probably is a record.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Paul Waner of the Pirates took a 4 point lead over Babe Phelps of the Dodgers in the fight for the National league batting crown yesterday, as the season went into its final day. He had two hits in five times at bat to boost his mark to .373, while Phelps had only one safety in five chances to fall 3 points to .369. The American league race saw Luke Appling of the White Sox take what appeared to be an insurmountable lead of 13 points, with a .388 average, compared to the .375 for Earl Averill of the Indians.

Madison, Wis., Sept. 26.—[Special.]—Wisconsin stepped off on the right foot under the régime of Coach Harry Stuhldreher by coming from behind to defeat South Dakota State at Camp Randall this afternoon, 24 to 7. The victory was especially sweet for the Badgers, who last year went down to a 13 to 6 defeat at the hand of the Jack Rabbits to open one of their most disastrous seasons in history.

The game was played in a steady rain before a crowd of 15,000.

South Dakota State was off to a flying start when Capt. Ed Lienhart took the opening kickoff and raced 80 yards for a touchdown. Full Back Mark Barber place kicked the extra point.

Fumble Ruins First Chance.

Wisconsin was given a chance to score a few minutes later, but a fumble ruined the opportunity. The Badgers came back, however, to push one touchdown across in the second quarter, two more in the third period, and another in the fourth. South Dakota never threatened after its opening score.

Down a touchdown before they had collected themselves, the Badgers scored on a 59 yard run by Full Back Eddie Jankowski, but the play was recalled when a Wisconsin lineman was caught clipping on South Dakota's 25 yard line. At the end of the first quarter, Wisconsin had pushed to the 5 yard line, largely the result of a 25 yard run by Bronko Malesevich, sophomore right half back, who had replaced Clarence Tommerson.

Misiak Fumbles, but Recovers.

Ed Misiak fumbled to open the second period, but recovered on South Dakota's 14 yard line and Malesevich lost two more before Misiak ripped through his own left tackle for 14 yards to carry the ball to the two yard line.

Wisconsin lost the ball on downs on the one yard line and another scoring chance appeared to be gone until South Dakota was penalized a few minutes later on its own 11 yard line for pass interference. On second down, Malesevich tore through left tackle, reversed his field and ra neight yards to a touchdown. Jankowski's attempted place kick was low. South Dakota led, 7 to 6, at the half.

Fumble Leads to Touchdown.

A fumbled punt by Quarter Back James Thompson on his own three yard line paved the way for the Badgers' second marker. Capt. John Golemgeske recovered and a pass, windward to Lovshin, on third down brought the touchdown. Lanphere's attempted kick was low.

Malesevich galloped 34 yards to score after slipping through his own left tackle late in the third quarter and Tom Kurth, another sophomore, reeled off 27 yards in the last quarter for the final marker. Ed Christianson and Tommerson failed in their attempts to add the extra points. Herb Paul, Rice Lake sophomore, ran 42 yards and the Badgers appeared to be on the way to another touchdown when the game ended.

Wisconsin piled up 18 first downs to two for South Dakota and gained 257 yards from scrimmage to 37 for the invaders. Malesevich and Jankowski were the chief ground gainers, the former making 102 yards in 13 trips with the ball and the latter 68 yards in 14 tries. South Dakota tried two forward passes, both of which were incomplete. Wisconsin completed three out of four. One was allowed because of interference.

BUDGE TO PLAY PERRY IN COAST SINGLES FINAL

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 26.—(AP)—Fred Perry of England, world's amateur champion, and Donald Budge, American champion, entered the men's singles championship round of the Pacific southwest tennis tournament today.

Budge beat Jack Tidball, Los Angeles, 6-2, 6-1, 6-2, and Perry defeated Frank Shields, Hollywood, 6-3, 6-3, 8-6.

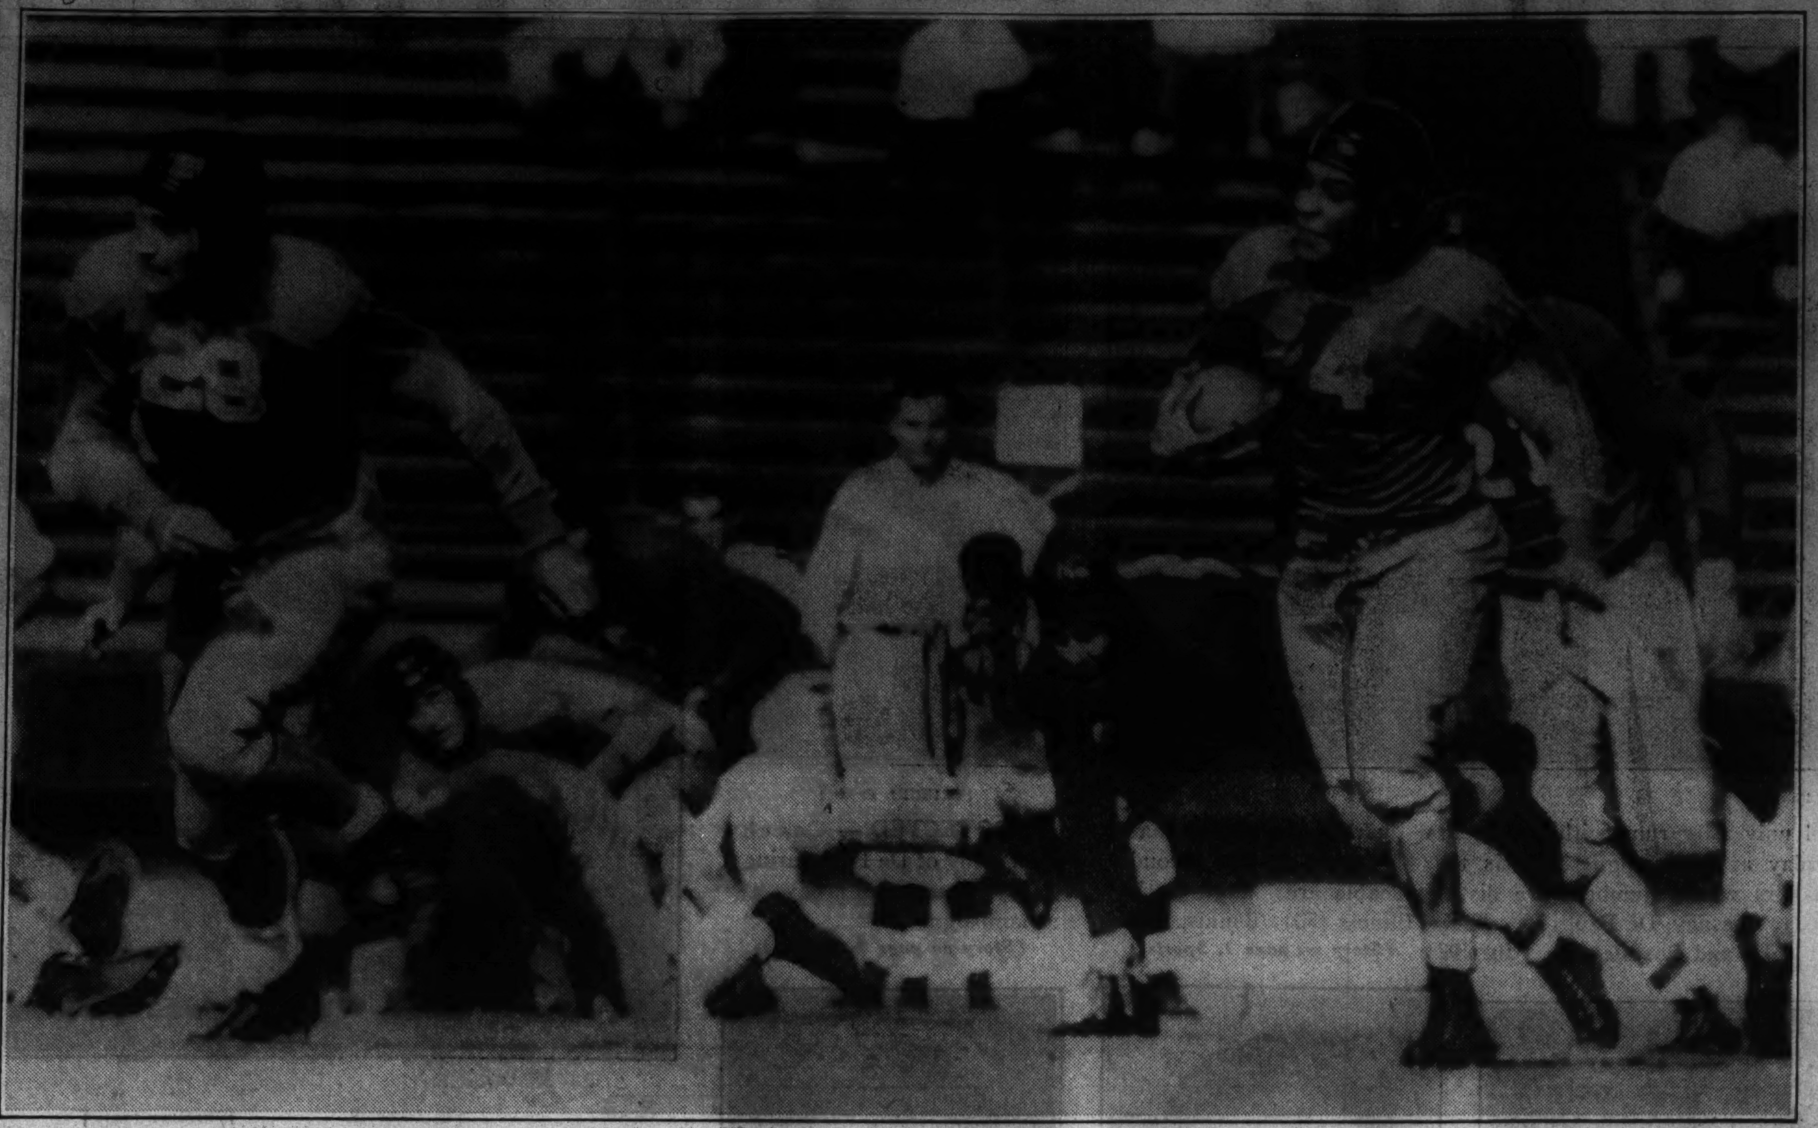
Miss Babcock also defaulted in the women's doubles. The final brings together Bonnie Blank and May Doeg of Santa Monica and Dorothy Workman and Dorothy Bundy.

OPENING FOOTBALL GAMES, EAST AND WEST



Stanford, Rose Bowl champion and weakened by the loss of 1935 stars, loses to Santa Clara, 13 to 0, in its opening game at Palo Alto, Cal., yesterday. Half Back Gomez of Santa Clara (4) is carrying the ball on one of the plays that figured in the first touchdown march. Falaschi (28) is Santa Clara's blocking quarter back.

Trojans Beat Oregon State in Opener, 38-7

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 26.—Using three complete teams to overwhelm luckless Oregon State, 38 to 7, Southern California this afternoon demonstrated before 36,000 spectators that the one time powerful Trojans are ready to make another assault on football championships.

Reeling off two touchdowns in each of the last three quarters, the Trojans combined passes with a formidable running game to win their first victory since 1932 over the Beavers.

Davis Scores Twice.

Davey Davis, dynamic 165 pound quarter back, scored twice during the 28 minutes he was in the game and led a drive that sent Gaisford, end, over for a third score.

Ambrose Chindler, Davis' principal replacement, passed to Stanley for one touchdown and passed to Henderson for another. Dick Berryman, a crashing sophomore full back, drove through Oregon's line for fourteen yards in three tries for the other touchdown.

Oregon's team looked weaker defensively than expected, perhaps because the Trojans showed unanticipated strength in winning their third Pacific Coast conference victory in two years. Oregon penetrated to the Southern California five yard line in the first quarter, but Half Back Tom Swanson failed on a placement try from 17 yards after the Trojans had held.

State Scores on Pass.

A long pass from Half Back Jack Alexander to Half Back Robert Mountain accounted for Oregon State's touchdown on a play that covered 68 yards. Mountain ran the ball 38 yards after he caught it. With a series of flat passes toward the side lines which played a major part in four of the Trojans' touchdown advances, Southern California also mixed end around reverse plays with both ends taking the ball behind fast running interference for gains that demoralized their opponents.

Notre Dame Easily Beats Frosh, 33 to 0

Notre Dame, Ind., Sept. 26.—[Special.]—The Notre Dame varsity today won a 33 to 0 decision over the freshmen, who had been organized a little more than a week. While the Irish defense held the freshmen to two first downs, one by rushing and one on a penalty, the offense was unimpressive.

The starting varsity, with Andy Puplis calling signals, Bob Wilke and Vic Wojchovski at the half backs, and Larry Danbom at full back, scored twice in rapid succession, but thereafter the yearlings offered more resistance.

Score 2 Quick Touchdowns.

Danbom plunged 13 yards for the first score on the seventh play of the game. Puplis missed the placement. Wilke went off right tackle and reversed his field for a 30 yard touchdown run shortly later, Puplis adding the placement.

The first team was withdrawn several plays later, but when it returned in the third period, Wilke made a 34 yard touchdown sprint. Puplis again added the placement. Wojchovski scored on a 51 yard run off left tackle for the regulars and Puplis added his third extra point in four tries. Later Jake Kovalcik, sophomore right half back with the fourth team, scored on a 10 yard drive with Emmett Crowe, quarter back, missing the dropkick for extra point.

B Team Meets Niagara.

The other varsity teams were unable to score, although Jack McCarthy, Bill Horan, Chuck Borowski, and Herman Burnell, left half backs, and Ben Binkowski, full back, made sizeable gains.

The Irish open their schedule here next Saturday against Carnegie Tech. The B team left here tonight for Niagara Falls, N. Y., to meet Niagara university tomorrow.

WILDCATS CRUSH FROSH.

Northwestern's varsity football team rolled up a 60 to 0 victory over the freshmen at Dyche stadium yesterday. The game was played in a steady downpour of rain.

The nine varsity touchdowns were scored by eight players, Ollie Adelman, veteran left half, being the only back to go over twice. He scored in the fourth quarter on a 20 yard run, and crossed the goal line in the third quarter on a 35 yard sprint. Other backs to score were Don Heap, Bernard Jefferson, John Rose, and Bob Whitehouse. Diehl and Kovatch, ends, both caught passes for touchdowns.

Iggy Mesec and Bernard Jefferson, two sophomores, broke loose for several long runs, indicating they will see considerable varsity duty this fall. Jefferson, 185 pound Negro half back from Grand Rapids, ran 40 yards to score a touchdown and later tossed a 40 yard pass to Adelman to set up another touchdown.

The freshmen were held to a single first down, being handicapped by lack of team work and the wet field. Jack Ryan Jr., son of Jack Ryan, former Wisconsin coach, played quarter back for the yearlings and made several long punt returns. Lineup:

sive fight in the first half. Haze made the visibility poor and rain fell during the final period.

Lawrence's running attack was impotent. On their 20 running plays the Vikings netted a total of minus 31 yards. They did, however, spot a defensive weakness in the Maroons. Lawrence completed 15 of 23 attempted passes, eleven of the successful shots being tossed by Halfback Evan Vandewalle. The passes, however, netted them only 72 yards and 3 first downs.

Chicago's first score was made after an exchange of punts on a 60 yard march, in which Bartlett made runs, cutting back on sweeps of 11 and 15 yards. Skoning made up most of the rest with smashes over the guards, going over the middle for 3 yards and a touchdown. Bartlett converted the extra point.

Osen's Punting Checks Maroons.

Throughout the rest of the half Lawrence's defense kept the Maroons in check, although Chicago made three forays in the Viking's territory. The punting of Cliff Osen, Lawrence co-captain, who averaged 38.6 yards, helped hold off the Maroons.

Bartlett's first touchdown came early in the third quarter. Vandewalle lost 21 yards on an attempted pass when the Maroons swarmed through, and Osen's punt went to the Lawrence 41 yard line. On the first Chicago play Bartlett ran wide to the left, cut back and sped to the goal. Gillerlain kicked the extra point. Shortly thereafter the Maroon defense again forced Lawrence back and the punt was downed on the Vikings' 46 yard mark. Bartlett, Skoning, and Fareed carried the ball down to the 10 yard line, from where Bartlett went around right tackle for the remaining distance, Gillerlain again kicking the extra point.

Three successful passes gave Lawrence its first down and put the ball in Maroon territory before Fareed intercepted a pass on the Chicago 33 yard line. Fred Lehnhardt, Skoning, and Sollie Sherman drove to midfield, Lehnhardt and Sherman collaborated on a lateral pass play good for 15 yards, then Lehnhardt broke loose for a touchdown run, but the play was called back, both sides being offside.

Lawson Intercepts Pass.

Harvey Lawson, like Sherman a sophomore, went in in the fourth quarter and intercepted a Lawrence pass, which he carried 10 yards to the Vikings' 37 yard line. Sherman found a hole at left guard for 17 yards. Lehnhardt, Lawson and Sherman picked up yards steadily through the line until Lehnhardt went over for the fourth score from the one yard line. Lawson's placement failed.

A Lawrence fumble, recovered by Bob Wilkes, sophomore end for the Maroons on the Appleton team's 22 yard line, led to the final touchdown. The same trio that led the previous march carried the ball to the 8 yard line, from where Sherman went between right tackle and end for the distance. Lawson's kick was good this time.

On Ten Yard Line at Finish.

Chicago made 305 yards from scrimmage and 61 yards on passes, of which five in ten were completed, for 24 first downs. Lawrence made 3 first downs. Bartlett averaged 14 yards from scrimmage in six attempts, Skoning averaged six yards in 11 tries, Sherman 4.8 yards in 13 attempts. Fareed 3.5 in 9, and Lehnhardt 4 in 15.

knocked down by Sayre. Here was opportunity for a touchdown, for a De Paul end was uncovered in the scoring zone, but Hehn, hurried by charging opponents, failed to see him. Phillips then lost three yards when he was tackled by Bob Castelo, and on fourth down, Phillips' pass was knocked down by Cliff Kuhn, veteran guard.

Rain was threatening at the start of the game. De Paul won the toss and chose to defend the south goal with the wind at its back. Immediately De Paul set up its scoring opportunity when Harry Postaler's quick kick on first down soared over the safety man's head and was downed on the Illinois 7 yard line. The kick measured 68 yards from the line of scrimmage.

Illinois' return kick by Wardley was brought back eight yards by Phillips to the Illini's 35 yard line. From here De Paul scored on four plays.

Phillips lost a yard at left tackle and Paul Mattei's pass was incomplete. A pass by Phillips was touched by an Illinois defender, but Postaier caught the ball and ran to the Illini's 23 yard line.

Phillips Goes Over.

On the next play Phillips spun inside Larue Morris, right tackle, swept out to his left and scored standing up in the corner of the end zone. Posteler's placekick attempt for the extra point was low and to the left of the uprights.

Rain now came down in a torrent and while the deluge slackened later, it continued to rain steadily throughout the first half.

Illinois' second team, although now bolstered by substitution of Capt. Sayre at center and veteran Gene Dykstra, at right tackle, still could not stop De Paul's running attack. The demons took the kickoff from their own 32 yard line to Illinois' 24 yard line in five plays. Then, after two line thrusts, Pat Howlett's pass was intercepted by Mazeika, who returned thirteen yards to his own 27 yard line.

Howlett's fumble, two plays before the end of the period, which was recovered by Bob Reeves, Quincy sophomore, on De Paul's 36 yard line, was Illinois' first opening, but De Paul held.

Run Back Hurts.

Nine Illini were substituted to start the second period, the only men remaining in the game being Sayre and Dykstra. Ken Nelson, quarter back, kept the pressure on the Chicagoans when he kicked out of bounds on De Paul's 5 yard line. Mattei got away a fine return punt from behind the goal line out to his own 45 yard line, but indifferent covering of the punt permitted Stasica to return nine yards. From here the Illini paraded thirty-six yards for the tying score.

Stasica was the principal ball carrier with occasional help from Ken Zimmerman, sophomore full back. This pair made first down on De Paul's 21 yard line in three plays. Two more wide runs at De Paul's left tackle accounted for five yards and Nelson backed this up with a wide sweep around De Paul's right end, going out of bounds five yards from the goal.

Stasica swept wide around left end for four yards and then hit center to place the ball within inches of the goal. Zimmerman hammered through for the tying touchdown.

Illini Run Wide.

Pat Howlett nearly broke loose in the third period for De Paul, spinning through center for a gain of 17 years to Illinois' 42 yard line. Howlett might easily have gotten away except for poor blocking, Warren Cederberg, among others, letting Howlett go past him and into the arms of the last Illinois defender.

Phillips' fumbled Wardley's punt early in the fourth period to open the way for the winning place kick The wet ball bounded out of Phillips' arms. Bill Corrigan, substitute De Paul quarter back, dove for the ball, but it squirted away and Sayre recovered on De Paul's 15 yard line for Illinois.

De Paul checked three line plays with a loss of four yards. Then, on fourth down, despite handicaps of a wet ball and the sodden turf, Spurgeon sent the ball over the crossbar for the victory.

Illinois depended entirely on wide sweeping end runs in its attack. De Paul's attack was more versatile and the figures favored the Blue Demons in yardage gained. De Paul gained 192 yards by rushing and 41 yards on three forward passes completed in nine attempts. Illinois gained 156 yards by running and none in three pass attempts.

De Paul made seven first downs, five of them by rushing, as compared to six first downs for Illinois.

Lafayette, Ind., Sept. 26.—Purdue's running and passing attack handed an Ohio university eleven its worst defeat of the century, 47 to 0, this afternoon on Ross Ade field before a crowd of nearly 17,000.

Cecil Isbell, triple threat back field star, performing for the first time as a full back, and apparently fully recovered from the shoulder injury that hampered his activities all last season, turned in an impressive performance. The Texan accounted for four touchdowns on his own account and tossed a pass to Bill Vergane, giant 232 pound sophomore right end, for a fifth touchdown. One of Isbell's touchdown jaunts was for 65 yards, and another, which was even more brilliant as he reversed through nearly the entire Ohio university eleven, was for 39 yards.

Passes Tell Story.

Purdue's other two touchdowns came as the result of the effective aerial attack on passes over the goal line to Andy Botney and James Zachary, reserve ends, late in the game. With Isbell on the tossing end of most of the passes, the Boilermakers completed nine out of 19 aerials, for a total of 119 yards.

Purdue's line ripped the Bobcat's forward wall to pieces as the Boilermaker backs rammed through for consistent gains. Led by Isbell, Drake and Stalcup, and with the able assistance of such reserves as Bob Selby, the Boilermaker backs gained 378 yards in 53 running plays, an average of better than seven yards an attempt.

Team Plays as Unit.

The statistics reveal the superiority of the Boilermakers, but do not reveal the well knit team performance. Purdue made 25 first downs against 10 for the visitors, and gained 497 yards to 296 for Ohio university.

Purdue reserves were used liberally after the regulars had scored two touchdowns in the first seven minutes of play. The third period, with Isbell reeling off his two longest runs in rapid succession, brought out three touchdowns before the Bobcats could halt the onslaught.

Gophers Beat Huskies in 4th Period on Pass

Today another Gopher bid for stardom. It was Bud Wilkinson, reformed guard. His defensive play was outstanding. After knocking down many of Washington's 17 passes he grabbed one of Uram's tosses for a 17 yard gain on the last scoring drive.

Almost as effective for the Gophers was Julie Alfonse, co-captain. He shone brilliantly on the offense and intercepted three passes when his goal line was threatened. He was Minnesota's leading ground gainer. Not far behind was Bill Matheny, whose 32 yard run had much to do with putting his team out in front. In the line, Ed Widseth and Midler at the tackles and Ray King were the big Minnesota stars. Quarter Back Logg's punting was without question the high spot of Washington's play. He frequently put the Big Ten champions in the hole with his remarkable and accurate kicks. Markov in the line put on a great exhibition at tackle. From a statistical standpoint, there wasn't much to choose. The Gophers completed two out of four passes for a total of 27 yards, while the Huskies made good four of their 17 tries for 58 yards.

CUBS VS. GIANTS AT THE POLO GROUNDS

67% PREFER MILD VINTAGE TOBACCO

New York, N. Y., Sept. 11—It's a sure bet when you back the taste of Vintage tobacco. Its mild, mellow flavor wins every time. At the Polo Grounds, 271 fans, watching the tense pennant drive, made a taste test. By an overwhelming majority, they preferred the flavor of Vintage tobacco.

We picked smokers at random from the crowd . . . gave each two unidentified cigars—a Vintage White Owl and another, representing the leading nationally advertised brands.

No names or familiar bands on the cigars . . . not a thing to prejudice the smokers . . . nothing to favor either cigar . . . Taste alone counted. Each man smoked both cigars, then indicated the one he liked best. 67% preferred the Vintage White Owl's mildness.

Wherever you are, you can get the same mild, uniform cigar that won these taste tests. It costs but 5¢ at your nearest cigar store.

Vintage WHITE OWL

● No one field can always produce good tobacco. In a Vintage year, the leaf is richer, more full-bodied. In our really mild White Owl Cigar, we use only tobacco of Vintage quality. That means special buying.

● White Owl's Crop Inspection System, the only known organization of its kind, keeps a check on growing conditions in the finest filler-tobacco districts in America. We know where Vintage tobacco is maturing and buy the best of it for White Owl.

● Aging by nature! . . . an average of three years. No economical short cuts . . . no secret processes. Vintage tobacco tastes good in its natural state—doesn't need artificial treatment.

MUCHO GUSTO WINS LINCOLN FIELDS STAKE

Victor by Six Lengths in Handicap.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Kentucky's reformed selling plater—Mucho Gusto from the barn of Mrs. Kirby Ramsey of Louisville—showed 'em his flying heels again at Lincoln Fields yesterday afternoon when he galloped to an easy victory in the ninth running of the Lincoln handicap.

Racing down the home stretch into the teeth of a rainstorm, he ran away from his eleven rivals. At the winning post he was in front by a margin of six lengths.

Bandalore from George Clark's Rosedale stable of Canada finished second. Billbo from New Orleans, owned by F. P. Letellier, was third. Banish Fear, a son of Blue Larkspur, didn't mind the rainstorm, either. He finished fourth.

Second Stake Victory.

It was Mucho Gusto's second stake victory of the Lincoln Fields season. A week earlier he had won the Francis S. Peabody Memorial handicap by four lengths from much the same kind of a field.

They piled five more pounds on his back for the Lincoln, but that made no never mind whatsoever. The Lincoln, won in the past by such famous horses as Chance Play, Sun Beau, and Lady Broadcast, was his race from start to finish.

During most of the journey he toyed with his opponents. Jocky Buddy Haas had him in front and going smoothly before the field hit the clubhouse bend. He ran even more smoothly going down the back stretch, spreading his long bay legs out in sensational strides. Those short-legged horses behind him simply had no chance.

A crowd of 11,000 stood through the steady drizzle which had developed into a hard beating rain by the time the Lincoln was run to see Mucho Gusto score his triumph.

Tranquillity Entry Favored.

The Tranquillity Farm entry of Captain Cal and Songmaker ruled as the favorite. Mucho Gusto also had many backers. He paid $9.20 to win, $5.40 to place, and $4.60 to show. Bandalore's place price was $6.80, and to show he paid $5.20. Billbo, the extreme outsider in the battle, paid $11.80 to show.

After a five minute delay at the post, mainly due to Bandalore's stubbornness, the field was sent away in perfect alignment. Buddy Haas on Mucho Gusto went right to work and shot the Ramsey colt into the lead, with Billbo and Captain Cal closest. Crowning Glory was off well and Spanish Babe was next, with the rest of the field of twelve strung out. Noble Count trailed far back.

As the field swept by the clubhouse in the rain Mucho Gusto held a two length lead over Captain Cal with Billbo third. Mucho Gusto was racing easily on the rail as they went down the back stretch. Billbo finally displaced Captain Cal for the runner-up position, with Banish Fear making up the most ground by coming with a rush to get into contention.

Mucho Gusto Holds Lead.

Around the far turn it was still Mucho Gusto, but his lead was being whittled down by Billbo, which got up to within a length of the leader. Captain Cal was hanging on for third, but was gradually losing ground.

Mucho Gusto ran right away from his field when the challenge came. Down the stretch he drew steadily away. One by one his closest competitors dropped back.

Mucho Gusto turned the quarter in :24, the half in :47 2-5, three-quarters in 1:12, and the mile in 1:37 3-5.

The Louisville Ramseys picked him up out of a claiming race for $3,500 about a year ago. To date this year he has won $9,040.

WordenEnters 3 Favorites; Only One Wins

Tom Worden of Chicago started three favorites during the afternoon at Lincoln Fields but scored with only one of them. His stoutly backed Euryalus was soundly beaten in the New Roseland purse and finished out of the money. Legenda, the 2 year old that had scored four straight victories in the Worden silks, finished second in the Evanston purse when Proph came up from behind and nailed her at the finish. The Worden horse to win was Mansco. He beat Double B. and Judge Leer by a neck in the Gary handicap. He paid off at $5.60, which hardly got the army of players who back Worden horses even.

Lincoln Fields' red brick charm, set off by emerald lawns striped with beds of gray "dusty miller" and pink Iceland moss, and spangled with beds of yellow and gold cannas, was crowded. The new cocktail lounge, done in green and gray and cut with splashes of yellow and red, was filled between races.

From Peoria came Mr. and Mrs. Paul Strehlow, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Williamson, and Dr. and Mrs. Hugh Cooper.

The Joliet contingent included Mr. and Mrs. John Heise Stewart Hutchison and the Misses Virginia and Mildred McCoy. Senator and Mrs. Richard J. Barr had as their guests Mr. and Mrs. Charles Martin and Mr. and Mrs. Lester Wiswall.

ANOTHER EASY VICTORY FOR MUCHO GUSTO

Mucho Gusto, the reformed selling plater, from Kentucky, runs off with the ninth Lincoln handicap, decided in the rain yesterday at Lincoln Fields. At the finish of the mile and a sixteenth, run in the fast time of 1:44 1-5, Mucho Gusto was six lengths ahead of Bandalore and two more lengths in front of Billbo. It was Mucho Gusto's second stake victory at Lincoln Fields, a week ago he having won the Francis S. Peabody Memorial handicap. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Granville Is Easy Victor at Belmont

New York, Sept. 26.—[Special.]—Granville did the expected at Belmont Park today when he won the 44th Lawrence realization, but he accomplished it in such a manner before 20,000 persons that he was accorded the rolling applause usually given the victor of a bitterly fought battle.

As it was, Granville won easily by two lengths at the end of the mile and five-eighths. The time was 2:43 3-5, Giant Killer was second, a length and a half in front of Memory Book. Then came Jean Bart and Corundum. The result of the $23,251 race made Granville the year's leading money winner with a total of $110,295. His share of the purse was $19,550.

Stout Rides Granville.

Jimmy Stout, the stable rider, was in the saddle and once more handled the son of Gallant Fox in a most confident manner. At the finish William Woodward, chairman of the jocky club, dashed from the roof of the clubhouse to the unsaddling enclosure on the track level to lead in his colt as has been the traditional custom.

Granville now is ready for his race next week with Discovery, the handicap champion which bowed to him at Saratoga. Confidence is greater than ever in the Granville camp that the victory will be repeated.

Wand Close Winner.

In the second feature, Mrs. Walter M. Jefford's Wand and King Ranch's Dawn Play came to the line so closely locked that it took a long scrutiny by the judges to decide the former of these fillies had won in the $14,650 matron stakes. The value to the winner was $12,075.

The first stake of the day, the Brook steeplechase handicap, saw Joseph E. Widener's colors in front for the tenth time. His horses through the years have dominated this stake, which was established by the members of the Brook club, and Bushranger dominated his field today. He won decisively with Henry Little holding hard after the challenge of Thomas Hitchcock's Rioter had been put down in the last half mile.

BLACKHAWKS TO OPEN SEASON AT STADIUM NOV. 5

MONTREAL, Sept. 26.—(AP)—The governors of the National Hocky league failed to reach a decision today on the dispute between the Boston Bruins and New York Americans over the ownership of two players. They succeeded, however, in arranging the schedule for the 1936-'37 season.

The governors decided to let Boston and New York decide between themselves where Nels Stewart and Joe Jerwa should play. They were purchased by the Americans from Boston last season, but the Bruins claimed it was a one year arrangement and both reverted to Boston for the coming season.

The schedule will open Nov. 5 when Detroit, winner of the Stanley cup last spring, plays at Toronto, and the Chicago Blackhawks are hosts to the Americans.

North Carolina Whips Wake Forest, 14 to 7

Charlotte, N. C., Sept. 26.—(AP)—The University of North Carolina came from behind in the fourth period today to whip Wake Forest, 14 to 7, in the opening game of the season for the two teams. A crowd of 10,000 saw the contest.

Clemson Rally Beats Virginia Poly, 20 to 0

Clemson, S. C., Sept. 26.—(AP)—Clemson rallied in the second half today to beat Virginia Polytechnic institute, 20 to 0, in the first Southern conference game of the season. Clemson scored twice in the third period and once in the fourth.

Winner trained by G. C. White. Went to post at 2:16. Off at once. Start good, from Bahr gate. Won easily, place driving.

HAT CHECK, racing in his best form and having speed from the start, forced the early pace under strong restraint, took command without need of stout urging when approaching the stretch, and continuing well held sway thereafter. LADY MARLBORO, also showing speed from the start, was under vigorous riding after five-eighths, swerved out in stretch, but held on well. CHAUVENET saved ground throughout, stood pressure courageously the final quarter, but could not get to the leaders.

Winner trained by J. J. Flanigan. Went to post at 2:51. At post 2 minutes. Start good, from Bahr gate. Won easily, place driving.

EAGLE PASS, far out of it early and slow to respond to strong riding, came with improved speed in the final quarter and reaching the lead in the last sixteenth, drew out rapidly thereafter. ONE NIGHT, away very slowly, bettered his position fast, headed SNEAKIN in the final eighth, and held on well, but was no match for the winner. SNEAKIN, hustled into the lead when saving ground on the turn, bore out slightly in the stretch and weakened badly after five-eighths.

Winner trained by J. J. Sirl. Went to post at 3:20. At post 3½ minutes. Start good, for all but SUN X., from Bahr gate. Won easily, place driving.

PANIC RELIEF took command with a rush, maintained his advantage under steady restraint on the turn, was shaken up in the stretch and, although bearing out, held sway to the end. BARBARA A., receiving a hustling ride, and having speed from the start, was aided by saving ground and holding on well, held WILDA safe. Latter, forced to lose ground and strongly restrained early, came with good belated speed in the final eighth.

Winner trained by J. M. Goode. Went to post at 3:50½. At post 2 minutes. Start bad, from Bahr gate. Won handily, place driving.

PROPH, away fast, but taken under restraint when outrun, saved ground to the stretch, where he was directed between the leaders when coming with a rush in the final eighth, and after getting up, drew clear under vigorous hand riding. LEGENDA displayed fine speed from the start, saved ground throughout and weakened after succumbing to the winner, but outstayed LAKE VIEW. Latter, fractious at the post and away poorly, was much used to attain a contending position but held on with determination and was wearing down LEGENDA.

MANSCO, benefited by the pace and responding well when placed to light urging after reaching the final quarter where he came to outside, wore down DOUBLE B. in the final eighth, but could not draw out. DOUBLE B., close to the pace from the start and under steady reserve for a half mile, took a short lead under strong pressure approaching the final eighth and held on gamely, but was not good enough. JUDGE LEER, slow to begin and far back for a half mile, closed resolutely under strong handling.

MUCHO GUSTO took command without need of strong urging, was rated under steady restraint for three-quarters, came away fast when shaken up, and won with speed in reserve. BANDALORE, rank at the post and away slowly, failed to rally to brisk pressure on the far turn, but came strongly in the final quarter and continued boldly to the end, though no threat to the winner. BILLBO, a factor from the start and rated under restraint for three-quarters, made a game bid, then weakened.

LADY FEDERAL, suited by the going and hustled into command, was taken under steady reserve after the first quarter, maintained her advantage without need of strong urging and probably had something left. PALASA, never a great distance out of it and slightly forced back after reaching the second turn, rallied to strong riding in the final quarter and bore over badly in the last eighth. CARNELIAN, under restraint for three-quarters, did not endanger the winner when placed to pressure, but held on well, though unable to withstand PALASA.

Parsons and Macomb Play to Scoreless Tie

Macomb, Ill., Sept. 26.—[Special.]—Playing in a steady downpour, Parsons college of Fairfield, Ia., and Macomb Teachers battled to a scoreless tie today.

Lewis, Burman Open Stadium Season Friday

John Henry Lewis, light heavyweight champion from Phoenix, Ariz., and Clarence [Red] Burman of Baltimore, Md., will meet in the autumn inaugural at Chicago Stadium Friday in a ten round bout which heads this week's national schedule. The match is a nontitle affair, but it presents Burman with an opportunity to become No. 1 man for a shot at the crown.

Although Jack Dempsey's protégé has been performing in the heavyweight ranks the last year he is in reality a light heavyweight. He weighed in at the class limit of 175 pounds when he trounced Billy Treest in a ten round battle at the Stadium Feb. 21. This accomplishment was subsequent to the Baltimore fighter's excellent performance in beating Hank Bath, erstwhile prodigy of Jack Kearns, at the west side building Feb. 14.

Burman never has scaled more than the 183 he carried against George Brown, whom he knocked out in four rounds at Dallas, Tex., July 2. He came in at 179¾ when he whipped Dutch Weimer at Washington, D. C., June 22. When he knocked out Big Eddie Slake of South Bend, Ind., at Dayton, O., April 16 he was at 178. The Baltimore Redhead has chalked up ten straight triumphs. His victims include Hans Kohlhaas, whom he knocked out in two rounds at Tampa, Fla., Aug. 7; Buddy Knox, who fell victim in five sessions at the Stadium, March 27, and Corn Griffin, who took the count in one round at Baltimore, Feb. 7.

Interest in Show Mounts.

Lewis, who won the title by defeating Bob Olin at St. Louis Oct. 31 of last year, has displayed his wares here on two previous occasions. He whipped Izzy Singer, New York heavyweight, at Chicago Arena, April 22 and Max Marek at Comiskey park, the home of the White Sox, July 10. He turned out a fine piece of work against each, registering the biggest kind of hit.

Interest in Friday's show is mounting so rapidly that it is evident it will be a financial success. Tickets are priced at $1, $2, $3, and 4.16, plus tax. A crowd of 10,000 is expected to gross approximately $25,000.

Bouts on this week's boxing and wrestling schedule include:

Monday.

At Marigold gardens—Max Chowaniec vs. Johnny Brown, light heavyweights, and Edwin Waling vs. Pat Robertson, featherweights, each eight rounds; Henry Huerta vs. Pete Lello [5], and Nick Peters vs. Tommy O'Loughlin [4], all lightweights; Phil Rosenberg vs. Tony Cianciola [4], welterweights.

At Coulon club—Series of amateur boxing bouts.

Tuesday.

Wednesday.

Friday.

At Madison Square garden—Jimmy McLarnin vs. Tony Canzoneri [10], welterweights.

RIPON SCORES IN FOURTH; BEATS MILLIKIN, 6 TO 0

Fallon's attempted place kick failed.

Ripon had the offensive edge, piling up 11 first downs to two for Millikin. The punting of Fallon and the defensive play of Bill Giraitis, Millikin right end, stood out.

CARDINALS PLAY CHAMPION LIONS AT DETROIT TODAY

Bears Invade Philadelphia to Meet Eagles.

Today's Games

Chicago Cardinals at Detroit.
Chicago Bears at Philadelphia.
New York at Pittsburgh.
Boston at Brooklyn.

BY GEORGE STRICKLER.

The Cardinals and Bears go forth to the professional wars on foreign fields today, the Cardinals to open the champion Lions' second season at Detroit and the Bears to Philadelphia to see whether they actually are as good as they appeared in trampling over Green Bay last week.

It will be the Lions' first appearance against opposition outside their own ranks since they were held to a 7 to 7 tie by the College All-Stars at Soldiers' field. Their chances of success are enhanced by the physical state into which the Cardinals were pummelled two weeks ago in their opening game at Green Bay.

Russell, Smith Still Hurt.

Doug Russell, the league's leading ground gainer last year and the Cardinals' chief offensive threat, and Bill Smith, one of the greatest ends in the country, are in no shape to play, although they may be used. Dave Cook, former Illinois half back who has been switched over to full back, will start, but there is no assurance that he can last long enough to be of real value. His shoulder, dislocated in the Green Bay game, has healed, but he has missed so much practice in the process of recovery that he is far from being in condition.

The Lions are reported in excellent shape, better in fact than they were against the All-Stars, when their outstanding ball carrier, Dutch Clark, operated under the handicap of only three days' practice. Coach Potsy Clark is expected to start a veteran club, but sometime during the afternoon the Cardinals will have an opportunity to catch Ike Peterson, who proved so elusive in the Chicago back field last fall. The Cardinals traded Peterson, a little fellow, for Pug Vaughan to increase the heft of their back field.

Vaughan Likely Starter.

Vaughan in all likelihood will start against his old teammates, the Lions, in Russell's left half back position, rounding out a back field of Pangle, quarter back; Nichelini, right half, and Cook, full back. The other alternative is Sarboe at quarter back, with Mikulak, last year's full back, at half back. The preponderance of injuries which has hampered the Cardinals since they entered training last month at Michigan City is further evidenced in the switching of Mule Dowell, a full back last year, to a starting assignment in Bill Smith's end and the promise that he will see some action at left half back.

Playing Over Heads.

The Bears appeared to be one of the greatest teams in the league's history last week when they whipped the Packers, 30 to 3, but it has become a question since then whether they were displaying their true ability or playing over their heads. Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, which will be met next week, will establish the Bears' true worth.

The squad left for Philadelphia at full strength with all players in good condition.

CARDINALS.		DETROIT.
Dowell	L. E.	Morse
Blazine	L. T.	Johnson
Cuppoletti	L. G.	Monahan
Hughes	C.	Randolph
Volok	R. G.	Emerson

Wilson	R. E.	Ebding
Pangle	Q. B.	Presnell
Vaughn	L. H.	F. Christianson
Nichelini	R. H.	Cadell

BATTLEGROUNDS FOR SUBWAY SERIES AND TWO PRINCIPALS

This aerial photograph shows proximity of Polo Grounds (left) to Yankee stadium (right) in the upper Bronx area which will become the center of baseball interest with the opening of the world series Wednesday at the Polo Grounds between the New York Yankees and the Giants. The Harlem river flows between the two baseball parks, both of which are readily accessible for a nickel subway fare. [Associated Press Wirephoto.]

WORLD SERIES MAY SET MARK FOR ATTENDANCE

Big Parks, Rabid Following Favor Athletes.

New York, Sept. 26.—(AP)—Only sudden apathy on the part of New York's baseball fans can stop the 1936 world series between the Yankees and the Giants from rocketing to record heights. It has been 13 years since New York had a subway series, and it isn't likely that rabid rooters will let their favorites down.

With the play starting Wednesday in the Polo grounds, home of the Giants, the series is expected to eclipse the financial and attendance records set in 1926.

In seven games that year, the Yanks and Cardinals played before 328,051 spectators who paid $1,207,864. With the Polo grounds accommodating 51,856 this year and the Yankee stadium seating 71,767, the total attendance for seven games, on a capacity basis, would be 442,636. For six games attendance would be 370,869, and aggregate receipts would approach the $1,500,000 mark.

Capacity Crowds Expected.

The second game also will be played in the Giants' park. The third, fourth and fifth are scheduled for the Yankee stadium, across the river. If a sixth and seventh are necessary, the teams will travel back to the Polo grounds.

Judging by the business the Giants front office has been doing since the club clinched the pennant in Boston two days ago, and the weeks of ticket buying reported by the Yankees since they clinched the American league pennant on Sept. 9, capacity crowds are expected for each game.

The Yankee powerhouse, which blasted its way to 102 victories in the American league, and shattered one slugging record after another, will go into the series an 11 to 20 favorite, according to Jack Doyle, veteran Broadway betting commissioner.

Yanks Can Even Series.

With Carl Hubbell slated for the Giants' opening pitching assignment, Doyle quotes 6 to 5 against the Yankees in the first game and 3 to 5 against the Giants. He'll bet 12 to 5 against the Yankees taking the first two games, and 11 to 5 against the Giants doing it.

The Yankees can draw up even with the Giants in the subway series standings by winning this year. The National league champions took two of the three previous meetings in 1921-'22-'23.

Manager Bill Terry definitly has decided to open with Hubbell who has accounted for 26 of the Giants' victories. Sixteen of them in a row. His strategy is to use Carl again in the fourth game and also in the sixth if he is needed.

McCarthy Is Undecided.

Terry now is trying to make up his mind whether to shift from Freddy Fitzsimmons to Hal Schumacher for the second game. Schumacher's fine showing in the flag clinching game Thursday has Terry almost in the notion of following the plan he used in the 1933 series with Washington and putting Hal in the second game.

Manager Joe McCarthy hasn't selected the starting hurler for the Yankees, but big Charlie Ruffing, who scored his 20th victory of the season yesterday, is the popular choice. However, McCarthy may oppose the left handed Hubbell with another portsider, Lefty Gomez.

Most of the experts are on record as favoring the Yankees in six games

Three Yacht Clubs Hold Final Races

Thirty-seven sailing yachts contended in yesterday's final club course races of the season on three points off the lake front. A fleet of 19 craft raced off Belmont harbor, with nine in each fleet competing off Grant and Jackson park harbors.

Gossoon II., owned by Commodores Malcolm Vail and Joseph Moller, and Sterling Morton, won the Chicago Yacht club's R class race off Belmont harbor, as well as the season class championship. The sloop's elapsed time was 2:20:36. The runner-up, Ed Schnabel's Yankee, finished five seconds later. Dr. Theodore J. Morris' entry, Alert IV., was third, followed by the Karas-Latimer R boat, Atalanta.

Aquila Wins in Eagle Class.

Herbert C. Ellis' champion Eagle class sloop, Aquila, won by a large margin in its class to repeat for the title. Dr. George Davis' Orn was second. Aquila's elapsed time for the R Eagle 12 mile course was 2:23:52.

Mrs. L. L. Karas' new Star boat, Alcore, won the Star class race by more than two minutes. Clare Udell sailed the craft with Mrs. Karas. The fifth and last boat to finish in the Star class, Galatea, won the Chicago Yacht club's season championship of the Stars. It is owned by W. S. Faurot and C. D. Wiman.

John T. Snite's schooner, Bagheera, won on corrected time in a special 15 miles race for cruising craft off Belmont harbor, defeating Joseph Butler's Ben Bow. Bagheera's corrected time was 2:46:16 for the 15 miles.

Betty Bro First to Finish.

The last race of three for the Columbia Yacht club's Commodore's cup was sailed off Grant park. Vice Commodore Milton Friend's Betty Bro was first to finish, in 2:04:45, leading B. J. Myren's Kid Sister by 1 minute 15 seconds elapsed time.

Black Hills Teachers' Player Dies of Injuries

Yankees Rate as Series Favorite on Batting Power

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

[This is the fifth and last of a series of articles comparing the New York Yankees and New York Giants, opponents in the approaching world series.]

The New York Yankees, champions of the American league, can hit. Right in those few words should be the answer to what may happen when these same mauling Yankees square off in world series toil next Wednesday on the Polo grounds—home acres of the New York Giants, the National league's entry in the so-called autumn baseball classic. The Yankees can hit, and that's the big reason they must be doped as probabilities to keep the world title in the junior major for the second successive year.

The Yankees over a stretch of six months battered down the pitching in their own league and there is nothing wrong with American league pitching. The Yanks never were pressed. There was a smooth consistency about their work. They won their pennant by an overwhelming margin despite the presence of a couple of other contenders with class. At no time did they find occasion to become fretful over their chances.

Giants Make Great Comeback.

The Giants haven't enjoyed leisure. With the race more than half on its way they apparently were completely out of the running. They reached such depths that their outspoken manager, Bill Terry, promised a housecleaning during the winter. Then the tide suddenly changed. The Giants came back with a lucky splurge similar to that which lifted the Cubs into a flag last September. But while the Giants are deserving of credit for their fight they wouldn't have succeeded if other conditions hadn't contributed. They got there only because the other contenders—the Cubs and Cardinals—melted down to the status of .500 performers. It was an easy pennant to win.

Terry's fellows will get into the series fully conscious that they have been through a tough grind. That may hurt them physically as well as mentally. Having won a pennant, an item they weren't even thinking about a couple of months ago, they may let down. And even if they don't let down they might find it easy to work themselves into a jittery state merely thinking about how the Yanks can hit the ball.

Allows for Short Field.

When Yankee hitting is mentioned in connection with the impending event it includes allowance for the short field in the two parks where too much space is set aside for cash customers and not enough for the proper playing of the game. The Giants' home measures only 259 feet at the right field foul line and not much more on the opposite side. The Yank right field is around 300 feet and left field similarly shy on distance.

The Yanks are experts at scoring bull's-eyes in parks lacking space. They even manage to clear the fences frequently in parks where the barriers are remote. Not one of them, but a half dozen are constant home run menaces. The Giant pitchers will have to keep this in mind at all times. Lou Gehrig, Bill Dickey, Joe Di Maggio, and Tony Lazzeri are some of the half dozen.

Hubbell Looks Certain.

If the Giants win, the ride will have to be taken on sensational pitching which won't prevail if the Yanks are the kind of hitters they appear to be. There is no doubt about the class of Lefty Carl Hubbell. Give him a good day, which is about all he ever has, and a couple of runs and he could check the best team ever put together. Hubbell might win the opening game and might win again even if given only a day of rest. But it is the in betweens that Bill Terry must think about.

The claim has been raised that the Yankees, like the rest of the American league, have no outstanding pitchers. That's a National league boast and might easily be incorrect. If the National league was as classy as some of the yokels seem to believe why did the Cardinals with a one man pitching staf and despite a string of injuries to important men in other positions stick in the race almost to the finish?

It is conceded that the Yankee pitching wasn't consistent at any time during the season. It didn't have to be. In most of the games the Yank batting power produced runs in such quantity that the pitchers seldom saw occasion to bear down. But when bearing down was necessary they had the stuff. Nobody can laugh off men like Charley Ruffing, Monte Pearson, Vernon [Lefty] Gomez, or even Pat Malone, who is one of those what-the-hell lads who, if given the chance, might step in and prove that to him a world series game is no different than any other kind.

Hitting, of course, isn't going to be everything. In any game there is the matter of fielding. In this respect the Yanks have a team edge. The biggest part of the edge is at short, where Frankie Crosetti has had his greatest year. Matched against the Yank shortstop will be Dick Bartell, an erratic performer.

Batting Champ Gives Color to City Series

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 26.—The Chicago city series will present the new major league batting champion at no increase in prices. The world series is the big baseball show, but it won't present a major league batting champion or any one close to the mark possessed by Luke Appling, White Sox shortstop, who has clinched the great baseball honor for Chicago.

Appling, if his season's mark of .388 means anything [and it should mean plenty, because it has been a steady accumulation throughout the campaign, with nary a slump in the process], should be the batting standout in a series in which the Sox will present more potential power than they've ever thrown at the Cubs.

Associates Are Good, Too.

With all his championship class—and this includes a knack that no Cub has shown consistently, that of hitting in the pinches—Luke has some associates who know how to sock. There's Rip Radcliff and his .337, Zeke Bonura with his .330, Jack [Surprise] Hayes with his .316, and Mike Kreevich with .307. All regulars, these gents, and not a one of them who is not capable of smashing the baseball out of either Wrigley field or Comiskey park. Moreover, until the recent September siege of hayfever, caused by pollen from the Sox's old morning glory bed, these Sox .300 lads developed no timidity with men on bases. Some of them even escaped the pollen scourge and all promise that they will not allow their respiratory systems to clog in competition with the Cubs, whom they've always considered pushovers.

The Cubs, on the other hand, have some fine hitters to swing at White Sox pitching. Who is there to sniff at Frankie Demaree's .348, which has put him fourth among regular National league batsmen, or Bill Herman's .335, which gives him a chance to go into the top five after tomorrow's finale.

Don't Look at Runs Batted In!

Cub partisans who seek to show that the Cub hitters are as good as those on the Sox pay roll will do well to avoid the significant runs batted-in figures. The whole story of the Cubs' failure in the National league is told by that statistical department.

Bonura leads the Sox with 137 runs batted in. Demaree leads the Cubs with 94. Appling is second on the Sox with 123 runs batted in, as compared with Herman's 91. Hayes has batted in 84 runs and Hack, third on the Cubs, has 77. Radcliff is fourth on the Sox with 81, as compared with Galan's 72.

Demaree Leads in Homers.

Demaree gives the Cubs home run honors with 16, as compared with Bonura's dozen. Kreevich is the triple knocker with 11, as compared with Herman's 7. Radcliff, Bonura, and Rosenthal are tied with Herman in the triple business. Herman gives the Cubs a wide margin the doubles department. He has 57, compared with Bonura's 38. Herman is the singles leader with 210, against Radcliff's 205. Demaree has 208 and Appling 202.

The Sox have the top run scorers. Radcliff with 118, Bonura with 117, Appling with 110, and Kreevich with 99. Herman and Hack each have run across the plate 100 times.

Haas leads both clubs in sacrifices with 22 and Allen and Galan are tied for stolen base leadership with 16 each.

With all these statistics for reference, all the hitters will have to do is figure out each other's pitchers and then do the same stuff they've been doing all season. If they do, it will be a great city series.

Duke Defeats Colgate, 6-0, on 66 Yard Drive

Durham, N. C., Sept. 26.—(AP)—Duke's Blue Devils, champions of the Southern conference, launched the new football season today with an intersectional conquest over Colgate's Red Raiders before a home coming crowd of 26,000. The score was 6 to 0 but Duke held more decisive command of the entire game than the score indicated.

Duke put over the only score with a 66 yard drive in the third period. Eric Tipton furnished the scoring punch, lugging the ball through Colgate's stubbornly resisting forwards from the one yard line, but Elmore Hackney's passing and elusive open field running contributed substantially to the decisive march.

NAVY TRIUMPHS, 18 TO 6.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 26.—(AP)—Rallying briskly in the closing minutes, Navy triumphed, 18 to 6, over William and Mary today before 13,500.

He was ably assisted by brilliant blocking and by speedy Johnny Wood of New Martinsville, W. Va., who also secured two touchdowns.

Ithaca, N. Y., Sept. 26.—(AP)—Cornell's new deal in football produced a flood of 11 touchdowns on Schoellkopf field today, as the big red eleven, with sophomores setting the pace, defeated Alfred, 74 to 0.

From Dick Baker's touchdown run of 52 yards to Bill Griest's recovery of a blocked punt for a touchdown late in the fourth quarter, Cornell commanded the play. Forty-three Red players saw action as the Ithacans, with their 74 points, equa' the toal poins scored in seven vicorlss total points scored in seven victorless games a year ago.

DARTMOUTH, 58; NORWICH, 0.

Hanover, N. H., Sept. 26.—(AP)—Dartmouth routed Norwich this afternoon, scoring nine touchdowns to run up a total of 58 to 0 before a crowd of 7,000.

Records Fall in Regatta for Power Boats

Washington, D. C., Sept. 26.—(AP)—Spills and broken records marked opening heats today of the President's cup power boat races.

Notre Dame, driven by Clel Perry of Detroit, plowed the choppy Potomac to take the first heat and gain 700 points in the scoring.

A world's record was set for 225 cubic inch hydroplanes by Miss Manteo, owned by H. A. Greef of Manteo, N. C., and driven by L. D. Hassel. Hassel pushed her down a mile straightaway—with a flying start—to develop 69.215 miles an hour.

SIMMONS SCORES ON LONG RUN AS IOWA WINS, 14-0

Hawkeyes Beat Carleton in Opener.

Iowa City, Ia., Sept. 26.—[Special.]—Ozzie Simmons broke loose on a muddy field for a sixty yard touchdown run to lead Iowa to a 14 to 0 victory over a lighter Carleton college team in the Hawkeye's season opener today. Although the game was played on a slippery field and in steady rain, Iowa looked none too impressive against the well trained Carleton team.

The half ended scoreless, the Hawkeyes only sustained drive ending with a fumble by Simmons. The one serious scoring threat in the opening half was made by the Carls, who advanced nineteen yards to the Iowa 18 yard line, where the Hawkeyes held.

Ozzie Breaks Loose.

Simmons provided the scoring spark just three minutes after the second half started when he slipped through a swarm of players at left tackle, found himself in the clear and raced sixty yards for a touchdown, the nearest Carleton man trailing him by ten yards. Don Nelson, guard from Rockford, was sent into the game and place kicked the goal.

The Hawkeyes started their second and final scoring march late in the third quarter with two sophomores, Balazs and the fleet Eicherly bearing the brunt of the attack. The touchdown came on the fifth play of the fourth period, Eicherly going over from the three yard mark. Nelson again successfully kicked the point.

Iowa Gains 228 Yards.

Statistics showed Iowa gained 288 yards from scrimmage to 46 for Carleton with the ratio of first downs being 13 to 1.

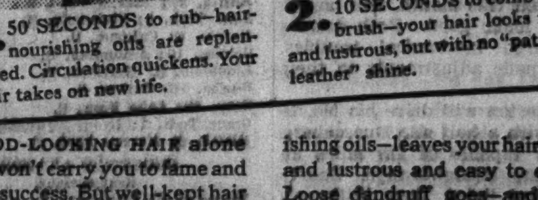
Good-looking hair is a Social Asset

Use VITALIS and the "60-Second Workout"



1. 50 SECONDS to rub—hair-nourishing oils are replenished. Circulation quickens. Your hair takes on new life.

2. 10 SECONDS to comb and brush—your hair looks rich and lustrous, but with no "patent-leather" shine.

GOOD-LOOKING HAIR alone won't carry you to fame and social success. But well-kept hair is a definite asset in a man's business and social life. Yet many men never think of it as a "plus"—never give their hair even the little time it needs for health and grooming.

Tight, dry scalp is often to blame for dull, lifeless, unkempt hair. And to waken your scalp—to bring your hair back to life and lustre—there is nothing like Vitalis and the stimulating "60-Second Workout."

Vitalis and massage quickens the circulation in the scalp—restores the flow of natural, nourishing oils—leaves your hair alive and lustrous and easy to comb. Loose dandruff goes—and with it, one threat of falling hair. And yet there's no trace of that objectionable "patent-leather" look.

Give your hair a chance. Get a bottle of Vitalis from your druggist. Start your first "60-Second Workout" today—keep it up regularly.

ASK YOUR BARBER

He's an expert on the care of scalp and hair. He is recommending Vitalis in the new single-application Sealtube. It is the most sanitary package ever made. Be sure to get a Sealtube.

Pro Golfers to Battle Today for State Title

Fifty of the state's leading golf professionals will comprise the field that will compete in the annual Illinois P. G. A. tournament at the Itasca Country club today and tomorrow. The competition will consist of 72 holes of medal play and will serve to close major competition in the Chicago district this season.

In addition to determining the 1936 state professional championship, the tournament will also serve as a medium to select seven qualifiers for the national P. G. A. event to be held at Pinehurst in November.

Four Chicagoans Exempt.

Four local players—Johnny Revolta, the current national title holder, Tommy Armour, runnerup to Revolta last year, and Ky Laffoon and Horton Smith, who were members of the 1935 Ryder cup team—are exempt from the sectional trial. All except Smith, however, will compete in the state meet.

Frank Walsh of Bryn Mawr Country club is the defending state champion. He will have his hands full, since the field comprises a number of the leading professional shooters in the country.

Cooper in Field Today.

Other leaders in the field include Harry Cooper of Glen Oak, finalist in the national open this year and winner of the St. Paul open; Dick Metz of Mill Road Farm, Tony Penna of Itasca, Jim Foulis of Ruth Lake, Orville White of Olympia Fields, Eddie Loos of Lake Shore, Gunnar Nelson of Rockford, and Bert Montressor of Decatur.

The first twosome will tee off on the 36 hole journey today at 8:45 a. m. The second 36 holes will be played tomorrow. The tournament is open to the public.

The autumn midget auto title events will open tonight at River view speedway, Addison street near Western avenue. Twelve of the 25 cars listed for competition will qualify for the 30 lap feature. Art Hartsfeld of Toledo, O., former national motorcycle champion, hopes to repeat his victory of last Sunday night by winning the main event.

Wally Zale and Jimmy Snyder, indoor champion, who has not won a feature event this month, will be out tonight to make good. Both drivers have suffered mechanical troubles, but have made adjustments to their cars.

Ted Tetterton will drive his No. 16 equipped with a half size Duesenberg motor and capable of 125 miles an hour on the straightaways. Shorty Sorenson has listed Tony Willman's old No. 5 which is powered with a three-quarters sized Miller motor.

In addition to the 30 lap feature there will be three qaulifying tests at 7 laps each, a 10 lap handicap, a team contest, and a 10 lap consolation for nonqualifiers. The first race is set for 8:30 o'clock.

Mills to Meet Giants Today in Two Games

The Chicago American Giants baseball team will invade Mills stadium, Lake street and Kilpatrick avenue, this afternoon in its last appearance on the west side against the Mills club in a double-header. Women will be admitted free. The first game will start at 1:30 o'clock. In a previous meeting the Mills and Giants divided a pair of games.

The Giants will present a stronger lineup than the one which appeared against the Mills last July. Willie Wells, shortstop, and Mule Suttles, first baseman, leading hitters on the Giants last season, have returned to the club after spending the summer in the east.

Ted Trent and Willie Cornelius will pitch against the Mills, while Manager William G. Harley of the Mills will use Jim [Hippo] Vaughn in the opening contest. Jack Wilkins, another left hander, who possesses a blinding fast ball, probably will pitch the second game for the Mills.

Dave Goodman, former Mills outfielder, who has been with several minor league clubs during the last two years, will play left field in the absence of Charley Uhlir, who is unable to play because of a foot ailment.

TRIBUNE TO HOLD SOCCER TOURNEY OPENING OCT. 11

Entries Close at Midnight Wednesday, Oct. 7.

THE TRIBUNE this morning announces it will conduct a Chicagoland soccer tournament to be held on Saturdays and Sundays beginning Oct. 11. Any amateur team is invited to enter, but none will be accepted after midnight Wednesday, Oct. 7, the date for the closing of nominations.

PETER J. PEEL.

Following a suggestion by Joseph Triner, president of the United States Football association, Peter J. Peel, who will have charge of the tournament, decided to divide the competition into three divisions. Class A will be for the highest ranking entries, Class B for the second group, and the Junior division for teams made up of players 21 years old and under.

Teams Must Register.

The only requirement for placing a team in the tournament is registration with the Illinois State Football association, of which Robert Scott of 14908 Broadway, Harvey, Ill., is secretary. There is a fee of 50 cents for each member of a team and upon payment each player is eligible to compete for one year in soccer games sanctioned by the United States Football association.

An entry blank is printed in an adjoining column. Fill it out as directed and mail to the Soccer Editor, CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

Assisting Mr. Peel in conducting the tournament are E. M. Plambeck, secretary of the International Soccer league; Irving Nessbaum, president of the Illinois State association, and J. Holeb, president of the Chicago Soccer league.

International League to Meet.

Plambeck said he was confident that thirty or more members of his league will enter teams. His organization will meet Wednesday to decide definitly on its numbers of contestants.

All games, including the finals, will be played in public parks or other open grounds. No admission will be charged at any time. Every game must be played to a decision.

THE TRIBUNE will present trophies to each winning team and prizes to each member of the Class A champions.

If teams in such cities as Peoria, Milwaukee, Davenport, Rockford, and Gary desire to enter plans will be made to permit them to have local eliminations and the winners come here to compete against the survivors in Chicago.

WHEAT PRICES STEADY DESPITE FRENCH ACTION

Uncertainty Ended, View of Traders.

Devaluation by France and other developments in the European monetary situation failed to have any material effect yesterday on the world's wheat price structure. Fluctuations in the leading markets were within relatively narrower limits than earlier in the week. The active deliveries in the North America markets closing practically unchanged as compared with Friday.

Leading grain interests in the United States, Canada, and Europe yesterday were practically unanimously in the belief that devaluation of the French franc removed an uncertainty which had been hanging over the wheat market for months, and regarded the action as likely to be reflected in higher prices for commodities ultimately.

September Future Expires.

Yesterday was the last day for trading in grain futures calling for a delivery of the cash article during September. The expected squeeze of operators who sold September corn at lower prices failed to materialize, as there were large amounts of contracts for sale at 21 cents over the December future. September corn closed ⅜ cent higher at $1.16¼ per bushel.

The expiring delivery of wheat gained ¼ cent and closed at $1.17½ per bushel. Oats advanced ¾ cent. September rye lost 1⅛ cents for the day. The closing out of contracts for 20,000 bushels of September feed barley advanced the price 5¼ cents with the close at 91 cents, a new high for the season.

Exchange Affects Liverpool.

An advance in the price of Liverpool wheat futures offset to some extent a sharp recession in the sterling exchange rate. The net loss in the English market, which aggregated 1⅜ to 1¾ cents per bushel in American equivalents, was about as expected in view of the decline in North American markets late Friday.

International trade in cash wheat came to a standstill yesterday. Sellers were reported to have withdrawn all offers to importing countries owing to the inability to sell foreign exchange. However, the trade expects business to be back to normal the latter part of this week.

December Delivery Prices.

Closing prices on the December delivery of leading grains, with comparisons, follow:

	Yesterday.	Friday.	Wk. ago.	Mo. ago.
Wheat	$1.15⅛	$1.15⅛	$1.13⅛	$1.09
Corn	.95⅛	.95⅝	.95½	.94
Oats	.42⅞	.42½	.43	.43
Rye	.82⅞	.83	.80⅝	.80⅝

Cash corn prices slumped badly yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade, with carlots of No. 2 yellow selling in the sample market when the exchange closed at 4 cents discount as compared with the September delivery.

A leading local commission house yesterday advised its clients that cash corn received in Chicago on Wednesday, the last day of September, cannot be used by buyers intending to make delivery on September contracts because the new commodity exchange act provides for one day's notice on delivery.

May Change Corn Grading.

Spurred into sudden activity by complaints of members of the Chicago Board of Trade that there was a threat of a mixture of Argentine and American cash corn being delivered on futures contracts in the Chicago market, the department of agriculture yesterday announced that it would consider a change in its grades of cash corn.

Under the proposed change the grade of flint corn must contain 95 per cent or more of that variety, instead of 75 per cent or more under the prevailing standards, while the variety of dent corn cannot contain more than 5 per cent of the flint type. Under the present specifications a maximum of 25 per cent of flint corn could be mixed with the dent variety for delivery on future contracts.

Public Notice Required.

Under the provisions of the United States grain standards act 90 days' public notice is required of any amendments to the official grain standards.

The department of agriculture, it was stated, was desirous of reaching a decision in the matter not later than Oct. 10, and farmers, cash grain handlers, processors, and others were requested to hand in their comments on the proposed changes in the grades by that date.

Increases of 10 per cent in the winter wheat acreage in Kansas, compared with the seeded area last year, and of approximately 50 per cent above the acreage harvested in 1936 are generally expected this fall, according to a report from James E. Bennett & Co's. Kansas City office. In some localities, seeding is practically completed but in other sections practically no progress has been made. Fairly general rains fell in Kansas yesterday, which were expected to facilitate field work.

DOMESTIC BONDS FIRMER; FRENCH ISSUES DECLINE

New York, Sept. 26.—[Special.]—Except for sharp recessions in the values of French dollar loans on only a few sales the market for bonds today on the New York Stock exchange remained undisturbed by the overnight announcement of the proposed devaluation of the French franc.

Trading was the heaviest for a Saturday since Feb. 8, sales totaling $9,183,000, compared with a turnover of $7,493,000 on Saturday a week ago.

Having been widely discounted in financial circles, traders in the domestic securities virtually ignored the action as a market influence and, under the leadership of secondary railroad liens and United States government obligations, prices generally moved forward at a fairly brisk pace.

Big Trade in U. S. Bonds.

The unusual activity again was attributed to the heavy turnover in United States government bonds, particularly the treasury 2⅞s of 1951-1954 and 1948-'51, both of which showed a turnover on the exchange of more than $1,000,000. Prices were somewhat mixed at the close with net changes showing gains of 1 to 6-32 point and declines of 1 to 3-32. The upward trend predominated, however.

In the domestic corporate sections, where considerable hesitancy has been apparent during the last few days because of the financial crisis in France, confidence returned with the actual announcement of the abandonment of the gold standard by France, and prices in practically all sections moved forward in fair volume. Secondary railroad issues were again quick to assume the leadership, while selected industrial and utility loans also participated in the movement.

French Dollar Bonds Slump.

French dollar bonds were naturally slow to open on the exchange and did so at sharp recessions in price. The government stamped 7½s of 1941 yielded 16½ points to 140, while bids on the unstamped 7s dropped rapidly to 150, representing a decline of 10 points, although no sale was made in the latter issue.

Sharp declines were also scored in Nord Railway 6½s and Soissons 6s. Polish government loans yielded ground, while in contrast, moderately higher prices were paid for Italian government bonds.

NORTH WESTERN AUGUST INCOME MOUNTS 143 PCT.

The Chicago and North Western railway yesterday reported an increase of 143 per cent in August net operating income as compared with the same month last year. This gain offset net operating loss incurred in the first seven months of this year.

World Wonders When and If Gentlemen Break Agreements

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

What a "gentlemen's agreement" means when used as the basis for international monetary accord is the question which has observers guessing since France announced that it has effected such an understanding with the United States and Great Britain. The "gentlemen" who run governments are turned out of office every now and then and their successors are usually individuals who have different views on money and other questions.

France's Socialist Premier Leon Blum is counting on the agreement he has made with this country and Britain to put over his program at home. He speaks of the agreement in glowing terms as a long step toward the establishment of world peace by three great democracies. Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau is no less enthusiastic about the new entente.

Nobody Signed Anything.

In announcing the United States' adherence to the monetary accord he said that an agreement among "gentlemen" is better than a document any day. He took pains to emphasize that nothing had been signed. Nothing that the participants agreed to had been put in writing. This fact, he stressed, was the unique feature of the whole arrangement.

This country was severely criticized by foreigners in 1933 when it upset the London economic conference with a last minute switch in front which upset all the previously laid plans for bringing about world stability. President Roosevelt's emissaries let it be known that they would agree to nothing that would tie the hands of the administration in carrying on its economic experiments. The bruised feelings which the British and French suffered at that time have apparently been forgotten.

The British have said little about what they will or will not do under a gentlemen's arrangement but Mr. Morgenthau and Premier Blum appear to have the usual confidence in British character.

It is notable that since England left the gold standard in 1931 she has consistently refused to make any binding commitments on monetary matters. Spokesmen of the government have pointed out that freedom to protect Britain's far flung trade must be maintained. This might mean further devaluation of the pound, if it became expedient in the interests of British business.

Each of the subscribers to the new accord apparently reserves the right to refuse to go along with the others when domestic requirements dictate otherwise. Whether the interests of the three will conform as frequently as they diverge is one of the unsettled questions.

Money Parleys Secret.

The ordinary citizen, whether he be an American, a Frenchman, or a Britisher, is usually left in the dark about the great monetary changes until all the issues have been settled. Then he is told that he cannot convert his money into gold or cannot export capital or whatever it is that the experts have decided. The open covenants, openly arrived at, apparently do not apply to monetary matters.

In a period when so many matters vitally affecting him are left to the discretion of political leaders the average man may well recall with longing the day when the rules were laid down in black and white and every one knew with reasonable certainty what might be expected next.

CHICAGO SHOWS MORE AT WORK, RISE IN WAGES

Employment and pay rolls in Chicago increased by 2 per cent in August over July, based upon reports from 2,872 manufacturing and nonmanufacturing enterprises, the Illinois department of labor announced yesterday.

In the Chicago metropolitan area, including 3,189 reporting enterprises employing 390,859 people, there was an increase of 2 per cent in the total number employed and a gain of 1.9 per cent in total wages paid in August as compared with July.

Increases in both employment and wages were reported for the following fields of industry in Chicago: metals and machinery, transportation equipment—building and repair, wood and allied products, lether and related products, chemicals and allied products, paper goods, printing and publishing, textiles and their products, clothing and millinery, foods, beverages, and tobacco, miscellaneous manufacturing, and the services group.

Decreases in both the number of workers and pay rolls occurred in the following groups: rubber and rubber products, wholesale and retail trade, public utilities, and building construction and contracting.

Increased employment but lower wage payments were reported for the stone, clay, and glass products, and the miscellaneous nonmanufacturing groups.

Thirteen cities, three statistical areas, and the group of all other cities showed increases in both employment and pay rolls in August over July, contributing to the gains of 2.4 and 2.8 per cent, respectively, for the state as a whole.

LARGE STOCK MARKET PROFITS

On August 17th we selected LEHIGH VALLEY RAILROAD as an outstanding bargain stock. It was then selling at 14⅞. Within five weeks it had sold above 19. Here, then, is a profit of nearly 30% in a little over a month.

Of course, this is an unusually large gain to make in such a short time, but it demonstrates what can be done if you ferret out cheap stocks quoted at bargain prices.

Such issues are hard to find. We have located another which appears especially promising. Earnings point definitely higher. The stock is listed on the New York Stock Exchange. Its action leads us to believe that it is due for a good advance. Still it may be picked up now at a very low figure.

FRANC BREAKS CENT AND HALF; POUND IS WEAK

New York Only Big Market Open.

The announced intention of France to devalue her money sent the franc and the pound sterling down sharply yesterday in the New York foreign exchange market, the only major center where dealings were recorded. Both the London and Paris markets were closed and domestic prices were largely nominal.

The franc closed at the equivalent of 5.12 cents, a decline of 1.46⅛ cents from the preceding day's finish of 6.58⅜ cents, a decline of approximately 22 per cent. Sterling, which slumped as low as $4.90 in early dealings, ended the day at $4.97, a net loss of 5 cents.

Soviet Sales Break Pound.

Initial weakness in the British currency resulted in large part from the dumping of £1,000,000 at the market by the Russian state bank, but a rally ensued when the American stabilization fund was used to absorb the bulk of the offering.

In terms of the franc the dollar yesterday was worth $1.29, compared with Friday's quotations of $1.007, a gain for the day of 28.3 cents.

Despite reports from Amsterdam that Holland intended to remain on the gold standard the Dutch guilder lost 1.53 cents to 65.95 cents. The Swiss franc was not quoted.

The Canadian dollar slipped .00 5-64 of a cent to close at 99.93⅛ cents.

Uncertain About Dealings.

In London officials of the stock and foreign exchange markets said they were uncertain when dealings would be resumed. Officials of both markets will meet tomorrow morning to decide on a course of action. Some authorities declared open market operations were necessary tomorrow to fix the relation between the dollar and pound.

The foreign exchange suspension was ordered by the bankers' committee shortly before the usual opening of the foreign exchange market. However, some unofficial dealings were transacted in the United States dollar at prices ranging from $4.91 to $4.95.

The gold brokers' committee also met and decided not to set a gold price for yesterday's transactions, approving a motion to quote only silver.

DISMISSES SUIT TO HALT CALLING COMMON STOCK

Federal Judge Charles E. Woodward yesterday dismissed the bill filed by minority stockholders of the American Hair and Felt company, Chicago, asking a temporary injunction to restrain the company from calling its common stock on Oct. 1.

Judge Woodward declined jurisdiction in the case on the ground that it deals with the internal matters of a company incorporated under the laws of Delaware, and that whether the stock is subject to redemption depends upon the Delaware law and the company's charter.

William Harsin of Harsin, Roberts & Co., La Salle street investment house, and head of the minority stockholders' protective committee, asserted after the ruling by Judge Woodward that on Monday the minority stockholders will file a similar bill in the Delaware courts—whether state or federal had not been determined—and that the American Hair and Felt attorneys had been notified of this intention.

BUSINESS NEWS IN REVIEW

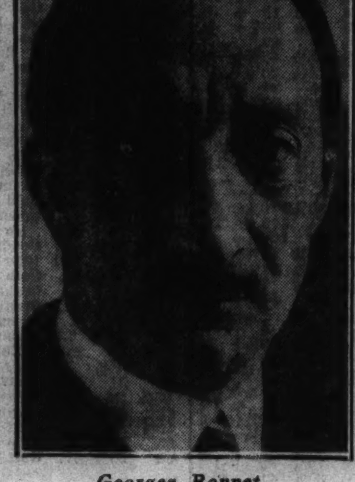
Decision last week by France to devalue the franc [see Foreign: Review section] marked its second major depreciation since the world war. Following deflation of the monetary unit by about 80 per cent in 1926, the government of Premier Blum last week took steps for a further reduction by approximately one-third from the rate of about 25 to a dollar established under the Poincare régime. Prior to the war the franc was valued at approximately 5 to the dollar.

Despite efforts of an inflation bloc within the country which desired a reduction in the value of the franc in an effort to help foreign trade, the final decision had been staved off for many months because of the fight of sound money advocates, small shopkeepers, and civil service employés, who saw in the move a reduction in their buying power.



Georges Bonnet.

Gold Flees.

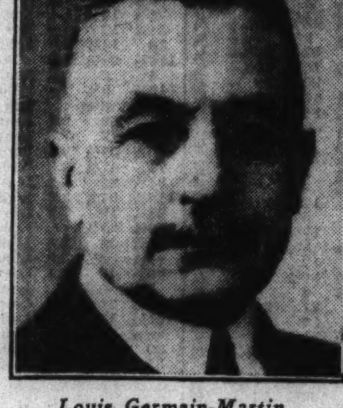
However, last week's action was precipitated by a steady drain on French gold reserves when the gold flight reached record proportions, carrying the total loss for the last year to approximately 1½ billion dollars.

French devaluation has been expected since the United States abandoned gold in 1933. This was believed necessary before international currency stabilization could be effected, an action regarded vital to removal of exchange restrictions, trade quotas, and miscellaneous devices of economic nationalism which have all but strangled international trade in recent years.

France's action forced Holland to bar gold exports and Switzerland to plan for devaluation, thus ending the European gold bloc.

Dislocation.

On Sept. 21, 1931, Great Britain stunned the world by going off the gold standard in an effort to help its foreign trade. The fight for further franc devaluation started immediately. Effects of the cheaper British money on France were felt in foreign trade immediately, but special legislation was rushed to protect French exporters in the wake of the depreciated pound.



Louis Germain-Martin.

Dislocation of the world money market was completed a year and a half later when the United States abandoned gold in March, 1933. The following June a world economic conference was held in London, where it was hoped a general stabilization of currencies might be effected. Financial policies of the New Deal, however, forced the United States to carry the devaluation experiment along with Britain.

Conference Fails.

Attempts of French and associated statesmen under Finance Minister Georges Bonnet at London to induce all nations to rally around a stabilized currency failed. The conference broke up and an opposing gold bloc was formed.

The London conference, however, served as fuel to the fire of French devaluationists and a definite group seeking this action arose in France headed by Paul Reynaud, former finance minister. Renaud had little or no support in official government or banking circles, although Bonnet and others favored a world stabilization of currencies.

Successive cabinets sponsored strong gold standard policies. It was not until the people's front government under Premier Blum took control of France, with its program of social, industrial, and banking change, that financiers became acutely alarmed over the prospect that inflation might be resorted to to pay for the inevitable increase in government debt resulting from the new program.

Louis Germain-Martin, one time finance minister, and Charles Rist, former adviser to the Bank of France and a leading European monetary expert, asserted that devaluation of the franc became inevitable with the advent of Blum's government. Rist, although a sound money exponent, said it would be better for the government to devalue immediately than to be forced by the inevitable processes of inflation.

Business.

Most standard indices disclosed improvement for the week. Steel production rebounded from its Labor day slump to 73½ per cent of plant capacity. Railroad freight trafic mounted to 789,500 cars, the peak level since the fall of 1930. Electric power production was the best on record, amounting to 2,170,807,000 kilowatt hours. Bank clearings ran somewhat below those of the preceding week but 5 per cent above a year ago. Automobile production fell to the year's lowest level, about 20,000 cars and trucks. However, this drop merely reflected shutdowns while manufacturers changed over tools before getting into full production on 1937 models. Retail and wholesale trade maintained a high level of activity. Private building awards were the second highest this year.

Jobs.

Each month this year manufacturing industries have put more men back on their pay rolls, and employment for August was back at the level of September, 1930. Of 90 manufacturing industries, 71 increased pay rolls and wages; 10 of 16 nonmanufacturing lines did the same. In all, 106 industries last month employed nearly a million more persons than a year ago and disbursed approximately 42 million dollars more in weekly wages.

Bankers.

In San Francisco 3,000 of the nation's leading bankers gathered, denounced high taxes, excessive New Deal spending, voted to form an "alliance" within the ranks of the American Bankers' association to fight branch banking, and departed.

Alarmed by the growth of Socialistic credit agencies under the Roosevelt administration and the steady increase in governmental spending, delegates adopted a resolution declaring that "the most formidable barriers against complete recovery appear to be the continuing budget deficits of our national government and the growing burdens of taxation."

The convention heard a score or more national leaders. Highlights:

Merle Thorpe, editor of Nation's Business—"The tide is running strongly here as in the rest of the world toward political control. The pity of it is that the many do not recognize it."

Roy A. Lincoln, president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company—". . . this heavy government expenditure has not been fully appreciated. But the day of reckoning comes ultimately. Whence will come the ability to pay even the interest on

STOCKS MOUNT ON DEVALUATION MOVE BY FRANCE

Aid of U. S., Britain Buoys Market.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 26.—[Special.]—Contrary to long standing expectations, the stock market responded to the overnight news of French currency devaluation with a sharp upturn today. Prices advanced fractions to more than 3 points and the turnover mounted to approximately 900,000 shares, making it one of the liveliest week-end sessions in several months. Virtually all groups shared in the rally, with steels, motors, rails, and assorted industrials especially prominent.

It was not a runaway market in any sense of the word but the large scale calibre of the buying and the persistence of demand was impressive enough to definitly put an end to the nervousness which the speculative element has been evidencing since it became a certainty that France would have to devalue.

Short Sellers Beat Retreat.

The explanation of the surprising turn in sentiment was simple. Professional traders who had been selling stocks short the last few days in anticipation of devaluation of the franc, failed to take into account the possibility that when France should decide to devalue the French government would receive coöperative aid from Great Britain and the United States.

As a result, when the announcement of devaluation carried the information that an international agreement to stabilize currencies had been made, the bears proceeded to beat a hasty retreat.

Devaluation of the franc has been one of the threats which has been hanging over the stock market for months. Now that it has come and soon will be a thing of the past, Wall street feels relieved.

Hope for World Agreement.

The hope was expressed today that French devaluation would be the prelude to international currency stabilization that would enable the various countries abroad which had placed burdensome restrictions on currency movements to lift those barriers and permit a freer movement of trade. Such a development would have a stimulating influence on world trade and world commodity markets, and promote international as well as internal harmony, it is believed.

Controverting predictions of some flight of capital from American stocks, observers pointed out that much French capital lodged in American securities is reluctant to return to a France still in the toils of political unrest and a Europe confronted with civil war in Spain and faster armament preparations in major European countries.

Many Issues Rise Sharply.

Chrysler, a lure for bulls in view of the motor industry's shift to manufacture of new models, was whirled up 3⅝ points. Bethlehem Steel rebounded for a net gain of nearly 2 points, du Pont recovered 2⅛, and Electric Autolite came back nearly 2 points.

In the rail group New York Central, Atlantic Coast Line, Baltimore and Ohio, Illinois Central, and Southern Pacific sold up 1 to more than 2 points. As a group rails were close to their best prices of the major bull trend.

Among other outstanding gainers were United States Steel, International Nickel, Westinghouse, Allied Chemical, American Telephone, Western Union, American Smelting, Kennecott, International Harvester, and Deere.

BELDEN ATTACKS WAGE POLICIES OF ROOSEVELT

Says Prices Are Boosted Out of Reach.

To encourage industrial workers to demand unreasonably higher wages at a time when the products of industry are out of reach of a large share of the population is to distort further relationship between consuming purchasing ability and prices according to J. C. Belden, president of the Belden Manufacturing company of Chicago.

Belden, long an outspoken critic of the labor policies of the national administration, said yesterday that complete economic recovery is definitly retarded by the added cost of manufacturing for which the federal government has been responsible. Such costs, he said, inevitably are translated into higher prices for industrial products, when the economic needs of this country are to reduce prices to cause a wider distribution of goods among all classes of the population.

Union Labor in Minority.

Organized labor represents only a minority of the country's consuming population. A vast section of the population is made up of "individual" workers who cannot bring collective pressure upon their employers and whose employers would do without help if they had to pay more. This class suffers a reduction in purchasing power with each increase in the price level. The country's economic problem, Belden believes, is to increase the purchasing power of this class of people with limited incomes through constantly reducing the prices of the goods they consume or would consume if they had the purchasing ability. Such price reductions would also increase the living standards of industrial workers as well.

The disparity in income between organized labor and unorganized labor has existed for some time and the general effect of the Roosevelt administration policies has been to widen that disparity, he said.

Belden pointed out that a popular fallacy exists that industry pays wages out of profits. In other words, an increase in wages means a reduction in profits.

Public Pays Higher Costs.

Wages are a part of the manufacturing cost and an increase in labor costs is eventually passed along to the consumer in the form of higher prices, Mr. Belden said. The consumer thus shoulders the higher wage cost. Consumers of limited purchasing ability may find that certain goods have moved out of the range of their buying power.

Continued reduction in the high prices which have restricted the market for goods is the solution of the unemployment problem, Belden believes. Competition must be free to act upon the profit margins of manufacturers and merchants. Efforts to narrow the wage differentials between different classes of workers must be directed toward raising the incomes of lowest paid groups rather than increasing the wage of the highest paid workers.

Under present government policy, he pointed out, competition has been restrained by legislation which has discouraged the investment of capital in new enterprises. At the same time it has usually been the higher paid group that has been encouraged to demand and secure higher pay. The resulting increase in the cost of manufacture has raised prices and put goods out of reach of a large section of the population.

LAW CONTROLING U. S. CONTRACTS IS INTERPRETED

Act Providing "Blacklist" in Effect Tomorrow.

The far reaching effects of the Walsh-Healy act, pertaining to government contracts and which becomes effective tomorrow, was pointed out yesterday by the Chicago Furniture Manufacturers' association in a summary of the act prepared for them by Byron M. Getzoff of the law firm of Lewison and Getzoff.

"In view of the extensive governmental projects that are planned for the coming year, which will require large quantities of furniture, this statute regulating the purchase of materials and supplies by the government should be of special interest to manufacturers," the association said.

Provides for 'Blacklist.'

Getzoff pointed out that the notorious "blacklist" provision of the act provides that any manufacturer who breaks any representations as to minimum wage, maximum hour, child and convict labor and safe working conditions as set by the secretary of labor will have his name distributed to all purchasing agencies of the United States and no contracts shall be awarded to these persons for a period of three years.

Provisions of the act are effective in all governmental contracts where the amount is in excess of $10,000; where the materials fit in the category of those that cannot usually be purchased in the open market; and where the contract is entered following invitations for bids on or after Sept. 28, 1936.

Wages and Hours Defined.

The requirements for these contracts are that the contractor either must make his articles or be a regular dealer of the merchandise used in performance of the contract; that no employé can work on the contract unless he is paid the minimum wage set by the secretary of labor; that no child or convict labor may be hired—the age limit is boys 16 and girls 18; that maximum hours of an eight hour day and forty hour week shall prevail, and that working conditions be safe.

Penalties for violation of these requirements, in addition to damages for breach of contract, provide for liquidating damages of $10 a day for each person employed who is not eligible to work on the contract, and also liability for liquidated damages equal to the underpayment to any employé engaged in performing the contract. The United States shall also have the right to cancel the contract, make new contracts, and charge any additional cost to the original contractor.

STEEL WORKERS READY TO ASK UNION CONTRACTS

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 26.—(AP)—Philip Murray, chairman of the steel workers' organizing committee, served notice today his forces expect to demand wage agreements throughout that industry. He declared failure of such negotiations will "lie squarely on the shoulders of the operators."

Murray, designated by John L. Lewis to head the drive to enroll this nation's 450,000 steel workers in one union, asserted the question of asking a conference with the employers will be discussed next Tuesday in Pittsburgh by the committee.

"I feel," he said, "that if the steel workers' organizing committee decided to change the policy with respect to the organizing campaign of steel workers that within a comparatively short time they could build up a situation, numerically speaking, to close the entire industry."

Several groups representing employés of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation recently asked President Benjamin F. Fairless for a wage increase in reply to his statement on Sept. 8 saying the company could not grant higher pay at this time. Carnegie-Illinois is the largest subsidiary of United Staes Steel.

COAL INDUSTRY IS WELDED INTO A SINGLE UNIT

This year's convention of the American Bituminous Retail Coal Merchants' association, which closed yesterday at the Stevens hotel, resulted in the first successful union of the various elements of the industry—producers, wholesalers, retailers and equipment makers—to meet problems created by new laws and competitive threats, association officials said yesterday.

"There is a growing realization that the understanding between all elements of the industry should be of the most sympathetic and helpful kind in working out problems of the coal business," said George I. Meth, president of the association. "Altogether, this year probably will see new advances in consolidating the entire strength of the industry for the common good."

Leon Glenicki, chairman of the exposition committee, reported that exhibits were maintained by eighty firms this year, against fifty at last year's exposition, indicating an eagerness to tell the public more about the coal business.

BANKER SESSION SOFT PEDALS ALL POLITICAL TOPICS

But Many Regret Failure to Criticize New Deal.

BY HOWARD WOOD.

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 26.—[Special.]—The most significant feature of the 62d annual convention of the American Bankers association which has just ended here was the strenuous and highly successful attempt to sterilize the official proceedings by the elimination of any expressions that might contain anything of even remotely political significance.

Perusal of the scores of addresses made before the convention discloses that controversial subjects were studiously avoided, many speakers going to ridiculous lengths not to say anything informative.

Some Bitterly Disappointed.

Conversations with leading lights among the delegates confirm these conclusions. Those who sympathize with the management's attempts to "keep banking out of politics" declare that the convention was highly successful. Those who hoped that the men who see the nation's finances from the inside and would seize the opportunity to clarify the issues, are bitterly disappointed.

"I think we have missed a great opportunity" said one of the latter. "The bankers have been criticized for not having warned the public in 1928 and 1929; now I believe we are making the same mistake. It is very well to try to escape the wrath of the administration by avoiding criticism of the New Deal financial experiments, but sooner or later the public is going to resent the fact that we did not tell them clearly what we think of the present situation."

Another Cause of Soft Pedal.

Aside from the desire of leaders in the A.B.A. to avoid tangling with the administration, another consideration motivated their decision to soft pedal criticism of the New Deal. Many of the more important bankers figured that outspoken opposition to the present administration would have reverse English, because banker espousal of any cause might make that cause unpopular among a certain class of voters.

The most illuminating speeches made this week, therefore, were by outsiders. President LeRoy A. Lincoln of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company pointed to the danger of continued government extravagance, and Merle Thorpe, editor of Nations Business, official organ of the chamber of commerce of the United States, cited similarity in the remarks of Tugwell and Ickes on the one hand and Lenin and other Marxists on the other. Both addresses were enthusiastically applauded by the bankers and made a deep impression.

Robert V. Fleming, outgoing A.B.A president, limited his criticism of the administration to a "nonpolitical" attack on government spending and the growing tax burden.

Warn of Inflation.

In private conversations, however, men who rank high in finance were not slow to express apprehension over the trend toward inflation and the nationization of banking and credit after the Russian pattern.

"If we could only get it across to the public," said the head of one large eastern bank, "that inflation of bank deposits through government spending will hurt the ordinary depositor and the ordinary wage earner through rising costs of living, we would be doing a real service.

"This inflationary program threatens the individual depositor, not the bank. The bank's obligations to its depositors are payable in dollars of whatever value happens to be current. We have no doubts about our solvency—our ability to pay depositors on the line. If this thing keeps on the depositor, not the bank, will take the rap."

In convention hall and committee meetings, however, such subjects were dodged almost completely. The management of the A.B.A has kept from getting its neck out, but the real issues are still not defined for publication.

COMMODITY PRICES FALL IN WEEK WITH EXCEPTION OF GRAIN

Commodity markets, other than grain, were generally on the downgrade last week. Liquidation of old style Rio coffee contracts carried the price off nearly ½ cent per pound and came within 1-100 cent of equaling the all time record low established in 1903.

Butter declined ¾ cent per pound due to reports of heavy imports, and eggs were ⅜ cent per dozen lower due to a slow consumptive demand. Wheat prices in Chicago and Winnipeg advanced to a new high for the season, with sales in Chicago at the highest level during the month of September since 1929.

Closing prices the last two weeks on a representative list of commodities, with the high and low levels for the season, compare as follows:

FLAIL SURTAX ON PROFIT RETAINED BY COMPANIES

Chamber of Commerce Calls Law Unjust.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 26.—[Special.]—The Chamber of Commerce of the United States today continued its attack upon what it termed the "inequities visited upon business by the surtax upon the undisturbed earnings and profits of corporations," as written into the revenue act of 1936.

The chamber said in its periodical, Washington Review, that since the regulations pertinent to the surtax were issued last month there appeared in statements received by it from business sources increasing evidence of confusion of taxpayers attributable to this "unprecedented levy as well as the difficulties and inequities attendant upon compliance with the measure."

The chamber forecast that differences of opinion as to interpretation created a "bewildering situation" as a result of which taxpayers, if they make mistakes, are likely to be heavily penalized.

Predicts Unfair Competition.

In contrast to the complex law aimed at prevention of competition, to which congress is constantly adding, the chamber said, "The present revenue law makes unfair competition inevitable," as the ability of a weaker corporation paying a tax of the proportions set up to compete with a financially stronger corporation which escaped the tax is obviously restricted.

In a special tax supplement to the regular review, the chamber said the surtax places "a brake on expanding business activity." At the same time, the supplement said, the levy would intensify any boom period by "coercing" corporations to distribute earnings and thus tending to increase spending.

"The surtax consequently has a double effect, lowering the depths in depression times and heightening the crest of the boom periods," it added.

Urges Reducing Expenditures.

Reduction of expenditures is the only way to a balanced federal budget, the chamber contended.

"Federal taxes are now unprecedentedly high," it said. "It is estimated that internal revenue taxes alone in the current year will amount to more than 5 billion dollars. This is 60 per cent higher than the figures of 1929 and 1930, and higher than any other year in our history, except the unusual year of 1920 when the excess profits and numerous other war levies were in effect."

"If the proposed examination of the tax laws by the joint committee on internal revenue taxation actually will embrace the real inequities in existing revenue statutes," the chamber added, "the necessity for a thorough overhauling of these laws would be indicated. Such a result might well please taxpayers, even though they might continue to have misgivings until it was made certain that no new forms of taxes or increased rates would be imposed."

USE OF CHECKS INDICATES DIP IN BUSINESS TOTAL

The volume of business transacted by check in the Chicago area decreased last week, banking statistics indicated yesterday. Debits to individual deposit account in the seventh federal reserve district for the week ended Sept. 23 totaled $1,073,570,000, compared with $1,270,596,000 a week earlier and $909,731,000 in the corresponding period of 1935.

Nationally, a sharper decline was recorded, debits amounting to $7,719,037,000 for the twelve federal reserve districts, compared with $9,773,504,000 in the preceding week and $7,133,999,000 in the corresponding 1935 period.

In Chicago the total was $623,733,000, against $776,784,000 a week earlier and $537,208,000 in the same week last year.

Bank clearings by members of the Chicago Clearing House association for the week ended yesterday totaled $294,900,000, against $314,500,000 for the week ended Sept. 19 and $251,000,000 a year ago.

I.C.C. DENIES PLEA AGAINST REDUCED N. W. RAIL RATES

Washington, D. C., Sept. 26.—(AP)—The interstate commerce commission refused today to suspend the operation of reduced freight rates on less than carload shipments of commodities from Minneapolis and St. Paul to points in North and South Dakota.

The commission's action makes possible the institution of the new rates Monday by five major northwestern railroads, the Great Northern, Chicago and North Western, Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific; Minneapolis and St. Louis, and Northern Pacific.

The Northwest Truckers' association, the Illinois-Minnesota Motor Carriers' association, the Sioux Falls, S. D., Chamber of Commerce, and the Sioux City, Ia., trafic bureau had protested the reduction and asked that present higher rates be maintained pending an investigation.

Waukegan Has Two Banks as Citizens National Opens

The new Citizens' National Bank of Waukegan opened yesterday. For the first time since June, 1931, the town has two banks. Earl D. Amsler heads the new institution, which succeeds the First State Bank of Zion. It occupies the building of the former Waukegan National bank. The first deposit made yesterday was a $5,000 check by City Treasurer Robert Will, received for the city from Allen Nelson, treasurer of Lake county.

the debt if the cost of running expenses of the government shall have already reached the limit which its citizens can bear?"

Rudolph J. Eichler, Los Angeles investment broker—"The depositor and not the bank will take the rap in the event that drastic inflation occurs."

Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Leland Stanford university—"Any civilization that is built up with the idea that the mass of people is big enough to take care of everybody without the individual person looking out for himself is doomed to failure."

Branch Banking.

Anti-branch bankers denounced a "plot" allegedly fostered by Marriner S. Eccles, head of the federal reserve board and a chain of Utah banks, to force a bill through congress destroying state rights in banking by permitting branch banking over state lines. First threatening to split the ranks of the association, the independents at a rump session moved to set up an alliance within the association to fight their cause.

Stocks.

Stocks were bolstered early in the week by favorable business news but faltered later as the gold flow from France became intensified. Selling became acute on Friday but yesterday a strong rally developed as traders construed the tri-power monetary agreement as constructive.

Full effect of the French devaluation plan had been discounted, it was believed, but nevertheless a cautious trading tendency was in evidence since no one had knowledge of how much selling might be touched off by French nationals in money to repatriate their funds.

Financing.

Plans for the largest piece of corporate financing in seven years was announced by the American Telephone and Telegraph company. It filed a registration statement with the Securities and Exchange commission for an issue of 175 millions of 3¼ per cent debentures which will be used for refunding purposes. The financing is the first step in a program to refund all the company's obligations—about 400 millions—into lower interest bearing securities.

New Deal.

New Deal policies were bitterly denounced by speakers at a convention of the American Bituminous Retail Coal Merchants' association here. Delegates were warned that the federal government is now the senior partner in every business and that pending legislation in congress offers a threat to every one engaged in business.

High taxes were assailed before the National Stationers association meeting here by Col. Robert H. Montgomery, New York accounting expert, who declared that the total federal debt of 34 billions must eventually be paid by the taxpayer, or "at some time in the future it will have to be defaulted or wiped out by inflation of currency."

In Boston, the National Association of Life Insurance Underwriters resolved unanimously for "a balanced federal budget, curbing of public expenditures, and reduction of taxation." Accomplishment of these three factors, the resolution said, was necessary to avoid uncontroled inflation.

Spending.

While these onslaughts were occurring President Roosevelt approved ten public works projects involving federal grants of 9½ million dollars and loans of a quarter million. They comprised the second batch of allocations from the 300 million dollars set aside from the revolving fund by congress during the last session.

Revenue Act.

The first suits attacking the constitutionality of the revenue act of 1936 were filed by two Louisville, Ky., food concerns. The action was directed against the big packers—Swift, Armour, and Wilson. The petition asked the return of all processing taxes paid to the companies under the old agricultural adjustment act, declared unconstitutional early this year. The suits charged the federal government was seeking to get amounts collected by the packers as processing taxes and returned to them by imposing an 80 per cent assessment against such sums as income tax. They declared the so-called "windfall" tax is not an income tax but merely a scheme to obtain an illegal exaction, which is beyond the powers of congress.

Bank Payments.

Approximately $400,000 was returned to the depositors of closed Cook county banks during the week. Banks making repayments were the Park Ridge State, Arlington Heights State, First State of Barrington, Congress Park State, Melrose Park State, Pinkert State, Bryn Mawr State, Italian Trust and Savings, Lansing State, Hegewisch State, First State of Steger, West Town State, and Exchange State.

General Tire to Make Mechanical Rubber Goods

Akron, O., Sept. 26.—[Special.]—Plans for entering the mechanical rubber goods industry through the acquisition of a plant in Wabash, Ind., now belonging to the Relay Motors company, were announced today by the General Tire and Rubber company. Officials said that production will be under way by the start of 1937, and that present plans do not contemplate the production of motor car tires at the Wabash plant.

Anaconda Copper Raises Wages for 1,300 Employes

Butte, Mont., Sept. 26.—(AP)—The Anaconda Copper company announced today a raise of $12.50 a month for employés on a monthly basis in mining and metallurgical operations in Butte, Ananconda and Great Falls. The raise was limited to employés receiving less than $350 a month. The company said 1,300 employés were benefited.

Trading normally starting around 8 a. m. is expected to get under way about 8:30 a. m. under the new schedule. Bulk of the transactions are normally completed well in advance of the official closing time although on days of unusually heavy activity deals in cattle and sheep are frequently made near the close.

Cotton markets in New York, New Orleans and on the Chicago Board of Trade will operate from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m. Chicago time, instead of the present schedule of 9 a. m. to 2 p. m. On Saturday trading will be conducted from 10 a. m. to noon.

Banks Change Hours.

Banks in New York and other eastern cities which have been on daylight time will operate from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m., Chicago time, instead of the present 9 a. m. to 2 p. m. schedule. Chicago banks will continue their present hours—9 a. m. to 2 p. m.

General business will continue on the same schedule on which it has been operating since the city council early this year set Chicago's clocks ahead one hour. At the November elections voters will decide whether to retain the present system or return to central standard time.

RELEASE $120,000 CLAIM AGAINST UNION STATION

Washington, D. C., Sept. 26.—(AP)—The interstate commerce commission today approved release by the Reconstruction Finance corporation of $120,000 of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific Railroad company's claim against the Chicago Union Station company which had been filed with the RFC as collateral on a loan.

The approval resulted from the commission's approval of cancelation by the Milwaukee and three other proprietary railroads of the Chicago Union Station company of advances totaling $480,000 to the Chicago company. The roads agreed to cancel that proportion of their advances as part of a refinancing plan of the station company.

HOGS AND PORK SLUMP; IMPORTS FLOOD MARKETS

AAA Curtailment Program and Drouth Blamed.

Increasing competition of foreign pork, which is flooding the American markets, drove both pork and hog prices sharply lower again last week, despite the fact that current domestic slaughter supplies are abnormally low due to the crop curtailment program of the AAA and the two major drouth years, 1934 and 1936.

The department of commerce office in New York reports that port in 14 days ended Sept. 17 received 1,399,394 pounds of pork from 15 nations. This was sufficient pork to feed 11 per cent of that city's population for the 14 days without assistance from the American hog raisers.

Foreign Pork for New York.

Should all the pork received from other countries at the New York port be consumed in that city, New Yorkers would eat foreign pork one out of every ten days. Before the agricultural adjustment administration inaugurated its scarcity program among the American hog raisers, pork imports at all ports in the country would feed less than one half of one per cent of the New York people, if it was all sold in that one city.

During the two weeks' period Brazil, Canada, Cuba, Denmark, England, Germany, Holland, Hungary, Irish Free State, Lithuania, Poland, Uruguay, Czechoslovakia, Finland, and Italy sold meat in New York. Practically every class of pork was represented.

New York Market Swamped.

The influx swamped New York markets with sweet pickled hams, frozen fresh hams, cooked hams in tins, smoked hams, pickled, fresh frozen, smoked and cooked picnics, dried, salted and smoked bacon, dry salt cured and fresh frozen bellies, smoked and cooked sausage, pork lunch meat, spiced hams, fresh frozen loins, and fresh frozen shoulders.

According to packers a big share of the pork received at the New York port from other countries is consumed in that city. By expanding pork production other countries have managed to capitalize on the American meat famine created by the AAA and drouths, the gates of this country being wide open for pork imports from the whole world.

Prices Above Depression Lows.

Although hog and pork prices are dropping sharply under the flood of foreign imports, they still are substantially above the depression lows. Top hogs last week at $10.25 showed a decline of $1.80 from the 1936 peak established last month, but they are 240 per cent over the low spot of the depression. The various classes of hogs during the last six days declined 25 cents to 55 cents, the week's average at $9.50 indicating a drop of 35 cents.

Price trends in other live stock last week were mixed. Top steers and the best grades of light weights and yearlings finished fully steady for the week. Poorer classes declined 25 cents and some sales of big weights of longfeds were lower.

Cattle Prices Irregular.

The extreme top for the week at $10.50, paid Monday and again on Wednesday, equaled the highest mark since April. Grassy hefers incurred a sharp decline. Cows recovered slightly after an early break. Calves rose 50 to 75 cents in value. Stockers and feeders declined 35 to 50 cents.

Lambs fluctuated sharply during the week, closing 25 cents above the 1936 low established Thursday, but from 50 cents to $1.00 under a week ago. The six day average dropped to $8.75, a new low weekly average for the year.

Most live stock receipts yesterday were billed to packers from other points. Only scattered lots remained on the open market. A load of 215 pound butcher hogs sold at $10.15.

GRAIN AND DAIRY PRODUCTS FLOW INTO U. S. PORTS

Big Imports Expected for Indefinite Period.

Imports of foreign agricultural products at leading American ports of entry have become a matter of daily occurrence, and are expected to continue for an indefinite period. It is estimated more than 2,000,000 bushels of grain were received last week, including arrivals of Argentine corn on the Pacific coast.

New York, Baltimore, and New Orleans reported the arrival of Argentine corn last week, and New York also received 16,000 bushels which had been shipped from the Dominican Republic [San Domingo].

Foreign Rye Pours In.

Baltimore received 254,000 bushels of Latvian rye. Since the middle of August, over 1,100,000 bushels of foreign rye have been imported on the Atlantic coast, tending to curtail the demand for domestic grain to be shipped from the west.

Small amounts of Polish barley were received at New York and were regarded as the forerunner of recent purchases for shipment to this country estimated at 2,000,000 bushels. Included in the receipts at that port was 20,000 bushels of oats from Chile.

Chicago received 98,000 bushels of rye and 104,000 bushels of barley from Canada. Since the opening of lake navigation, receipts at Chicago from Canada have aggregated 1,568,000 bushels of wheat, 1,047,000 bushels of rye, and 633,000 bushels of barley.

Argentine Corn Coming.

It is expected that approximately 200,000 bushels of Argentine corn will arrive here early in October. Domestic corn now is reported to be almost unsalable east of Buffalo, owing to severe competition with the imported article.

Canadian Cheddar style cheese has been arriving in Chicago during the last few weeks. New York received 274,000 pounds of butter from Holland, Lithuania, Siberia, Denmark, Poland, and Hungary last week. Purchases of approximately 1,000,000 pounds of Siberian butter were reported, and additional amounts of Polish, Hungarian, and northern European butter are scheduled to arrive this week.

Steel—1.

Countless words have been spoken and written during the last few years concerning the durable goods industries, the backbone of which is steel. One after another, the economists pointed out that no real recovery from depression could be achieved, no solid prosperity built, unless the heavy industries shared in the upward swing of business being enjoyed by merchandising lines.

Steel production dropped off about 85 per cent between its 1929 peak and its 1932-'33 low. It spurted at times during both 1933 and 1934 only to slump back again. In December, 1934, when Gen. Charles G. Dawes made his then startling prediction that steel and the heavy industries generally would lead the way to real recovery in the summer of 1935, steel plants were operating at only slightly more than 30 per cent of their rated capacity.

It was not until 1935 that the steel business really shifted out of low gear, and then it was materially aided by the booming automobile industry. The business world watched the steel rate climb steadily until it reached 70 per cent of capacity early this summer. The predicted summer lull never set in to any appreciable extent, and the rate recently broke into new high ground around 73 per cent with no sign of slackening. The average for the industry was about 60 per cent during the first six months of 1936, between 40 and 50 per cent during 1935.

Because volume is the most important single factor in profitable steel operations and because steel is so widely used that it constitutes a barometer of business and industrial activity, the production rate has been a matter of constant interest. Prices of finished steel products ordinarily fluctuate in a comparatively narrow range, concentrating attention on volume.

Volume is so all-important because of the heavy investments necessary in huge plants. Depreciation and maintenance costs continue heavy regardless of activity. Property taxes and administrative expenses cannot be cut down in proportion to volume of business. Interest on bonds must be paid, and to a lesser degree preferred stock dividends continue as a fixed charge.

It is a maxim in the steel industry that operations of nearly 50 per cent of capacity are necessary to break even on costs before anything is earned on common stock.

Further discussion of the steel industry will appear in this column next Sunday.

MIDLAND UNITED STOCKS IN SPURT; TRADING ACTIVE

Preferred Jumps to a New High Since '32.

Trading in the stocks of Midland United and its subsidiary Midland Utilities company featured yesterday's session on the Chicago Stock exchange, in which securities generally recovered somewhat from Friday's slump. Trading was active at 62,000 shares.

Midland United common ran up the heaviest volume for the day at 13,200 shares, closing at ½, up ⅛. The preferred jumped 4¾ points to a close and new high since 1932 of 14½.

Three Issues Gain.

Three Midland Utilities issues reached and closed at peaks since 1932. The 6 per cent A preferred hit 5, up 1½; the 6 per cent prior lien at 9⅞ was up 1⅞, and the 7 per cent prior lien at 10⅜ reflected a net gain for the day of 2⅜ points.

Two other highs for this year were established when Allied Products common closed at 19, up 2 points, and Sundstrand Machine Tool touched 21½, reacting to close at 21⅛, up ⅜.

Marshall Field common again drew attention by its strength and activity, rumors pointing to a favorable third quarter report. The issue traded between 17½ and 18⅝, closing at the latter figure for a net gain of 1⅛ points.

Other Gains Noted.

Other notable gains yesterday were ⅛ in Cord, ⅜ in General Household Utilities, ⅛ in Butler Brothers, and ¼ in Middle West. Of the 87 issues traded, 44 closed higher, 18 lower, and 25 unchanged.

Last week 462,000 shares were traded on the exchange, compared with 305,000 in the preceding week and 215,000 in the corresponding period of last year. Of the 183 issues traded during the week, 83 advanced, 68 declined, and 32 remained unchanged.

Twenty-five new highs for the year were set last week, compared with 17 in the preceding week.

COTTON PRICES RESTRICTED BY MONETARY SITUATION

Operations in cotton were restricted yesterday owing to uncertainty regarding the effect on export demand of the European monetary situation.

General rains in Texas, which it is feared will damage the quality of the crop, brought in a little commission house buying. Futures in American markets were lifted 8 to 14 points, with the close practically at the top [a point is equal to 1-100 cent per pound, or 5 cents per bale].

Spot cotton advanced 5 to 10 points, with New Orleans at 12.30 cents per pound, Galveston at 12.00 cents, Houston at 12.05 cents, and New York at 12.35 cents. Range of futures follow:

LARD TRADE LIMITED PENDING MONETARY ACTION

Trading in provision futures on the Chicago Board of Trade was limited yesterday. Cash and speculative interests acted with extreme caution pending further developments in the European monetary situation.

Lard futures advanced moderately, attributed to short covering, and closed with net gains of 12½ to 20 cents. Clear bellies [salt pork] closed nominally unchanged.

Cash lard was quoted $11.62½ per 100 pounds; loose $11.12½; leaf, $11.25; clear bellies, $13.25. Range of futures follows:

But Seasonal Recession from July Is Shown.

Building construction activity, measured by the value of permits issued, showed an increase during August of 51 per cent compared with the same month last year, according to Secretary of Labor Perkins. Compared with the preceding month permits registered a seasonal decline of 8 per cent.

"The decline was due to a falling off in the value of new residential buildings," Miss Perkins said. "The value of new nonresidential building, however, increased more than 8 per cent and the value of additions, alterations, and repairs more than 9 per cent.

Best August Since 1930.

"Although indicated expenditures for residential building in August showed a decrease compared with July, they were higher than for the corresponding month of any year since 1930.

"Compared with August, 1935, building activity for the month shows a pronounced improvement. Residential building showed an increase of 124 per cent. The value of nonresidential building increased 6 per cent. The gain in the value of all building construction over the year approximated 51 per cent."

New York continued to lead all American cities in building during August, with Chicago trailing in ninth place, behind even cities the size of Camden, N. J., and Memphis, Tenn.

Figures for Ten Cities.

Following are the first ten cities in dollar value of permits:

New York	$20,371,000
Los Angeles	6,800,000
Memphis	5,600,000
Detroit	4,639,000
Washington, D. C.	4,419,000
Philadelphia	4,196,000
Cincinnati	4,067,000
Camden	2,629,000
Chicago	2,482,000
Indianapolis	1,893,000

In cities having a population of 10,000 or over, permits were issued during the first eight months of 1936 for buildings valued at $884,129,000. This is a gain of 74 per cent over the corresponding period of the preceding year.

BUTTER, EGG, AND POTATO FUTURES UP ⅛ TO 4 CENTS

Butter, egg, and potato futures on the Mercantile exchange yesterday showed a better undertone, largely in sympathy with other commodity markets.

Scattered selling carried November butter off ¼ cent in the early trading to the lowest level since July 3, but the contract rallied to close ⅛ cent higher at 32⅜ cents per pound. Egg futures gained ¼ cent, with October at 25½ cents per dozen.

Forecast for killing frost in parts of the northwest brought in fair buying of potatoes. Futures advanced 2 to 4 cents. January closed at $2.30 per 100 pounds. Sales of butter futures totaled 60 cars; eggs, 47 cars; potatoes, 6 cars. Prices follow:

G. O. P. CANDIDATES HIT STATE TAXES

HORNER BLOCKS STREET REPAIRS IN KELLY FEUD

Ties Up City's Share of Gasoline Tax.

BY HAL FOUST.

Automobile traffic will continue to bump and jolt over broken and worn-out pavements of the south side because Gov. Horner is nursing his grudge against Mayor Kelly over the April Democratic primary fight. The governor has blocked the mayor's $14,100,000 resurfacing program.

The Springfield highway department refuses to let Chicago spend $2,350,000 of the city's share of the gasoline tax to obtain $11,750,000 of "easy money" from the WPA to finance a program for resurfacing between 225 and 250 miles of streets.

The city department of public works has prepared plans for pavement rehabilitation on the following south side streets:

Kedzie avenue—35th street to 43d street.

Wabash avenue—22d street to 29th street.

One Hundredth street—Van Vlissinger avenue to Avenue L.

Unless the governor changes his hostile attitude, the city will be able to do only a sixth as much work as is planned. The federal agency has agreed to allot $5 of "easy money" for easy $1 of gas tax. Under the motor fuel excise act, the state highway department must o. k. the plans of cities for spending their 1 cent of the gasoline tax.

Mayor Kelly, reluctant to lose an outright grant of $11,750,000 in federal funds, is withholding expenditure of the city's gasoline money in hopes the governor will relent. In the meantime motorists are continuing to pay their taxes without getting the pavements. The money is lying idle in Springfield. And there are 2,400 men awaiting employment on the resurfacing.

3D, 4TH WARDS TO SHIFT YARDS; COUNCIL RULES

The city council last week approved a recommendation that vacant property at 4413 Cottage Grove avenue be purchased for ward yards for the Fourth ward. The present Fourth ward office is located at 50th street and Wabash avenue and will be used by the Third ward after the new yards are completed. According to Ald. R. R. Jackson, Third ward, who made the recommendation, the present Third ward offices at 43d and State streets are in poor condition and beyond repair. He stated that both the Third and Fourth wards will be benefited by the change.

ASSAIL HORNER IN LEGISLATURE POST CAMPAIGN

Seek 2 Seats in 11th District Race.

BY STANLEY ARMSTRONG.

State taxation is a subject spotlighted by Republican candidates for the legislature in districts in which there are contests over the three seats in the Illinois house of representatives.

In the Eleventh district, on the southwest side, the Republican candidates, Roland H. Bradley and former Representative Calvin T. Weeks, are pounding the "excessive" taxation of Gov. Horner's administration.

"Taxes should be reduced to the minimum amount necessary to carry on the essential functions of state government," Bradley is informing voters.

"State, county, and municipal taxes can be reduced," adds Weeks.

Urges Sales Tax Repeal.

Besides tax reduction, Mr. Weeks is advocating a drivers' license law, reduction of state license fees on automobiles, a standard, unified system of auditing public accounts, education improvements, repeal of the sales tax, and a furtherance of civil service in state employment.

Mr. Bradley stands for sound business methods in government, and is warning the voters of the importance of the election on Nov. 3. One question to be determined, he says, is, "Shall our American form of government, which has stood the test of nearly 150 years under our constitution, be preserved?"

The Democratic nominees are Representatives George A. Fitzgerald and Michael E. Hannigan. Representative Hannigan favors creation of a state board of education as recommended in the Illinois educational commission report and is opposed to an increase in the sales tax or any other levy.

Raps Obsolete Laws.

"I am going to suggest to the next session of the general assembly," he says, "that instead of enacting a number of new laws we appoint a committee to recommend repeal of all obsolete and unenforcible laws now crowding the statute books."

State senators are to be elected in the even numbered districts, one of which—the Fourth—is on the southwest side. The contest is between Senator Frank [Bull] McDermott, Democrat, and Ignatius Zwarycz, Republican.

Mr. Zwarycz, who is running in a district settled mainly by Poles, came to Chicago from Poland 30 years ago. He is affiliated with the Polish National alliance and the Polish Roman Catholic union, and has been active in the Republican party in the district.

Circular Shows Record.

In a circular he has prepared for distribution Mr. Zwarycz pictures Senator McDermott's office in the brewery he owns, and illustrates Senator McDermott's votes for sales tax, gas tax, and to license handbooks. Pictorially, the Republican shows his own stand against the sales tax and for honest elections, better schools, old age pensions, and better recreational facilties for children.

Suburban communities in the south end of Cook county are included in the Seventh district, which bounds Chicago on the south, west, and north, in which two Republicans and two Democrats are fighting for the three house seats. They are Representative Bernice T. Van Der Vries and Frank E. Foster, Harvey, Republicans; and Representative Frank G. Ring, Harvey, and Emmett McGrath, former representative, Brookfield, Democrats.

Mrs. Van Der Vries was a member of the house committee on municipalities and her four years as a member of the village council of Winnetka gave her an insight into the problems of the more than 90 cities and villages in her district.

Tells of Obligations.

"Often it was necessary in committee to fight to protect our smaller cities from harmful legislation," says Mrs. Van Der Vries, "and sometimes the taxpayers of Chicago needed the assistance of those outside to protect them. Since I represent some precincts in the Thirty-eighth, Forty-first, Thirteenth, and Nineteenth wards I felt I should consider Chicago as well as the country towns.

"There is a good deal to be done by legislative action in assisting our municipalities to straighten out their tangled finances so they may function on a 'pay as you go' basis with reduced taxes. If reëlected I hope to be assigned to this committee again. At all times I shall fight for home rule."

Lottie Holman O'Neill [Rep., Downers Grove] is the only other woman in the house. She represents the Forty-first district, which includes Will and Du Page counties; was the first woman elected to the house, and is ending her sixth term.

Hits Age Pension Law.

Mrs. O'Neill is a critic of the state's old age pension law, especially of the provisions in it that were forced upon the legislature by the New Deal social security board. She declares the law lacks humanitarian principles.

"It is not a pension," states Mrs. O'Neill. "It is a special form of pauper relief for persons more than

Wage Aggressive Campaign in South Sectors.

In Illinois' great steel manufacturing region — the Calumet area — Patrick H. Moynihan, Republican nominee for congress, is eloquently portraying in his campaign the harmful effects of New Deal tax and tarif policies on the employment of steel workers in the territory.

Mr. Moynihan is the nominee in the Second congressional district, which includes the Calumet region within the city limits. He has been in the district for many years, representing it for one term in congress—1933-'34—and has seen at first hand the effect of the New Deal on employment in the steel industry.

"The Republican party always has advocated tarif laws to protect the American workingman from foreign labor," says Mr. Moynihan. "During 1934 and 1935 the United Kingdom, France, Belgium and Germany made large shipments of steel into the United States, during which time our steel plants were scarcely operating, and our steel workers were walking the streets in idleness. Our immigration laws wisely prevent the influx of cheap labor, but when steel is produced abroad and shipped here this cheap labor competes with the American worker."

Steel Imports Continue.

While there has been a decided pickup in steel manufacturing, due principally to demands from the automobile and other heavy industries, the imports of steel continue, thus shutting off a portion of the American market to the American steel plants, Mr. Moynihan shows.

These imports amounted to 272,369 tons of steel and pig iron in 1934, and 405,221 tons in 1935, according to the candidate. While the United States has a tarif of only $2.24 a ton on foreign steel, France and Germany maintain a tarif on American steel of $10.50 a ton, he says.

"If these importations of foreign goods are encouraged and allowed to expand," Mr. Moynihan continues, "the natural result must be a lowering in the prices of production which means a lowering of our standard of living."

Warns of Tax Perils.

Expenditures of the New Deal are resulting in an annual deficit of about 4 billions of dollars, Mr. Moynihan points out in his speeches. The debt can only be paid in taxes, increases in which will retard employment.

The Second district was Republican until 1934, and the G. O. P. is seeking to regain it. The incumbent is Congressman Raymond W. McKeough, Democrat, who is a candidate for reëlection. He voted no in the final poll on the conference report on the utility holding company act, but otherwise was a consistent supporter of the New Deal.

Taxation is a vital subject, too, in the Third district in which Frank M. Fulton, Republican, is contesting with Congressman Edward A. Kelly, and it is linked up with the "rubber stamp" congress issue.

Confidence Essential.

"The excessive and unprecedented taxes which are borne now by the individual taxpayer are the direct result of the undisputed sway which the majority [Democratic] party has exercised under the guidance of its leaders," says Mr. Fulton.

"The recovery of normal business depends largely upon the confidence business men place in the government. The profits of industry which are now for the most part diverted to government chests in the form of various kinds of taxes were better used by individual companies to enlarge consumers' markets and to increase production and employment.

"History has showed that huge taxes and excessive paternalism of a state are marked signs of its decline."

Defends Roosevelt.

Congressman Kelly is making speeches in defense of President Roosevelt's record. He says that while Mr. Roosevelt wanted business to recover so it might support the masses of people dependent on it, the financial interests wanted business to recover, "so that it might have another grand spree."

"Unprejudiced consideration," says Congressman Kelly, "will find that the action taken by President Roosevelt has been fully consistent with the statement made in his inaugural address in which he said:

"It is hoped that the normal balance of executive and legislative authority may be wholly adequate to meet the unprecedented task before us. But it may be that unprecedented demand and need for undelayed action may call for temporary departure from that normal balance of public procedure. I am prepared under my constitutional duty to recommend the measures a stricken nation in the midst of a stricken world may require.'"

DePriest Tries Comeback.

In the First district, which is a stronghold of the colored vote, Oscar DePriest, former Republican congressman, is campaigning aggressively to recapture the seat he lost two years ago to Arthur W. Mitchell, Democratic incumbent, who is a candidate for reëlection.

While in congress Mr. DePriest was credited with being a "watch dog" for the protection of the members of his race against harmful legislation, and voted against many New Deal measures, which he believed would be detrimental to them and others. His platform, which follows, carries on this attitude:

For an old age pension the taxpayers can meet; adequate appropriations for relief administered through nonpartisan commissions; enactments to enforce the 14th and 15th amendments to the constitution; passage of anti-lynching legislation; rights and privileges of all people regardless of race, creed, or color; abolition of the system of photography in the civil service and the use of finger prints instead.

Urges High Tarif.

For a high tarif to adequately protect American markets and labor; a balanced budget and a sound dollar; the Republican platform and the election of the Republican national, state, county, and city tickets; and against interference with the powers of the federal courts and against the New Deal's program of government competition with private industry and business.

Congressman Mitchell, too, has been active in his term for the betterment of the colored people. He has worked against discrimination in governmental departments, for the passage of an anti-lynching measure, and to wipe out racial discrimination in voting privileges in the south. He has worked and voted for New Deal measures. His interpretation of the New Deal is:

"It means that a program has been launched by this government under the leadership of our President by which the underprivileged, regardless of race or color, are to be given the same opportunity in the protection of life and freedom and in the fields of labor and in the pursuit of happiness as is given the richest of our citizens. The New Deal simply means a square deal for all and special privileges for none."

Women in Race.

One of the two women running for congress in Cook county is Mrs. Irene Gorywoda Tomas, Republican candidate in the Fourth—stockyards—district. Mrs. Tomas has a progressive platform in her campaign against the incumbent, Congressman Harry P. Beam, Democrat.

"I stand against the importation of foreign goods and foodstuffs which causes unemployment in this country," says Mrs. Tomas, "and against political meddling in industry and business. We must stimulate employment in permanent jobs in industry, but oust private monopoly and special privileges.

"I believe in the creation of a sound, liberal, old age pension system and in permitting labor to bargain collectively without interference. I think we should eliminate overlapping bureaus and the brain trusters, and cut the cost of government. Our needy citizens shouldn't be forced to sell their votes to buy bread."

Congressman Chauncey W. Reed, Republican, of the Eleventh district, which comprises Will, DuPage, Kane, and McHenry counties, has been energetic in attacking the New Deal and its "rubber stamp" congress. He lives in West Chicago, and his Democratic opponent, John R. Barber, resides in Joliet.

Sees Peril to Business.

One of the large industries in his district is the Elgin Watch company. It is one of three surviving watch companies in the United States, he says, but if the government continues under reciprocal trade agreements to encourage Swiss watch factories to compete in the American market the American companies will face hard times.

"As an economic proposition, the reduction of American made goods merely swells the ranks of the unemployed," says Congressman Reed. "Our government cannot consistently urge American industry to employ more men when at the same time it permits and encourages a flood of foreign made goods created by cheap labor to compete with its home products."

65 years of age. Instead of a flat $30 per month it is working out so many of our people are receiving as low as $5 from the state and a matching sum from the federal government, a total of $10 a month.

"There were several instances when the people spoke unanimously through their elected representatives in Springfield only to be advised the action was not acceptable to the New Deal in Washington. Regardless of what the people in Illinois thought, the actions had to be rescinded under the New Deal lash of 'take what we offer or get nothing.'"

Raps WPA Blunders.

Representative Warren L. Wood, Joliet, is the other Republican from this district. He is telling the voters of blunders made by the state and the WPA in road building in the district. German made wire fencing, he says, was bought although there are two plants in Joliet and Rockdale devoted to the manufacture of wire. The state paid for the wire.

The Democratic nominees are Dominic A. Romano, Joliet, and Joseph S. Perry, Wheaton, who was chosen by the senatorial committee after the death of Representative Michael F. Hennebry.

Mr. Romano favors the sales tax, but believes there should be a more equitable distribution of its revenues. He also stands for a drivers' license law, reduction of taxes, and a revision of the parole system.

"I believe," he says, "that a greater share of the sales tax money should go to relief. I also believe the schools should receive more state aid and township high schools should receive state aid. If no additional help is required or given to relief or to the schools I believe the sales tax should be reduced."

League of Women Voters Will Meet Thursday

The Cook County League of Women voters will present a summary of the platforms of the Republican and the Democratic parties at the first meeting of the season at 2 o'clock Thursday at the Wilson park fieldhouse, Wilson and Milwaukee avenues. Mrs. Eric W. Stubbs, program chairman, will explain the platforms.

THORNTON HIGH ASKS $300,000 TO BUILD ANNEX

Voters Are Called to Polls Next Saturday.

The question of building a badly needed addition to Thornton Township High school will be decided at the polls by township voters next Saturday. Polling places will be set up in the 13 Thornton township precincts for a vote on a $300,000 bond issue to finance the work.

William E. McVey, superintendent of the high school and junior college, said last week that unless the bond issue is approved and the addition constructed the high school will face serious difficulties within the next couple of years. The present structure, designed to accommodate 1,400 pupils, is actually housing 2,500.

The addition, which has been under consideration of the school board, headed by A. H. McDougall, for several years, is attracting the attention of Harvey and Thornton township service and civic clubs.

Financial Condition Sound.

Last week more than 400 residents attended a meeting called at the high school auditorium by the Thornton Parent Teacher association, at which Supt. McVey pointed out the necessity of the addition, methods of financing to be employed, and explained the exceptionally good condition of the school board's present financial structure.

Discussing the needed addition, he pointed out that in the last 10 years the high school attendance has almost tripled. In 1898, when the first structure was built for $60,000, the registration was 96. In 1912 a $140,000 addition was erected to accommodate 600 pupils and in 1927 the latest addition was built, costing $345,000 to accommodate 1,400 pupils. In 1925, 891 pupils were registered, in 1930, 1,426, anl last year, 2,203 attended the school.

The 1927 addition was costly because it included a power plant and structure and a shop and vocational building. Mr. McVey pointed out that the contemplated addition will include 27 classrooms, an increase in the lunchroom and library space, and accommodate 3,000 more pupils.

Now on Two Shift Basis.

The superintendent said the proposed addition, to be erected at the northwest corner of the present structure, will accommodate the full attendance on a one shift basis for several years. The school has been on a two shift basis for the last seven years.

The preliminary plans for the addition were designed by Burnham Brothers and Hammond, Chicago architects, associated with Frederick Beck, a Harvey architect. Beck has directed much of the modernization of the original high school building. Mr. McVey said it is hoped to have the new building completed by next September.

In explaining to parents and teachers the method of financing the addition, the superintendent pointed out that Thornton Township High school not only has the lowest tax rate of Township high schools in the county but has the lowest amount of outstanding tax warants and almost the lowest bonded indebtedness.

Would not Increase Tax.

"Situated as we are we expect to pay off our present bonded indebtedness in 1943 and then start paying on the proposed bond issue," he said, pointing out that such a method would not increase the present tax rate.

The Thornton school has a tax rate of $1.37, a bonded indebtedness of $70,000, and $344,000 in outstanding tax warants. Other township high school tax rates are: Blue Island, $1.37½; Joliet, $1.37½; Oak Park and River Forest, $1.38; Bloom, $1.58; Thornton Fractional Township High school, $1.87; Proviso, $1.91; Waukegan, $1.92; J. Sterling Morton, $1.93, and Lyons Township, $2.

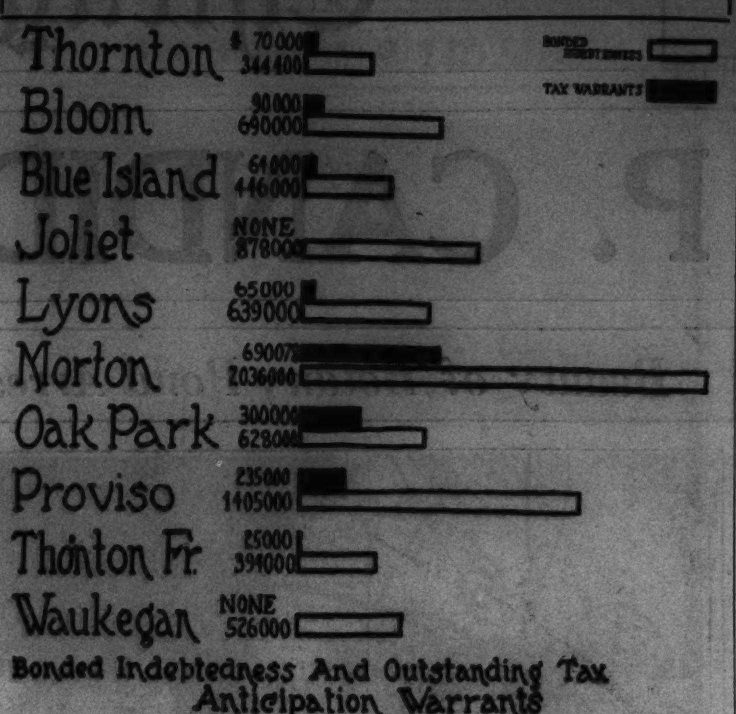
In bonded indebtedness Thornton Fractional Township High school is second to Thornton High school with an indebtedness of $394,000; Blue Island is third at $446,000, and Oak Park fourth in Cook county at $639,000.

Expects Bond Approval.

Seipp, Princel and Company were low bidders on the bonds, offering 4 per cent, plus a small premium on sale over par. The bonds are to be matured in 20 years or earlier, subject to the call of the school board.

"We feel certain that the bond issue will be approved," asserted Mr. McVey. "The high school has one of the best ratings in the county and the only way we can maintain that standard is to increase our accommodations. A community such as this, with an estimated wealth of $150,000,000, should be able to finance a $300,000 high school addition."

CHART SHOWS SCHOOL DEBTS



Financial condition of Thornton Township High school, where an addition is now contemplated, is shown in the above chart. The chart was shown to the school's PTA last week. The school has the lowest amount of outstanding tax anticipation warants in the county and is second lowest in bonded indebtedness.

PREVOCATIONAL STUDY ON SOUTH SIDE DRAWS 1,200

Advanced Instruction Given in Schools.

Approximately 1,200 pupils in four south and southwest side prevocational schools are being offered new opportunities in trade instruction this semester, according to William H. Johnson, superintendent of schools. Practical education of the type intended for boys and girls who must expect to earn their living without attending college is stressed.

"This means prevocational schools, which previously have attempted merely to prepare pupils to make a choice of vocation, will teach the same pupils the trades of their choice," he explained.

Until the present prevocational schools were concerned only with sixth, seventh and eighth grades. Under the new program an extended eighth grade is added, making it possible for pupils to continue in the same school without transferring to high school for advanced work. Five of the city's 10 prevocational schools will be equipped with the advanced grade.

South Side Schools.

The four south and southwest side prevocational schools included in the general improvement program are Dunbar, 26th street and Wabash avenue; Hancock, 4616 Princeton avenue; Richards, 2535 Lime street, and Sherman, 5116 South Morgan street. Dunbar and Richards are for girls and Sherman is for boys.

According to Maj. Frank L. Beals, assistant superintendent in charge of special schools, work has started in several schools where printing, commercial art, cabinetmaking, carpentry, dressmaking, millinery, and cosmetology are proving favorite trades. Other trades will be taught as soon as there is evidence of public demand.

May Change Name.

The two new features of the prevocational schools enable the schools to assist boys and girls who are 14 years old and teach them a trade without any interruption. According to Maj. Beals the program eventually may include changing the name of the schools to a name indicative of their work.

Boys and girls out of school who wish to learn a trade are advised to make application directly to the prevocational school principal, Avery V. Wolfrum, at Brentano prevocational school, 2723 North Fairfield avenue.

LIBRARY IN AUTO TRAILER TO VISIT COUNTY SCHOOLS

Peregrinating Library on View Tomorrow.

The automobile trailer, which some say will place 1,000,000 families on the highways in the near future, will come into educational use tomorrow when Noble J. Puffer, county superintendent of schools, presents the first trailer country school circulating library to the Cook County Teachers' institute.

Mr. Puffer, an enthusiast, and his family traveled to the west coast last summer by trailer. "The trailer, with proper interior construction, is the ideal headquarters for a country circulating library," he said on his return.

Teachers to See Trailer.

Tomorrow the trailer will be stationed in front of Hotel Sherman and viewed by 200 country school teachers attending the Teachers' institute for Cook county, one, two, and three room schools at the hotel.

Cook county's trailer library, according to Mr. Puffer, is the first one in Illinois. Seven hundred and fifty books, both fiction and reference, have been purchased and will be made available to more than 1,000 children attending one room schools.

Participation Voluntary.

The library will be maintained by a small assessment on each partcipating school, Mr. Puffer explained, adding that participation is voluntary. He said he plans to have the library visit each participating school once a month.

Asked where he would obtain motor power to pull the trailer he said that since he had no funds for the purpose he is donating the services of his own auto and plans to accompany the traveling library on its first trips.

"By using this method of making a wide variety of books available to the children of the rural schools we will be able to supply them with up-to-date reading material and in the end decrease the cost to the country school," he said.

Scarcity of Material.

He explained many rural school boards purchase books every two or three years and as a result children often run out of reading material.

Of the 74 one room schools in Cook county Mr. Puffer expects 40 to participate in the circulating library this year. "As news of the benefits of the new system spread around the countryside, more schools will join," he said.

ZOLLER DENTAL CLINIC AT U. OF C. WILL OPEN SOON

Made Possible by 1933 Bequest.

The University of Chicago, in a move to bridge the gap between medical and dental research, will open its new Zoller Memorial Dental clinic next month as a division of the University clinics. The project is made possible through a fund bequeathed to the university by the late Walter G. Zoller, Chicago coal magnate who died in 1933, which now amounts to $2,900,000.

The Zoller clinic, representing the most concrete recognition yet made of the close relation between the condition of the mouth and that of the remainder of the body, will carry on research, provide advanced training for young dentists and give dental service to a selected group of indigent patients.

The patients will be drawn from among charity cases in the university clinics or its affiliates, notably the Home for Destitute Crippled Children, the Country Home for Convalescent Children and the Bobs Roberts Pediatric hospital.

Add Graduates to Staff.

A selected group of dental graduates will be added to the staf as internes, fellows and instructors. Part of their time will be occupied with giving dental service and in study and research in the university's basic departments of biological science.

Working through such departments as bacteriology, physiology, biochemistry, pathology, anatomy, and embryology, this group will engage in research on problems relating these fields with dentistry. Degrees granted will be the regular academic awards, such as master of science or doctor of philosophy.

Dr. James R. Blaney, formerly professor of dental pathology and therapeutics at the University of Illinois, will become director of the clinic. Dr. Sigmund Bradel has been named assistant professor on the staf. Dr. Arthur C. Bachmeyer, director of the University clinics, commenting on the gap between medicine and dentistry, pointed out that the Zoller project will be started on a modest scale. Eventually its budget will be $80,000 a year.

Adjoins Billings Library.

The clinic will be housed in the quarters adjoining the Frank Billings library in the University clinics. It so happens that the late Dr. Billings is credited with the discovery that teeth can be centers of focal infection. In explaining the purpose of the new clinic, Dr. Blaney pointed out that despite the fact that 98 per cent of modern men are affected by disorders of the teeth and mouth, the cause of dental caries, or tooth decay, is largely unknown.

"Never before has there been such an opportunity to integrate the oral diseases with the systemic diseases," he said.

Bandsman Contrasts Our System with English.

When Jack Hylton departed for his native England last summer your reporter asked him his reactions to British radio after a season of commercial broadcasting in America. Hylton was heard over W-G-N-Mutual, CBS, and NBC. Here's his story, just received by letter.—Larry Wolters.

Since my return to England three months ago I have heard a great many radio programs. This activity of mine has not been confined solely to dance music. I have listened in to variety hours, plays, news, and sports commentaries, political discussions, talks, etc.

As many of you are aware, radio in Great Britain is controlled by the government through the British Broadcasting corporation, an official body which not only controls everything that goes on the air, but also has its own publishing organization issuing three weekly radio magazines.

No commercial advertising of any kind is permitted, with the result that we have no sponsored programs. Competition therefore is more limited than in the States. We have no mammoth weekly programs such as Major Bowes, Rudy Vallee, Jack Benny, or Eddie Cantor. The salaries paid headlining artists are somewhat sparing, and it is true to say that no star could earn a star's livelihood in Britain from radio alone.

More Use Made of Radio.

On the other hand, more use is made of radio as an educational factor. There are special afternoon relays to schools in which some well known authority or teacher lectures to children all over the country. The children follow these lessons by means of radios installed in their classrooms.

Not only are the children educated, but grown-ups, too. One of the most popular afternoon programs here was a series of French lessons.

One department in English radio which lags behind its American counterpart rather noticeably, I think, is the sports commentaries. The American commentators generally have more vitality and pep. They take their audience right into the ring or sports field. They paint the picture more graphically.

News in England is relayed in a very straightforward, conservative manner by the British Broadcasting company's staf announcers who are all anonymous personalities recognizable only by their voices. The B. B. C. prefers it.

More Symphonic Music.

It is rather paradoxical that so little classical music is heard on the radio in America, as my experience has gone to prove that Americans are deeply appreciative of this type of music. I would not describe the English as a more musical nation, but it is a fact that there is a greater proportion of semi-classical and symphonic music broadcast over here than in the States.

And now we come to a knotty point. Dance music. Here again I must explain the rather peculiar situation in Britain. Our national program, the only one to cover the entire British isles, closes down officially at midnight. From 10:30 p. m. to 11:30 p. m. dance music is relayed. One band carries the entire program.

Alternative; the Children's Hour.

The only other regular daily program of dance music is from 5:15 p. m. to 6 o'clock. Again one band carries the entire program. As alternative there is the Children's Hour!

I have heard the British Broadcasting corporation described as a large white building surrounded by red tape and blue pencil. That is a gross exaggeration, but it is a fact that they are extremely tight-laced upon occasion.

Scripts, particularly, are subjected to a rigorous censorship which often leaves them but the shell of the original intention. Nothing risqué, political or offensive to any public body must be included in entertainment material, which is a very good thing so long as it does not reach the length of the crooner who was suspended from the air because he described a song as being "very popular." The B. B. C. regarded this as song plugging!

No Dance Music on Sundays.

Dance tunes which deal with Gabriel or his horn, or which in any way parody the Great Beyond, may never be broadcast, and there is no dance music whatsoever on Sundays. All stations close down at 10:30 p. m. on Sundays.

And here's to all my American friends in Chicago and elsewhere. This is that fellow Hylton saying "Cheerio and all the best. . . . May all your troubles be little ones." And we'll always be friends!

JACK HYLTON.

OUT FOR A WALK

Dolores Gillen and Bob Elson, caught by the camera man leaving the W-G-N Tribune Square studios after conferring on their coming radio show, "The Man on the Street," which they will conduct over W-G-N at 11:30 each weekday morning beginning tomorrow. This week programs will be presented by Elson from New York on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday. Quin Ryan will handle the show with Miss Gillen Friday and Saturday.

PRIMA TO BRING HIS ORCHESTRA TO W-G-N OCT. 1

Will Offer New Style Music at Blackhawk.

Another melody stylist, following in the footsteps of illustrious predecessors, will be introduced to W-G-N and the Mutual Broadcasting system on Thursday, when Louis Prima and his Primastyle music make their debut at the Blackhawk. This engagement will mark the first Chicago showing of Prima whose musical manner has been defined as being as unusual as the various styles of the orchestras who preceded him to the Blackhawk and W-G-N.

The original Coon-Sanders, Hal Kemp and Kay Kyser started definite musical trends at the Blackhawk, and it is believed the young Italian maestro, originally sponsored in big-time musical circles, by Guy Lombardo will prove as unusual.

Wins Fame in New York.

First national fame for Prima came when he appeared at New York's Famous Door cafe where he introduced a new style with his New Orleans Five. This musical aggregation was formed by Louis in his home town of New Orleans. Like himself, all the other musicians were products of the Delta City and were instilled with the same fire and feeling that characterized their leader.

Only twenty-four years old, Prima is one of the youngest of the major maestros in the country. As a youngster, in short trousers, he appeared with famous New Orleans orchestras.

Featured in Movies.

Prima has scored signally in New York and in Hollywood. His popularity on both coasts led to innumerable important guest appearances on various coast-to-coast all-star shows. He has been featured in several movie shorts for RKO and Columbia, and was given a featured musical part in Bing Crosby's latest movie, "Rhythm on the Range." At present there is talk of his being featured in a big new musical movie.

W-G-N TO OFFER NEW MUSICAL PROGRAM TODAY

"Stars of the Milky Way," a new series of musical programs, makes its debut on W-G-N and the Mutual Broadcasting System today. The program will be presented each week at 6:30 p. m. on Sundays and will be heard on W-G-N, CKLW in Detroit, and WFIL in Philadelphia. The broadcasts will originate in W-G-N's audience studio before 600 guests.

A special orchestra under the direction of one of Chicago's new young maestros, Bob Trendler, will furnish the instrumental music. The vocal offerings will be supplied by Gina Vanna, the brilliant and beautiful soprano star; Wayne Van Dyne, one of Chicago's outstanding tenors; Gunther Decker, tenor, and The Grenadiers, vocal ensemble of four male voices and three girls.

Miss Vanna Widely Known.

Gina Vanna, prima donna of the program, which will offer music of all types from the classics to the popular tunes of today, is nationally known for her concert and radio work. Miss Vanna has appeared on the opera stages of Chicago and San Francisco, was the soloist in the Symphony gardens at Chicago's A Century of Progress, soloist with the Los Angeles Philharmonic orchestra, and has also appeared on several national radio programs.

The Grenadiers also have been widely acclaimed for their work on the air and on stage. The four boys all are soloists in their own right and the three girls of the ensemble also have been nationally broadcast with their trio singing.

Van Dyne has a lyric tenor of brilliant quality. He was a winner of the Paul Whiteman audition last spring with a subsequent radio engagement in New York. Decker also is well known in radio for his brilliant tenor voice.

Stokes Changes Time.

Harold Stokes' "Melodies from the Sky" program, which has been featured in the past at 9 o'clock on Sunday night, beginning tonight will be aired from the main studio at 8:30 o'clock. Stokes returns from his vacation to take over the baton and head the ensemble which presents Paul Small, Edna O'Dell, Jess Kirkpatrick, the Four Shades of Blue, and the dance orchestra.

Isobel Ebert, pianist, who has been the accompanist of the Northerners for years, will be the soloist on the show at 9:30 o'clock tomorrow night. Miss Ebert will play the "Dance of Olas" by Pick-Mangiagelli and the Northerners octet will feature a program of concert and popular melodies.

Attilio Baggiore, W-G-N's operatic tenor, will be heard with Margot Rebeil, soprano, on the "Pageant of Melody" program from the audience studio at 9:30 o'clock on Tuesday night. The soloists will be assisted by the mixed quartet and the W-G-N concert orchestra under the direction of Henry Weber.

Sally Jo Nelson Returns.

Sally Jo Nelson will return to the Mardi Gras of Melody, popular musical show, on Wednesday night at 9:30 o'clock. Miss Nelson will be costarred with Mr. Stokes, the W-G-N dance orchestra, and Campus Choir, in a thirty minute broadcast.

Selections from several of Rudolph Friml's operettas will be the highlight of the "Musical Revue" on Thursday night at 9:30 o'clock, when Mr. Weber will direct the concert orchestra and vocal ensemble, with Kathryn Witwer, soprano, and Bill Miller, tenor, as soloists.

A glimpse of Hollywood will be presented on Charles P. Hughes' "Behind the Camera Lines" dramatic broadcast on Friday night at 8:30 o'clock. Virginia L[illegible], west coast authoress, has written a sketch, "Gone Hollywood," for the broadcast and June Meredith w[illegible] "Nanette LaFleur," a French actress from San Francisco.

National Amateur Hour Returns to W-G-N Tonight

The Mutual Broadcasting system's "National Amateur Hour," which has been heard locally over station WJJD during the summer, returns to W-G-N tonight at 6 o'clock. The broadcast, which is presided over by Benny Rubin, noted stage and radio comic, features a [illegible] amateurs selected after auditions [illegible] and Arnold Johnson, who directs the orchestra. Three judges, selected from among musicians, radio executives, and business men and women, pick the winners during the broadcast, but the general public is also allowed to vote for their favorites by mail.

To Open at Palmer House Next Thursday.

Little Jack Little, and his orchestra become part of the W-G-N and Mutual network programs Thursday evening when they open an engagement in the Empire room of the Palmer house.

LITTLE JACK LITTLE.
[Maurice Seymour.]

Little Jack Little is well known for his radio work, his song compositions and his personal appearances throughout the country. Beginning his career some twenty years ago as a vaudeville entertainer, three years ago he organized his own orchestra, and since has been steadily forging ahead until today he stands among the top three or four bands of the nation.

Born a Britisher.

Jack is an Englishman and at the age of nine was the star pupil of the London Conservatory of Music. His parents then emigrated to the United States and settled in Cincinnati. There Jack became the piano-playing wizard of the town. Before the entry of the United States into the world war, Jack enrolled at the University of Iowa where he immediately organized a dance band and proceeded to earn his way through school.

Then he "joined the navy to see the sea" and spent the entire eighteen months at the Great Lakes training station playing the piano and singing the popular songs of the day to keep the sailors from becoming homesick and to help them forget the ravages of the "flu."

After the war he went back to college, got his diploma, and walked out of Iowa City with a healthy bank account. Vaudeville made offers to him and for three years he did a "single" with the piano and his own songs.

Enters Radio Early.

Jack jumped into radio before it got away from him. And he became one of its greatest headliners, sometimes earning as much as a thousand dollars a week in the days when few artists were paid for thier broadcasting.

His band has played most of the swank, popular spots in New York. They include the Hotel St. Moritz, the Lexington, the New Yorker and the Ambassador. He also has played in Atlantic City, Miami, Los Angeles, and on Catalina Island.

Among the songs he has written are: "Jealous," "Hold Me," "Shanty in Old Shanty Town," "Baby Parade," and "I Promise You."

PAINT PROTECTS DWELLINGS FROM RUST AND DECAY

Keeps Wood from Drying, Cuts Fire Hazard.

(Next week: Illustrations and article on the amazing transformation of an old gray barn in Evanston into a modern, New England Colonial home.)

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

An annual fall check-up of our homes to guard against the inroads of rust and decay is about due.

We guard against fire by insurance, by fireproof construction, by fire resisting materials, and fire extinguishing units of various kinds. But we don't always take every possible precaution to prevent decay and rust, those slow destroyers of our house surfaces.

Paint is a great protection. A coat of paint, when and where it is needed around a house, is, indeed, such a money saver that there is considerable truth in the old Dutch proverb which solemnly asserts that good costs nothing. And, incidentally, the National Board of Fire Underwriters has stated:

"Unprotected wood has a tendency to weather and dry out until it becomes like tinder. Paint, however, keeps wood in good condition, so that a wooden building, well painted, is less likely to take fire than one which is unpainted."

Paint Is Beautifier Also

Paint is used as a beautifier as well as a protector in a large number of the new homes now being built.

In today's house, paint was generously used, inside and outside. In all the bedrooms, the walls, ceilings, and woodwork were painted. In the master bedroom, oyster white was used. For the second bedroom, paint in an old-peach tone was selected, and in the third bedroom, a soft chartreuse shade is seen on walls and woodwork.

A day should be chosen for outside painting when the surfaces to be coated are free from moisture. Outside painting never should be hurried, and no paint job should be started directly after a rain. Mild fall weather is an ideal time to do this work.

Protects Porch Steps.

If the outside steps and porch are showing signs of deterioration, a coat of paint will help to keep moisture and wind from attacking the wood, and thus ward off its rotting and splitting.

Outside hardware can stand a coat of paint if it is beginning to show any signs of rust. Garage hardware and often the hinges and metal parts of window shutters need periodical attention.

Asphalt and paint are two useful preservatives and frequently can be employed in the repair and protection of a roof. Asphalt has been famous as a weather proofing and water proofing material since it was first used—they tell us—in Noah's Ark, and the asphalt in the liquid roofing cements of today probably is quite as strong as was the cement used in building the Tower of Babel. A new coat of paint, stain, or other material, which will keep a roof from cupping, warping, or fuzzing, also will tend to reduce sudden danger of fire from flying sparks.

Will Avoid Shrinkage.

By proper painting of window sills and sash, shrinkage cracks which develop when the wood splits can be prevented. In painting window frames use a small, flexible brush [a sasn tool], and protect the glass with a small card or blatter.

House gutters, in the fall, unless protected, are free lodging houses for dead leaves. These leaves, in turn, harbor water and decay which will rust the metal and eat away the paint. [That is, of course, unless the metal is rust proof.] An annual cleaning and perhaps painting of gutters is good insurance against wear.

A warm fall day, when the central heating plant isn't needed, is a good time to paint radiators. Flat paint will increase their efficiency 10 to 20 per cent over metallic paint. And when the screens are taken down and the storm windows put up, paint will keep the screens from rusting while they are stored away for the winter.

Wood Should Be Primed.

And here's another point to keep in mind, if any repair work is being done around the house during the next few weeks, now is the time to make it more weather tight for winter.

New wood should be properly primed before it is used. High grade woods hold paint better than low grade woods. They are, morever, more enduring. But sometimes for economy, the lower grade wood is used, and here the importance of proper priming cannot be stressed too much.

Oakland Business Men.

The first fall meeting of the Oakland Business Men's association will be held Thursday evening at the Green Gables hotel, Oakwood boulevard and Lake Park avenue.

MODERN HOME IN EARLY AMERICAN STYLE

A serenely beautiful home, with seven rooms and three baths, which recently was built by Mrs. John Favill at 200 Church road, Winnetka. The house is early American in spirit, with exterior walls of common brick painted white, and roof of softly weathering brown shingles. The house is thoroughly insulated and is air conditioned for winter. The architect is John Harold Melstrom.

MODEL FEDERAL HOME TO BE OPEN TO PUBLIC TODAY

Structure Embodies Many New Ideas.

The New American Home, Federal Housing administration project at Michigan avenue and Roosevelt road, will be opened to the public today, according to Stuyvesant Peabody, chairman of the new American home committee, which, in coöperation with civic organizations, is sponsoring the enterprise.

The model home, which will remain open for public inspection for three months, has been built in accordance with the most recent theories in construction and decoration. Among the innovations is a "living-dining" room, with walls of cinnamon brown and white trim. Its furniture, of black and bleached wood, is adapted from an 18th century English design.

There are also three bedrooms, two bathrooms, an all electric kitchen, decorated in jade green and canary yellow, with cabinets, sink, range, and refrigerator in white, and a garage.

Southwest side community leaders sponsoring the New American Home are Dr. John E. Lynch, president of the Auburn-Highlands Improvement association; Leonard Fish, chairman of the Englewood Keep Chicago Ahead committee; Mrs. Joseph Goldstein, former president of the Gage Park Woman's City club; and Mrs. James L. Carr, president of the University of Chicago Woman's club.

PIONEER STORE WILL CELEBRATE 67TH BIRTHDAY

With Irving N. Klein, son of the founder, at the helm, the L. Klein store, oldest outlying department store in Chicago, still under the control and operation of the family of its founder, tomorrow will start the celebration of its 67th anniversary. Leonard Klein, grandson of the pioneer merchant, recently started his apprenticeship in the establishment that had its beginning before the great fire.

Mrs. O'Leary, whose cow, according to legend, started the blaze, resided but a few blocks from the original store at Halsted and 14th streets, but the building escaped unscathed.

According to a long custom the 92d birthday of the founder soon will be observed, and customers, old and new, will be invited to join in the entertainment. There will be music, and flowers for the fair sex. A souvenir of early days is a copy of the faded first declaration, back in 1869, of the store's "one price to all" and "satisfaction guaranteed or your money refunded" policy.

FOOTBALL GAME TO BE STAGED AS RELIGIOUS EVENT

Palestine Team to Play Here.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

Chicago Jews, particularly those of Polish origin, together with many Christians are planning a soccer football game to be held at Comiskey park on Oct. 25, which will be staged as a major religious event of early fall.

JUDGE FRIEND.

Just how religion becomes a major element in this projected sports event was described by Judge Hugo M. Friend, chairman of a joint Jewish-Christian committee which is sponsoring the Chicago contest. Judge Friend said the game will be played between a team representing the Maccabees, youth organization of Palestine, and an all-star Illinois group.

Shows Rebuilding of Youth.

"The Maccabee team," said Judge Friend, "will demonstrate the magnificent transformation wrought by the Jewish homeland in the children of the Ghetto gathered from all parts of the world. These victims of racial and religious persecution, formerly downcast by indignities, have become self-reliant and competent athletes."

While pointing out this matter of rebuilding personality as a religious work, Judge Friend explained that the 60,000 persons the committee hopes will attend the game will also be contributing to Jews of Poland, who, he said, are victims of circumstances which are even worse than in Germany. Funds earned by the Maccabee team on its American tour will also be used in Zionist sports development.

Play in New York Sunday.

"The Maccabees are now in New York, where they will play a contest with an all-star team there next Sunday," said Judge Friend. "Other games will be played in Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, and Detroit. The members of the team already have served as pioneers in the resettlement of Palestine and are now serving as pioneers in making their work known in America. Despite numerous obstacles they face in reëstablishing themselves in a new land they have found time to develop physical proficiency, which will set a high example in any country."

Alexander Rosenfeld, a University of Vienna Ph.D., is the moving spirit in Tel-Aviv athletics and the Jewish Amateur Athletic union. After he left Berlin for Palestine, Dr. Rosenfeld was instrumental in bringing to Palestine the best Swedish gymnasium instructors. He obtained good coaches for various sports. Slow motion pictures were studied by the athletes, and according to Dr. Rosenfeld, Tel-Aviv is now producing a generation of sun tanned six footers.

Like Los Angeles Huskies.

"They are just like your Los Angeles huskies," said Dr. Rosenfeld. Many Jews in Europe lived in Ghettos where their development was retarded."

Among the list of Chicago sponsors which Judge Friend said is rapidly growing in number are the following: Melvin L. Straus, treasurer of the Chicago committee; Dr. Philip L. Seman, director of Jewish Peoples' institute; Dr. Leo L. Honor of the University of Chicago, Britton I. Budd, Peter J. Peel, former president of the United States Football association; Joseph Triner, Illinois athletic commission; Sheldon Govier, clerk of the Appellate court; Dr. S. S. Hollander, president of the Covenant club; Judge Harry M. Fisher, Fred Bernstein, head of midwest B'nai B'rith; Max Shulman, William L. Katz, and Benjamin H. Rubenzik.

The American tour of the Maccabee athletes was set up by the Federation of Polish Jews in America.

October has been designated as Jewish Education month by the Board of Jewish Education, 30 North Dearborn street. The board announced an extensive registration campaign has been undertaken in which brochures on Jewish education have been widely circulated.

Announcement was made yesterday of a massmeeting to be held under auspices of the Episcopal diocese of Chicago Oct. 18 in the Auditorium theater. The meeting will climax the Pan-American conference of Episcopal and Anglican bishops and archbishops. The Rev. Irvine Goddard, rector of Emmanuel church, La Grange, chairman of arrangements for the meeting, said features will be massed choirs of 600 men and boys and a procession of more than 200 bishops, archbishops, and other prominent clergy. The Rt. Rev. Dr. Peter Trimble Rowe, bishop of Alaska, will speak.

Eastern Star Chapter to Have Jubilee Friday

South Shore chapter, No. 866, Order Eastern Star, will hold its "Town Hall Jubilee" Friday evening at the Woodlawn Masonic temple, 64th street and University avenue. The program will include entertainment, games, south shore market, a boys band, a style show and a jitney supper. Mrs. Daisy Walker, 6134 Greenwood avenue, will be worthy matron, and Robert Meurk, 7333 Crandon avenue, will be worthy patron.

ST. BARBARA'S PARISH SODALITY WILL HAVE DANCE NEXT SUNDAY

The Young Ladies' soladity of St. Barbara's parish will celebrate its 25th anniversary by entertaining the neighborhood at a dance next Saturday evening in the church auditorium, 29th and Quinn streets.

MISS ANNETTE SLONE.

The dance committee, headed by Miss Annette Slone, includes Miss Anna Miela, president; Miss Angeline Jason, treasurer; Miss Sophe Walzak, secretary; Miss Florence Jason and Miss Estelle Susan.

The celebration for the members will be continued with a banquet at 4:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon, Oct. 11. There will be a program of entertainment in connection with the dinner.

REV. T. K. VOGLER WILL START NEW DUTIES SUNDAY

The Rev. Theodore K. Volger will preach his first sermon as pastor of the Bryn Mawr Community church, 7000 Jeffery avenue, at 11 o'clock next Sunday morning. His topic will be "Distinctive Christianity."

The church issued the call to the Rev. Mr. Volger this summer following the resignation of Dr. M. Russell Boynton to accept the pastorship of the First church in Newton, Mass.

The new pastor who is 38 years old, comes from the Pilgrim Congregational church, Duluth, Minn., where he served five years.

Blind Service Officers Will Be Dinner Guests

Mr. and Mrs. G. D. Bernstein, 5476 Hyde Park boulevard, will give a supper party Saturday evening for officers and directors of the Blind Service association. Plans for the annual benefit dinner party will be discussed.

She gave her teeth a Beauty Bath—

NOW HE ALWAYS WANTS TO KISS HER

Have you discovered what thousands of other women are discovering?—that Listerine Tooth Paste gives the mouth freshness and allure, the teeth flash and brilliance that ordinary tooth pastes seem unable to achieve? So much so, in fact, that it is rapidly becoming the favorite of exotic New York beauties of stage, studio, and screen . . . women whose livelihood depends on their smiles.

Put aside the dentifrice you are now using and try Listerine Tooth Paste. You will be amazed to find how quickly—and safely—it makes the mouth feel youthful—the teeth look young.

There's a Reason

Listerine Tooth Paste was planned by beauty experts, working in conjunction with dental authorities. No other dentifrice contains the rare combination of satin-soft cleansers that do so much for teeth. No other tooth paste contains the delightful fruit essences that give your mouth that wonderful dewy freshness, that cleanly sense of invigoration.

Do not take our word for it; let this wonderfully safe dentifrice made by the makers of Listerine prove itself. Lambert Pharmacal Company, St. Louis, Mo.

SMOOTH INSTANTLY—
ROUGHNESSES MELTED AWAY

It's your skin that's at fault!

Surface skin is always drying out. Little dead cells on top of your skin keep flaking off—causing the tiny harsh pieces that ruin make-up.

But you can melt them away—

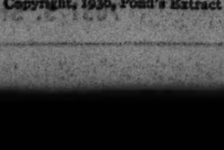
A distinguished dermatologist tells why: "When a keratolytic cream (Vanishing Cream) touches the skin, an instant softening takes place. Dried-out cells on surface skin melt away. The young underlying cells come into view. The skin quickly acquires youthful smoothness."

That is why you can always be sure of a smart make-up if you begin with Pond's Vanishing Cream.

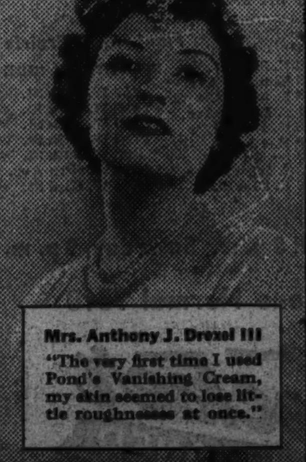
For a smooth make-up—Apply Pond's Vanishing Cream first to melt away roughnesses—even tiny ones you can hardly see. Then powder goes on with a "beauty-salon" finish!

Overnight for lasting softness—Every night, after your regular cleansing, spread Pond's Vanishing Cream on face, hands, elbows . . . all night long it brings your skin extra softness to make you lovelier!



How outer skin flakes off

At top, see the dead cells that flake loose, "catch" your make-up. Melt them off!



Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel III

"The very first time I used Pond's Vanishing Cream, my skin seemed to lose little roughnesses at once."

AND if Stromberg-Carlson had that exclusive, revolutionary radio advancement alone, your ear would say, "buy it"—sight unseen.

But the new Stromberg-Carlsons give you one surprise after another . . . Tri-Focal Tuning . . . New Advanced Dials with micrometer sub-dial . . . Indexed Control Knobs . . . Beam Power Tubes . . . Carpinchoe Leather Speakers . . . Free floating Phonograph Pick-up.

They're all real advancements, but the Labyrinth is the miracle. By means of it you hear, in your own home, all the beauty of music, the pinging high harmonics of the steel guitar or the deepest bass of the symphony, without "boom" at any degree of volume. For musical reproduction, equalling the finest original musical creation:—"There is Nothing Finer Than a Stromberg-Carlson."

LABYRINTH RADIO

The long, winding passageway of the Labyrinth takes the place of the usual box-like cavity in the cabinet which is the source of the exaggerated boom in low tones. It gives you deeper bass notes, with a new fidelity and increases the volume capacity and accuracy of the loud speaker.

THE TICKET-BOOTH TRAP!
AN INSIDE STORY OF MELVIN PURVIS FORMER ACE G-MAN
MELVIN PURVIS, the young lawyer who became America's ace G-Man, and directed the capture of Dillinger, "Pretty Boy" Floyd, "Baby Face" Nelson, and many other public enemies. In these inside stories Mr. Purvis reveals the methods used in catching desperate criminals. Names have, of course, been changed. Here is the story of "Gyp" Gollick and his gang as Melvin Purvis told it to his friends, Paul and Joan. As today's story opens, the G-Men are closing in on Gollick and his gang, who run a huge stolen automobile—or "hot car"—racket in the Mid-West. They have traced Gollick to a small roadhouse in the Wisconsin woods. As night falls the woods are lashed by a hail of gun-fire, then suddenly—silence . . .
THEY'VE STOPPED FIRING! SHALL WE RUSH THE HOUSE?
YES--BUT TELL EVERY MAN TO BE CAREFUL. IT MAY BE A TRICK!
"Three men were captured—but 'Gyp' Gollick had escaped! The 'Hot Car' king had sneaked out a rear window while his henchmen held off the attack of the G-Men with a rain of bullets. Then—they ceased firing. My G-Men and I combed the Middle West for Gollick . . . the hunt finally narrowed down to a certain district in a large city where we heard Gollick was 'hiding out,' and . . ."
MISS MILLER, THIS IS A JOB ONLY A WOMAN MEMBER OF OUR FORCE CAN HANDLE. WE BELIEVE GOLLICK IS HIDING OUT IN THIS SECTION OF THE CITY. WE KNOW HE'S CRAZY ABOUT MOVIES--GOES TO ALL OF THEM. YOU ARE TO TAKE A POSITION AS CASHIER OF THE ONLY MOVIE HOUSE IN THE NEIGHBORHOOD.
I'M READY, CHIEF.
NOTICE IN THESE BERTILLON MEASUREMENTS THAT GOLLICK'S SKULL GOES UP ALMOST STRAIGHT FROM THE BACK OF HIS NECK. NOTICE ALSO THE FLAT-RIM EARS, AND RECEDING JAW.
I SEE, CHIEF. NO MATTER WHAT KIND OF DISGUISE GOLLICK WEARS, THOSE THINGS WILL BETRAY HIM.
BERTILLON MEASUREMENTS
(First perfected by M. Alphonse Bertillon of Paris.) These consist of careful measuring and classification of fingerprints and other characteristics of the head and body which cannot be disguised. G-Men must take a long course of training in these measurements, so that they will be able to spot instantly such features. In this way a G-Man can instantly penetrate a disguise and identify a hunted criminal. At the right are some simple examples of head types.
TYPE A LONG-HEADED, OR DOLICHOCEPHALIC SKULL. FULL RIMMED, LONG LOBED EAR. JAW THAT JUTS OUT.
TYPE B SHORT-HEADED, OR BRACHYCEPHALIC SKULL.
NOW REMEMBER GOLLICK'S DESCRIPTION------WHEN HE ARRIVES AT THIS TICKET BOOTH, SIGNAL BY FLASHING YOUR COMPACT MIRROR AT THOSE WINDOWS ACROSS THE STREET. MY G-MEN AND I WILL BE THERE!
I UNDERSTAND, CHIEF. THE BRIGHT LIGHTS OUTSIDE THE THEATRE WILL MAKE A MARVELOUS REFLECTION IN MY MIRROR.
FOR THREE DAYS NOTHING HAPPENED--THEN A NEW FEATURE PICTURE WAS ANNOUNCED AT THE GRAND THEATRE. AND AT 8:30 THAT EVENING...
HURRY UP, THERE--DON'T STOP TO POWDER YOUR NOSE!
THE SIGNAL! MOVE FAST MEN!
WE'VE GOT YOU, GOLLICK! THAT DISGUISE CAN'T FOOL A G-MAN!
PURVIS AN' TH' G-MEN! YUH CAN'T GET AWAY FROM 'EM!
...AND "GYP" GOLLICK WENT TO PRISON FOR A LONG TERM. NOW, PAUL AND JOAN, SINCE YOU'RE BOTH MEMBERS OF MY JUNIOR G-MAN CORPS, I WANT YOU TO FOLLOW MY BREAKFAST-TIME RULE--EAT LOTS OF POST TOASTIES!
YOU BET WE WILL, MR. PURVIS! THEY SURE TASTE GREAT!
COME ON, BOYS AND GIRLS! JOIN MY JUNIOR G-MAN CORPS! "UMM! MELVIN PURVIS IS RIGHT—POST TOASTIES TASTE BETTER'N ANYTHING."
ATTENTION! Boys and girls! Melvin Purvis has some sound advice for you!
"I make it a rule," he says, "to eat Post Toasties for breakfast every morning—and I know you'll want to, too!
"They're made from the sweet, tender hearts of the corn where most of the flavor is stored. Every golden-brown flake is toasted double crisp . . . that's why Post Toasties keep their crunchy goodness longer in milk or cream."
And youngsters everywhere agree with Melvin Purvis! George Harrison, Jr. of Crawford, Texas—an enthusiastic member of the Junior G-Man Corps—says, "Post Toasties are the swellest cereal a fellow can have for breakfast! I eat 'em every day! Boy! Are they swell with berries or sliced fruit!"

TERRY and the Pirates
by Milton Caniff
A NATIVE POLICEMAN ARRESTS THE DRAGON LADY AND HER CONFEDERATE FOR BURGLARY AS THEY STOP TO LOOK AT THE FAKE BLUE PRINTS ... SHE SHOOTS THE OFFICER AND HER CAR ROARS AWAY THROUGH THE CROOKED STREETS..
YOU'LL BE WANTED FOR MURDER IF THAT COP DIES!
IF HE HAD TAKEN ME TO POLICE HEADQUARTERS THEY WOULD LEARN I AM THE DRAGON LADY—AND I WOULD BE EXECUTED! —IT WAS HE OR I!
YOU'VE MESSED THINGS UP GOOD! —NOW WE'RE BOTH FUGITIVES!
THERE ARE DEVIOUS MEANS TO ELUDE THE STUPID POLICE! —WE ARE SAFE IN THIS SECTION OF THE CITY!
I THINK WE OUGHT TO GET OUT OF TOWN!
OH, NO, MY FINE FRIEND! —I HAVE A SCORE TO SETTLE WITH THAT AMERICAN PLANE DESIGNER! HE PLANNED OUR DOWNFALL! LO LUN! —SEND FOR HONG, THE HATCHET MAN!
MEANWHILE: AT THE HOUSE WHERE TERRY, PAT AND CONNIE ARE LIVING....
MONAHAN CALLED! —HE SAID TH' DRAGON LADY SHOT ONE OF TH' COPS! —THEY'RE COMBIN' TH' TOWN TO FIND HER AN' HER BOY FRIEND!
WELL, WE DID OUR JOB! —NOW IT'S UP TO THE LOCAL AUTHORITIES! I'M TURNING IN!
AT AN HOUR JUST BEFORE DAWN, TWO CAT-LIKE FIGURES CLIMB NOISELESSLY INTO THE ROOM WHERE THE THREE FRIENDS ARE SLEEPING...
BAH! —I SHOULD HAVE KNOWN BETTER THAN TO DEPEND ON A DAME!
LET THE BRASH AMERICAN HOLD HIS TONGUE—OR HE MIGHT FIND HIMSELF MINUS THAT VALUED ORGAN! SOMEONE KNOCKS! —HONG THE HATCHET MAN HAS ACCOMPLISHED HIS ERRAND!
HA! THE WILY AMERICAN SLEEPS LIKE AN OPIUM SMOKER! —THE GREAT HONG IS ADEPT AT HIS TASK!
BUT A TOUCH OF CHLOROFORM BENEATH THE NOSE—AND THE BURLY FOREIGN DOG WAS AS A CHILD IN OUR ARMS!
—YOU EXCITED NO SUSPICION! —NO ONE SAW YOU CARRY HIM AWAY!
A YELLOW HAIRED BOY AND A CHINESE WITH ENORMOUS EARS SLEPT IN THE SAME ROOM—BUT THEY HEARD NOTHING!
—YELLOW HAIRED BOY? —CHINESE WITH LARGE EARS? —I KNEW IT! I KNEW IT!!
KNEW WHAT? —WHAT'S EATIN' YOU?
SINCE I FIRST SAW THIS MAN I THOUGHT HIS FACE FAMILIAR! —HE IS PATRICK RYAN! —THE SMOOTH HAIR, MUSTACHE AND GLASSES DECEIVED ME! —IT WILL BE A PLEASURE TO PERFORM ON HIM THE QUAINT RITUAL I HAVE IN MIND!

YEAST brings new health to Canaries...in French's amazing diet discovery

Based on successful tests with 3 generations of canaries, French's announce a new diet discovery which—for the first time—makes available to canaries everywhere, the amazing health benefits of yeast. This yeast is in the French's Bird Biscuit, which is included in every package of French's Bird Seed—and only in French's.

Yeast makes French's a protective food for canaries. It quickens digestion; steps up the appetite; and aids in eliminating poison wastes that clog the intestines. Yeast builds resistance against colds and other ailments. It supplies the vitamins that help to prolong life. It tones up the entire system and makes the canary feel like singing.

The combination of French's Bird Seed and French's Bird Biscuit containing yeast supplies a balanced diet for health and song—a mixture of clean, nourishing seeds, plus the health protection of yeast. Change to French's—the only canary diet that contains yeast.

The R. T. French Company
2215 Mustard Street, Rochester, N. Y.

Day By Day Story of the Experimental Farms

By Bob Becker

Seasoning for Silage

September 26, 1936.

SILAGE garnished with a touch of ground pumpkin is one of the winter meals that the cattle on the Yorkville farm can look forward to. When we were on the farm the other day the boys were filling the big white silo. Wagon after wagon of corn was being wheeled up to the sharp silage cutter.

When Clarence came in from the fields on one of the loads we asked him about the Halloween pumpkins that ought to be showing up in the fields at this time. He told us that the drouth so retarded their growth that they will not ripen, so the small undersized pumpkins are being brought in with the corn and being ground up in the silage cutter.

The boys working on the job of filling the big silo have had dandy weather for their job. When we were watching operations it was sunshiny yet cool.

Requires Extra Force.

The job of silo-filling reminds us of the threshing season, because there are so many extra workers in the fields. The other day Clarence had fifteen men on this job alone, and could have used three or four more, because the men weren't able to keep up with the hungry machinery which was cutting the corn and blowing it into the silo.

Two men were running binders in the cornfields, four men were pitching the bundles into the wagons, six more men were driving wagon loads of corn from the field to the silo, there were two men working inside the silo, and one man was running the ensilage cutter.

Even with all this help, the ensilage cutter was eating up the corn so fast that it was idle part of the time while the men were hurrying to supply it with more raw materials. Clarence left to get another man to drive a wagon and a couple more men to pitch bundles. The boys expect to finish filling the three silos on the farm early this week.

Sharpen Its Teeth.

While we were around the barnyard the silage cutter had a few quiet moments while it's teeth were being sharpened. Louis opened up the machine and showed us the big blades and the fan arrangement that blows the silage high over the top of the silo. After the blades had been sharpened the order was "let 'er go," so the boys began tossing bundles at the cutter again.

During the noonday hour we noticed that the barnyard becomes the scene of an interesting informal "farm forum." As soon as the workers have finished dinner they come out into the sunshine to smoke and to talk. When we were there the other day we heard just about every subject from the world series in baseball to state and national politics going through the mill of the noonday discussion hour.

Start Plowing Soon.

Just as soon as the silos are filled the regular farm staf will go to the fields to resume the job of fall plowing. The soil is in excellent shape for plowing. It's moist and soft, so the ploughs turn it over easily.

After watching the silo filling squad at work we hiked through the lower woods and into the pasture where the black Angus cattle are grazing. But the cows and their calves stayed out of sight while we sloshed through the big marsh where the cattails stand five feet high.

The cattle are hearing the rumbling of a truck through their grazing land these days. This truck is hauling sand and gravel to the cattle feeding yard to provide a hard "floor" so that the Herefords won't have to stand in the mud this fall.

MOTORS—TRAFIC—HIGHWAYS

WINDSHIELD DEFROSTER

The two hooded men are engineers demonstrating a new type of windshield defroster that will be found on several of the 1937 automobiles. Hot air from the heater is blown through vents built into the car body at the base of the windshield. These pictures, taken in zero temperatures at the Graham experimental laboratory, show: Top, windshield coated with frost; middle, defroster has been in operation 68 seconds, windshield partly cleared, and, bottom, defroster has completely cleared windshield in three minutes.

NOTHING DONE AS ILL. ROUTE 1 DETERIORATES

BY HAL FOUST.

For two years the Horner administration of the highway department has held an engineering solution for the modernization of Illinois, No. 1, between Chicago and Danville. "Easy money" from the New Deal, in its generosity with future tax revenue, has been bountiful. But petty politics has stayed construction.

In 1934 techincal men of the department, concerned solely with trafic safety and efficiency, prepared a plan. It called for a four lane pavement into Kankakee county with provisions for future widening to Danville. Between Danville and the village of Grant Park, in northern Kankakee county, concrete would be laid on a new location paralleling the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul, and Pacific railroad.

proprietors along the old route protested against the proposal. They contended that the rerouting would hurt their business. They became an organized minority. Their protests were heard in Springfield, and heeded.

Unorganized Majority.

The unorganized majority, the motoring public, continue to travel an antiquated highway of narrow and rough pavement with sharp turns and curves that impose unnecessary mileage as well as risks.

Between Chicago Heights and Danville, 103 miles, the proposed improvement would lop off five miles of travel distance. With present trafic volumes this would save $109,500 a year in vehicle operating costs alone, not considering the value of the saving in motorists' time.

Forty-three dangerous curves and turns would be eliminated, a further saving in driving time, not to mention the saving in lives and limbs. A five months' record reports forty-nine accidents causing deaths or personal injuries between these two cities.

Illinois No. 1, one of the first roads to be paved for any distance in Illinois, has more mileage of pavement of less than standard width than any highway in the state. North of Danville there are 38.55 miles of concrete 16 feet wide and 2 or 3 miles 15 feet wide. There are also 21.24 miles of old brick 16 feet wide for much of this length.

Dirt Shoulders Rutted.

The dirt shoulders are rutted by tires that have accidentally left the slab or have been steered from the pavement to avoid a sidewipe collision. The modern standard for a two lane pavement is twenty feet.

On these sixteen foot slabs two buses or trucks would rub sides in passing with outer wheel touching the outer edges of the pavement. The legal maximum width of a vehicle in Illinois is eight feet. Passenger cars on these narrow pavements have just four feet less of safety margin between passing automobiles and between outer wheels and the dirt.

The pavement surfaces are badly cracked. Breaks are crumbling. Patches on patches tell of weather and impact destruction with increasing rapidity.

The route passes through the main streets of villages and zig-zag through the heart of small cities. Through trafic is mixed with local trafic and with parking, to the inconvenience and jeopardy of all.

VOICE OF TRAFIC

PROPOSES ELEVATED HIGHWAY ROUTE.

Oak Park, Ill., Sept. 23.—I have been reading your articles on the subject of elevated highways for a long time, and to date there does not seem to be any solution of the matter as far as the west side is concerned.

The original plan, as I remember it, was to parallel the Galena division of the North Western railway, and this plan, as I remember it, almost went through. I have been given to understand that the reason it was stopped was the expense occasioned by the railroad trackage and shops of the North Western railway west of Oakley boulevard.

It was also stated at that time that the expense of building the highway along the north side of the North Western railway would be greatly in excess of the one proposed to be built in Randolph street in connection with the Lake street elevated that was to be taken over [a rather foolish proposition as I look at it]. This did not check with my ideas as the construction of one retaining wall and filling between this and the North Western should be the lowest possible cost plan.

However, this excessive cost idea may have been due to the routing straight west through the North Western yards and shops, and the purpose of this letter is to present a plan based on the original idea with the exception that it obviates the necessity of so much viaduct construction by crossing over to the south side of the North Western at about Oakley and returning to the north side of the railroad at about Laramie avenue.

In addition to avoiding the railroad conditions from Western to Crawford avenues the route would be over low value property, such as Austin avenue [newly named], Kinzie and Carroll avenues, together with considerable public property that the city could grant for this purpose. E. R. HARVEY.

DEMAND FOR TOURIST CAMPS.

Winona, Minn., Sept. 15.—Twice a year I have to pass through the Chicago area on my way to or from the east. I used to go down the Fox river valley over routes U. S. 330 and 30 as far as Joliet and thence up to Chicago Heights. More recently, going east, I have come in over route U. S. 14 as far as its intersection with U. S. 45, thence over 45 to its intersection with 30, and U. S. 30 through Chicago Heights, Dyer, Ind., etc.

My reasons for writing are to complain about the lack of good tourist camps on that route between Dyer, Ind., and Lake Geneva, Wis. On my last trip back from the east we got to Dyer too early to quit for the day and too late to go on. But we went on. We traveled some 87 miles, mostly after dark, before finding accommodations in Crystal Lake, Ill. We found that place only by a miracle, and if we had missed I don't know how far we should have gone before finding anything. To my knowledge there is only one tourist camp in that section, at Algonquin, Ill., which we somehow missed. Maybe it is closed.

It seems to me that there ought to be a good camp at or near that intersection around Dundee, Ill., where routes U. S. 12 and 14 and, I think, 20 come together. Another good place for a camp would be on U. S. 30 near Chicago Heights. Such camps, if kept clean, comfortable and decent, and well advertised would, in my opinion, be life savers to travelers caught as I was a while ago.

If you want to see what I was up against start your Tribune roadster from Dyer, Ind., about 4:30 p. m. [standard time], take the route I have indicated and see how far you have to go before coming upon either a tourist camp or a house where tourists are accommodated. To count, they must be marked plainly as such places. Also, pretend that you have been driving since early morning, just to get the proper mental angle. McKENDREE PETTY.

WANTS U. S. 20 WIDENED.

Rockford, Ill., Sept. 17.—In the morning issue there appears a story regarding the elevated highway. The elevated road is necessary, but the new Rockford to St. Charles road suggested is only a waste of gas tax money.

The real reason for the demand for a new road goes back to the time the road between Rockford and Belvidere was given the U. S. 20 marking and took trafic away from a few oil stations and hot dog stands on Charles street. These individuals have kept up a ceaseless agitation ever since to have the routing changed.

The change was made during the present administration and, of course, gives politicians of the opposition a chance to keep the agitation going no matter how much money would have to be spent for a new road that is not needed.

What is really needed is the widening of U. S. 20 from Elgin to Rockford to a width of 40 feet. We have plenty of cement roads in this part of the state and if there is money to build roads to swing trafic in front of some kinds of business of a very small group in order to get votes, I will say if those backing this unnecessary project are sincere, let them work for farm to market roads in Boone and Winnebago counties. J. LANE.

STATE DALLIES ON MATTER OF GRADE VIADUCT

Although funds have been available for fourteen months, the Illinois highway department is still unprepared to proceed with construction of a projected grade separation at the intersection of Roosevelt road and the Belt railroad in the western suburb of Broadview. Both the pavement and the tracks are listed among the heaviest trafic carriers in the metropolitan area.

On July 1, 1935, Illinois was allotted $10,300,000 federal "easy money" for the construction of grade separations. In November, Washington approved a proposal to include this busy Broadview crossing among the projects. The cost was estimated at $175,000.

Plan Is Changed.

The state highway department first prepared plans and specifications for a subway. Then it was discovered that peculiar subsoil conditons would involve serious drainage problems. This design was abandoned early this year in favor of a viaduct for Roosevelt road.

An inquiry at Springfield last June was answered with the information that the specifications for the viaduct were being drawn by the highway department engineers. Last week the specifications had not been finished. Also, the department still has a bit of right of way to acquire.

In the meantime, 6,500 automobiles, including trucks and buses, and 103 trains, not including switching, are daily exposed to collision at the grade crossing. In a five hour daylight tally, vehicles passed the crossing at a rate of one every eleven seconds. Trains were passing at a rate of one every 14 minutes and 39 seconds, each train blocking the motor trafic for an average of 1 minute and 14 seconds.

No Gates at Crossing.

There are no gates at the crossing. The Chicago Motor club objected to signal lights because the switching would have automatic lights wigwagging almost continuously, even while an engine and a couple of cars were standing on some nearby sidetrack. The conventional cross bar sign is illuminated by flood lights that also illuminate the side of a train standing or moving across the highway.

Regardless of signs and lights, the crossing remains a dangerous one as well as one delaying much vehicular trafic. Motorists complain that Springfield doesn't recognize the urgency of the demand for the grade separation.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Dodge dealers and salesmen, at a meeting last week in the Stevens hotel, heard Regional Manager L. D. Cosart and General Sales Manager A. Van Der Zee tell of the rise of the automobile industry this year and of an even greater rise in Dodge output.

The speakers quoted records showing that the business of the entire motor car industry during the first seven months of 1936 exceeded by 26.5 per cent the business done during the same period of 1935. Covering these same seven months, the meeting was told that Dodge dealers showed a gain of 35.6 per cent.

A thirty foot model of Plymouth's half mile long Detroit factory was presented to Harvard university by the automobile company on the school's recent 300th birthday. The model is a miniature standing seven feet high. Students will be able to see the layout of an efficient production plant.

Byron C. Foy, president of De Soto, on his recent return from a visit in Europe, reported that continentals are showing a preference for American made cars. Reviewing domestic sales reports, he commented that there is a trend toward the medium priced models.

Studebaker reports that it sold more cars between Jan. 1 and Sept. 10, 1936, than in twelve months of any year since 1930.

Prestone dealers and salesmen met in the Stevens hotel last week and heard engineers discuss advances in winter protection for automobiles. They were told that 540,000 motor cars froze up in the United States last winter.

First in Chicago

Day-by-day happenings in the world of finance and business are important. But their true significance becomes more apparent when related to the trend

ADVERTISERS who wish to take maximum advantage of improved sales opportunities in the Chicago market will be interested in the table to the left which summarizes the experience and judgment of several thousand advertisers.

During the first eight months of 1935 the Chicago Tribune led all Chicago newspapers by 3,578,963 lines of total advertising. In the same period of this year advertisers increased the Tribune's margin of leadership to 4,991,304 lines.

In other words, on the basis of an experience developed during a period when budgets were prepared with unusual care and media most closely scrutinized, advertisers increased the Tribune's lead over the second newspaper from 47.0% to 64.3%.

This was the largest percent of lead of the Tribune over the second newspaper as far back as the records go.

Of special interest is the widening of the spread since 1932.

During the first eight months of 1932, the Tribune led the second newspaper in total advertising by 19.2%. Note the change in subsequent years.

Tribune Lead Over the Second Newspaper

1st 8 Months	Lines	Percent
1932	1,608,755	19.2
1933	1,894,778	23.5
1934	2,791,141	34.8
1935	3,578,963	47.0
1936	4,991,304	64.3

What all advertisers as a group think about Chicago newspapers is set out unmistakably in the above table. The figures point clearly to the Tribune as the most productive for advertisers.

The changes in the advertising practice of individual concerns are equally enlightening and are well worth study. The statistics will be gladly furnished on request.

These advertisers sell all kinds of merchandise. They number among their customers all income and occupational groups. They have proved to their satisfaction that the Tribune with its low rate and majority coverage of the market pays out best.

Copies of Paris Originals Are Style Perfect

Materials, Lines, Details Faithfully Adapted to Individual Silhouettes.

By Rhea Seeger.

JUST how well do you know your Chicago shops? For instance, do you know that there is a famous boulevard shop here that is almost as French as any of the exciting shops in Paris? You can select a complete wardrobe or a single dress in an atmosphere usually found only in similar French shops.

Sink into a deep luxurious chair and have not only swatches of materials, but bolts of the glamorous stuff brought to you. See a march of mannequins, showing distinctive French originals that can be copied expertly to the last exquisite detail, or adapted knowingly for American streamlines, a bit of magic much more difficult to perform than it sounds. Have your fittings in the French manner, if you've a difficult silhouette. It's just the shop for that. Every measurement is taken, and your double is fashioned of muslin and padding. This "stand-in," so to speak, takes all the punishment of tedious fittings that are so necessary, while you saunter in not more than twice, once for the selection of fabrics and the model itself, and later for the final fitting. It's really the thrill of a shopping lifetime!

Proper Foundation and Accessories Necessary.

And that's just the beginning of all the magic. You're outfitted completely, if you wish, and you'd better wish, for the most distinctive of new models becomes ordinary unless you've the proper foundation, and the correct costume accessories—including gloves, a hat that is the last word in chic, a clever handbag, hosiery in a subtle shade, and sleek footgear to complete the ensemble. Even the newest bits of costume jewelry are shown, from earrings, stunning clips, and bracelets to some of the best examples of authentic antique jewelry in matched sets for your most romantic evening gowns.

During the last twenty-five years, each season, French originals have been presented, not a mere six or seven, but dozens of intriguing creations; some of them brought back with the last plait unpressed, or loops of the basting thread still visible, but with all the important details finished. These are the best of the French showings, not necessarily the most popular models, but distinguished creations so cleverly designed that they can be worn by Americans, or readily adapted for them. To see them is to realize what wizards these French designers are, and to realize the unerring taste of the exacting woman, who, for the last twenty-five years has brought them here to delight a keenly appreciative clientele.

Beauty of Simplicity and Perfect Workmanship Here.

The last collection undoubtedly is just as exciting as the first one that cleared the customs.

It will keep you in a state of positive envy trying to decide which of the new fabrics, new drapings, decidedly new trends, definitly different skirtlines and sleeves to select. You will be able to appreciate once again the beauty of simplicity and perfect workmanship.

Notice the softness of the fabrics, the suedelike textures of both silks and woolens, the suppleness that means superlative designs in draping, the truly different sleeves, with fullness, but a fullness reasonably achieved, without the frenzied distortions caused by just "bunching." Long, suave streamlines do everything for you, take inches off the figure, and make you look your best every time you wear the model. Only superior fabrics are used, materials that will keep their original luster and beauty after repeated trips to the cleaners, and so undated as to line and detail that they may be worn for seasons.

French Originals Copied Faithfully or Adapted.

From literally dozens of models we've sketched five. These are the French originals. In this shop they will be copied faithfully in any suitable color or fabric you select, or they will be adapted skilfully to your own particular personality. Others equally as lovely also are available.

A. . . . Dark gray soft wool in a slim, fitted street suit. Shallow slits in the skirt assure freedom while walking, a padded roll edge in the hemline of the skirt is repeated around the short, snappy jacket. The separate blouse is of dull silk black jersey with a most unusual neckline, achieved by a twisted roll of the jersey around the neckline and down the center front. The sleeves of the blouse are short, straight, and simple. It is an original by Alix.

B. . . . A Vionnet model. Long, suavely fashioned in a flattering feminine silhouette, the fabric of this gown is soft, dull duvetyn in sooty black. A double fold is at the front of the dress. The sleeves are long, moderately wide, and loose at the wrist. The back is open to the waist. Over the dress goes a subtly draped cape, one that only Vionnet could create. Almost the most spectacular creation in the collection, it is so beautifully fashioned and so graciously feminine that it makes a perfect evening and dinner costume.

Chanel's Dance Dress Has Miles of Narrow Val Lace.

C. . . . Chanel's dance dress in black. Miles of narrow val lace are sewed in scroll design from the top of the bodice to the hemline, on a foundation of black net. The skirt swirls from the kneeline down to the floor, and the scrolls graduate in size from the bodice to the edge of the skirt. Around the shoulders is a cloud of filmy black net.

D. . . . Another Alix original, an afternoon "two piece" with a future. The straight, slim skirt is of black velvet, the exciting top is a blouse of a mossy textured dull wool. It is fitted, basque fashion, tightly to the ribs, buttons demurely down the front, and has softly draped full sleeves that fall below the elbows. Below the normal waistline, taking the place of a peplum, is a deep, gayly swinging fringe made of the same material as the blouse top.

E. . . . Fur is managed as smoothly as fabric in this dashing, black Persian lamb coat, flat in front, with the fullness carefully kept at the back. Stunning new sleeves are full enough to accommodate the bigger sleeves of smart new dresses. Gold metal buttons down the center of the bodice furnish a bright note of contrast. The coat, with its snug collar, was designed by Dormay.

All models sketched are from the collection of new French originals, exclusively featured in this famous boulevard shop in Chicago.

Christmas Cake Baked Now Has Chance to Age

Wise Cooks Prepare Fruit Loaves at This Time of Year to "Set" Flavors.

By Mary Meade.

MERRY Christmas! To be sure, no snow has fallen and nobody as yet has begun hiding presents or humming "Silent Night." Still it is not too early to think about the holiday fruit cakes which always make Christmas day the merrier.

Fruit cakes which have been allowed plenty of time to ripen and to grow rich and mellow are nice gifts for friends and make more festive the holiday harthside. Now is a good time to mix fruit cakes and tuck them away in tins to age and grow more flavorful awaiting the Christmas season.

Getting together the ingredients for a fruit cake and preparing them for the mixture is quite a task in itself, but scarcely a woman who makes a habit of having plenty of fruit cakes on hand during the holiday season resents the amount of work required. A thumbguard is to be recommended at the start of cutting up the fruit. It will spare the thumb many a bruise and minor cut.

The old English fruit cake recipe given today is rich and spicy. The fruit is prepared one day and allowed to stand overnight in brandy and bitters to develop flavor. The next day the other ingredients are mixed and everything is combined. For convenience of preparation the recipe will be given in three parts.

OLD ENGLISH CHRISTMAS FRUIT CAKE.

Part I.

1 pound seeded raisins
1 pound currants
10 ounces stoned dates
¼ pound figs
½ pound citron
1 pound blanched almonds
¼ pound candied cherries
¼ pound candied pineapple
¼ pound candied orange peel
¼ pound candied lemon peel
½ cup brandy
½ cup Angostura bitters

Wash and drain the raisins and currants. Put raisins through food chopper. Cut up dates, figs, citron, pineapple, and cherries. Cut the almonds into coarse slivers, and slice the lemon and orange peel thinly. Pour the brandy and bitters over the fruit mixture and let stand overnight.

Part II.

2 cups flour
½ teaspoon soda
3 teaspoons baking powder.
½ teaspoon allspice
1½ teaspoons cloves
½ teaspoon mace
1 tablespoon nutmeg
1 tablespoon cinnamon
¾ teaspoon salt
Few grains cayenne pepper

Sift the flour and mix and sift the other dry ingredients with it. Sift the mixture over the prepared fruit. Mix the fruit through the flour with the finger tips.

Part III.

2 cups butter
2¼ cups brown sugar
7 eggs
1 cup black coffee
¼ cup molasses
1 cup dark jelly

Cream the butter and add the sugar gradually, mixing thoroughly. Add the well beaten eggs, then the coffee and molasses. Blend well. Mix in the jelly thoroughly. Stir the fruit and flour mixture into the butter and sugar combination, and blend altogether thoroughly. If a little more flour is needed to hold the mixture together, it may be sifted in at this time.

Line oiled cake tins with a layer of oiled brown wrapping paper and an inner layer of oiled waxed paper. Pile the batter lightly upon this waxed paper.

Bake the cakes in a very slow oven [250-275 degrees F.] for four hours.

Half this recipe will make several good sized fruit cakes in case a large supply is not desired. When the cakes are stored be certain they are well wrapped in waxed paper and sealed in air tight containers. Tin boxes may be sealed with tape. If the cakes are baked in convenient sizes they may be stored in pound coffee cans.

Inventors Flood English Market with Gas Masks

LONDON

Living in London during the next war is going to require considerable courage. Even more than has been estimated, now that there is no assurance of either efficient gas masks or bulletproof jackets.

It is a safe estimate to say that there is more concern over the supply and efficiency of gas masks than any defensive equipment at the moment. Hundreds of contraptions are being placed on the market for the civilian population, but none of them receives the unqualified commendation of the government. There even is a traveling tent "mask" to put over a pram if the nurse is caught out walking during an air raid, the air control for the child being regulated by the nurse.

The police department has a most impressive array of bulletproof vests, but on closer inspection one will find them full of holes which have been shot through them into dummies used in the tests. In almost every case the inventor had such faith in his vest that he was ready to wear it for the test!

Franklin's Dress, Manner Won the Esteem of Paris

WHEN Benjamin Franklin, the American commissioner, reached Paris in 1776 he was welcomed with wonderful unanimity. His fame as a philosopher, his unfailing good humor, the dignity, self-possession, and ease of his manners, the plainness of his dress, his habit of wearing his straight, thin gray hair without powder, contrary to the fashion of that day in France, acted as a spell. Yet he is credited with saying "eat to please thyself, but dress to please others."

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

By Eleanor Nangle

New Cleansing Cream Has Virtue of Softening the Skin Tending to Be Dry.

IT'S only wise, if you value your complexion, to begin now on your winter beauty routine. You'll need, for one thing, a somewhat heavier cleansing cream than you used during the months when warm weather and increased outdoor activity pushed dryness, as a complexion problem, comfortably into the background.

You couldn't do better than to adopt as your standby a new cold cream, not heavy or waxy, but soft and finely textured, that can serve you as both a cleanser and a softener. This cream has just been brought out by one of the cosmetic houses. It's similar to the cream used in their expensive salon treatments, although it isn't expensive, as it comes to the beauty seeker in generous jars.

We always have had a weakness for cold cream. The liquefying creams have left us a little cold since they first came into being. They're speedy cleansers, all right, but as softeners most beauty experts agree that they leave a great deal to be desired. The old cold creams, on the other hand, weren't so hot, either. They were stiff in texture and not too efficient as cleansers.

This new cold cream seems to us to embody the virtues but none of the faults of both types. It really cleanses the skin well. And it's rich, fairly dripping with the softening, soothing oils that keep skins so well lubricated, that wrinkles don't have a chance to come into being. It's white, by the way, and with the faintest suggestion of a delicate, pleasant perfume.

We're strong for a cold cream like this, especially at this season. It's a good little oiler, and the average American woman needs to give her complexion all the oiling it will take when winter comes. There are three winter threats against a moist, soft skin with which most of us have to contend: hot, dry houses, high winds, and hard water. Any one singly is an enemy of skin, youth and beauty. The three in combination are just about fatal.

You'll find this new cream in shops everywhere, and we think you'll like it, especially if yours is the sort of skin that looks dry, feels dry, and is dry.

The dry skinned woman who values the softness of her complexion will use a heavier cleansing cream in winter than in summer. A new one on the market cleanses and softens, too, doing both efficiently. [TRIBUNE STUDIO Photo.]

Tyrolean Influence Is Latest Note in Upholstery Fabrics

THE Tyrolean influence, felt in womens' summer clothes this last season and adding a delightful, peasantlike fillip to them, is looming on the horizon of upholstery and cushion fabrics, and probably will be in full swing next spring.

Right now you can purchase some colorful inch or two inch wide embroidery banding in the curtain trimming department of a Chicago store. This same store is showing the Tyrolean touch on stunning white couch pillows of the monk's cloth and homespun types. Here the banding is used at either end of the pillows, set in about an inch or more.

This gay, red and white, and green and blue embroidery from the Tyrol is lovely when combined with the simple upholstery fabrics on maple, or pine, or beechwood furniture. And it is brand new in Chicago.

Sundry Queries on Etiquet Are Topics Today

By Helen Bartlett.

QUESTIONS and answers:

Mrs. M. S. writes of this problem in a recent letter. "When are butter plates and spreaders properly used, and what is the correct position for them on the table?"

When little bread and butter plates are used they should be placed at the upper left of the cover, in other words, at the tip of the fork. The spreader is placed across the upper edge of the bread and butter plate, parallel with the edge of the table and with the sharp edge facing the edge of the table.

Bread and butter plates are most frequently and most correctly used on the luncheon table. Certainly they may be used at dinner if you like, but the tendency is away from that.

Here Are Fundamental Rules for Proper Table Setting.

Another question of interest to a great many housewives and hostesses comes from Mrs. G. L. "Will you please tell me the fundamental rules for setting the table correctly?"

The most helpful rule to all concerned, both the table setter and the diner, is that silverware is placed on the table in the order in which it is to be used, beginning from the outside and moving toward the center from both the right and left. Forks are at the left and knives at the right, with the single exception of the oyster or cocktail fork, which is placed at the extreme right, to the right of the soup spoon, in fact.

The napkin may be placed either at the left of the cover or folded oblong and put directly on the service plate. The water glass is at the tip of the knife. And if there is a wine glass, it stands to the right of the water goblet.

Then about the salad. If the beverage, such as coffee, is served with the main course of the dinner, the salad is placed at the left, but if the coffee is reserved until the dessert course, or is to be served as demitasse following dinner, then there is room for the salad at the right of the dinner plate, and that is where it should be placed.

Dessert silver is brought separately, accompanying the dessert.

In Which Hand Should Fork Be Held? Custom Decides.

On a closely allied subject is the question: "Should the fork be held in the right or left hand?"

Either the right or left hand may manipulate the fork. But, perhaps, we had better go a little farther into the discussion.

The fork necessarily must be held in the left hand when the right wields the knife for cutting. That, however, is not the point which you wish to bring up. The custom in England and on the continent is to continue to hold the fork in the left hand to transfer the food to the mouth. Europeans smile at the zigzagging motion of Americans switching the fork back and forth from right to left and back to right. But whether they smile or not, it is the accepted American custom.

Scotland Draws Society in Grouse Shooting Season

LONDON

Scotland is, during the best of the grouse season, the place par excellence, where society and millions foregather, many of both carrying the American accent. Pierpont Morgan has several thousands of acres to shoot over at Gannochy, Angus, and he has had as his guests the duke and duchess of York and the duchess' brother, the Hon. David Bowes-Lyon, and his wife, the former Miss Rachel Spender-Clary, a niece of Lord Astor.

The duke and duchess of Kent, having left their small Prince Edward in their model nursery at The Coppins, Iver, are visiting in the castle of the "Ugly Duchess," she who was wont to pass through our childhood dreams after we had read the immortal "Alice in Wonderland." Lewis Carrol's creation and that of Lion Feuchtwanger in his novel "The Ugly Duchess" both are based on that dynamic old woman who fought against kings and emperors to defend her native Carinthia against invaders, more than 600 years ago. Margaret Maultasch's castle, the fortress she held as duchess of Tyrol, still is an imposing building near St. Veit, and part of it is occupied today by Count Khevenhuler, who is the duke's host. The place is commonly called Khevenhuler castle.

Queries on Homes

DEAR MRS. BARGELT: We recently purchased a rather old house. When we turn the water on and off there is the most awful rattling sound, and when we drain the sink and lavatory there are loud reverberating noises.—J. D.

ANSWER: The rattling sound you hear when the water is turned on and off probably is a sign that the pipes are not properly strapped and hung. And the loud noises that occur when the sink drains may be caused by the drainage pipes not being properly vented. It is wise to call in a good plumbing contractor, or consult a modernizing firm, and ask for the services of an expert to check up on the plumbing system.

Color Study Is Suggested as Feminine Hobby

Scientific Subject Which May Be Turned Into Home and Beauty Aid.

Petal soft hands for housewives is the interesting subject of Antoinette Donnelly's booklet, "Handmade Hand Beauty." Get a copy today. On sale at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower. Price, 5 cents. Postpaid, 7 cents.

By Antoinette Donnelly.

If you have no hobby, girls, let me suggest one. Color! A knowledge of color from the ground up. Study color in relation to your home, your individual personality, your temperament—yes, and your temper. Study the mixing of soft and lovely shades. It's a fascinating study, really, even though you may not go scientifically technical on the subject. It is suggested as a hobby to you women because with a good general knowledge of color you may be able to do over your whole personality, to emphasize it, soften it, or develop a brand new one. Besides, if you get in on the ground floor now you will be ahead of other women in this field. Color, unquestionably, is taking on an importance hitherto undeveloped in connection with health, with beauty, with dress, and with home and business environment.

The use of colored light as a treatment for stomach trouble was described at a recent meeting of the American Academy of Optometrists. The "color cure" was also recommended for headache, dizziness, and high or low blood pressure. Research and experiment have been going on in this medical field for years.

Then we have Howard Ketcham, color "engineer," inventor of the amazing colorcable, which permits colors to be flashed by cable, who, in addition to his other scientific color interests, has become the leader in predetermining consumers' color preferences. Mr. Ketcham offers color as a major contribution to the joy of living. In France, from where Mr. Ketcham has just returned after months of study, an interesting experience developed in a certain large photographic studio. In the darkroom, in which only red lights were used, the operators were perpetually bickering and quarreling, although away from the room their responses were perfectly normal. A green light was substituted for the red with an almost immediate change. The work went on without friction.

Green Is Soothing; Red Is Irritating.

"Green," Mr. Ketcham tells us, "is the soothing color. Red, the most irritating." That, in his judgment, justifies the use of green in surroundings which might otherwise have a bad effect upon workers. His own office carries out this theory in so soft and lovely a green, with an equally soothing brown on doors and woodwork, that you wish your painter could mix an identical hue for your home walls. But the rub is in arriving at the soothing green. That is why color study is recommended. Mr. Ketcham reports that there are some 300,000 known hues. He is a scientific authority, with a technical knowledge of the subject far beyond this reporter's power to transmit to you. Nevertheless, this man of science is not above offering a few suggestions to us women. For example:

It will come as a surprise to a good many large women that black is not the best shade for their silhouettes. On a good figure, yes. For the same reason that it is not the wisest choice for the extra large one. Black silhouettes the figure sharply. More sharply than any other color. So that if there is any overflowing adipose anywhere it is apt to be emphasized. White, on the other hand, diffuses with the background, relieving the large figure of the sharp cut outline. Black, too, is not a stimulating color, we're told. It is deadening and robs the natural coloring of vitality. It bleaches by contrast, really. Old people should not wear black for the reason that it makes an already colorless face more chalky. Gray, Ketcham points out, is so neutral it harmonizes with almost everything. People with yellow skin characteristics should avoid colors that tend to additional yellowing. Any color in which purple predominates casts a yellow shadow. Look at a bright purple for ten seconds, our authority suggests as a test, and look away at a wall or blank paper, and you'll see a yellowish cast.

Blue Is Man's First Preference.

To my surprise Mr. Ketcham reports that all surveys on the subject indicate that blue is man's first preference, red second. That woman's preference is the reverse, red first and blue second. Our understanding was that red was man's first choice. Blue, we're told, is a spiritual color. Red a physical color. Mr. Ketcham parried my nonscientific query as to which was best for the woman to don, with "It would all depend upon the objective to be achieved, wouldn't you think?"

Blue is a cold color. Red a warm color. Emerald with yellowish light [the most expensive emerald] is the purest green. Other emeralds have a bluish cast. But halfway between these two may lie the color you want. Again you see the importance of color study. The variations of shades are so many and so intricate for the layman, to put it mildly. But to get back to what we do understand, Mr. Ketcham notes that women with overflushed or rosy skin should beware of green, since it imparts an additional tinge of red.

Women are more sensitive to color environment than men, which explains in a measure the great development of color in business establishments. For the breakfast room, by all means, a soothing color is needed. Nerves are off balance at this trying morning hour, so color should be employed to soothe.

It's the Shade, Not the Color That Counts.

Any woman, says our authority, can wear any hue, but it is the selection of its variation to suit her individual needs that is important. Some may have the born knack, but for most of us it is training, and study, and experience that is needed. It's important to know which are warm colors and cold colors; colors and their complements, as blue-green and red, purple blue and yellow, pure blue [navy] and orange, pure green and red purple; to know how to use a light color with a dark color, a pure color with a grade color, and as an olive green with one of the magentas. The area of color, large or small, has to be taken into consideration. Disregard of these principles spoils room color schemes as well as dress color schemes. Take a room with white walls and have light beige molding. There's no contrast. Dark molding would supply the contrast and interest. Put gold on white. It diffuses with the background.

Mr. Ketcham suggests that dark green shoes and handbags be worn with green and gold combinations as smart. Copper rust with gold is good for sports; copper leaf in velvet for evening wear. New blues for fall are of mulberry cast, accented with red accessories.

TWO STUDIES IN BLACK AND WHITE

TIMES have changed. There was one "abomination" which the stolid Briton never could accept even in the days of the much-married Henry VIII., and that was the fashion of wearing sleeves which exposed the bare arm to view. This "astonished and shocked the fair dames so that naked arms were looked upon with horror and disgust."

Small Children Need More Than Physical Care

Understanding and Loving Parents Give Them a Real Sense of Security.

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

WE were saying yesterday that your young child, so young that he is between the ages of 1 and 2, needs a lot of bodily freedom and pretty much the run of the house.

This, of course, keeps you on the jump and takes a lot more of your time than if he spent most of his waking hours in a pen—too contented, in a vegetable-like fashion. The play pen may have its place for the busy mother at certain times of the day, but it is possible to overdo the use of it for the young child. It limits him physically—that is, in the actual use of his big body muscles, and it limits him in the sense experiences and play experiences that should be his, and that contribute so much to his vigorous growth and rich development.

Of course we must be reasonable in following this advice for giving a small child the freedom of the house. It does not mean that a home need be at all times in a state of chaos for the baby's convenience. And as he gets a little older it is easy to plan things so that he is happily occupied but not mischieviously so. Quite early he can learn to put some of his toys away, and pans, clothespins, and boxes back where they belong. He can have a lot of fun around the house without making much more work for you, only a little extra work that is more than compensated for by the interest of watching him from day to day.

Infant Needs Mother's Guidance During Day.

But your small child needs more than a chance to gain new body skills, and more than a chance to have the freedom of the house with all its objects, commonplace to us, but new and fascinating to him. Besides all this he needs you.

He needs you, not just to keep him from banging his head on this or falling off of that, but he needs your companionship and your interest. It supplies something that is his right, something that he cannot get in any other way; something that he certainly cannot get if your ideas of efficiency, your time-budget, your desire not to spoil him, your determination not to let him interfere with your life, make you put him in a room by himself, or outdoors alone for all the livelong day to play listlessly or aimlessly, or not to play at all. [And this is not saying that young children shouldn't play contentedly alone. They should and do, for hours at a time, with real absorption. The point is that they should not always be parked somewhere away from human companionship as a matter of convenience.]

Your small child needs you. You're his mother—the natural companion of his early years. Even mother animals do more than feed and keep warm their young. They teach them and play with them, and show their love for them.

Companionship and Love of Parents Also Necessary.

Baby animals crave this and get it. Human babies crave it and should get it, too. They also need more than physical care. They need the love and companionship of their parents to blossom forth as they should.

All this contributes to an all around physical well being. That's why babies and children, instead of being put in institutions these days are, whenever possible, boarded out in homes with the right sort of people. The institution might be able to offer better housing and sanitation and food than the family home could, but the social service worker considers these physical advantages more than offset by the warmth and sociability of family life.

Incidentally, two of the most uninteresting babies that I ever saw were given good physical care, but never were indoors or with their parents, except for their meals, baths, etc.

Because of the cravings we have been talking about, your small child doesn't want, when he is indoors, to be put in a room all by himself, no matter how sunny it is or how charmingly decorated and filled with elaborate toys it may be.

He is a sociable little being and so will trail you around the house, or bring his play things where you may be instead of staying put. Or later, when he is not quite so little, he may want to do just what you're doing and do it with you. He finds it fun to turn the pages of a magazine when you are doing so, to slosh around in a sudsy pan when you're washing out his clothes, to hammer when his daddy is hammering, etc.

Small Child Looks to Mother for Protection.

Your small child needs your bright answering smile, your friendly recognition of his burblings, gurglings, and long paragraphs in a strange jargon; your occasional hug or loving kiss as you pass by him, your gentle explanation and encouragement when things are troublesome, or when he gets hurt, or is tired or frightened.

He needs, besides, the things he learns through association with you each day in the many little situations that arise when a small child is made a real part of the home life, and has access to all parts of his house, and sees and is seen by people other than his family.

Your baby needs your companionship. If he gets it in the way I have described, you're not apt to have one of those annoying, troublesome small children about which I hear so much.

Our two leaflets, "Don't Touch" and "The No Habit" especially apply to young children. Each of these requires a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Sept. 28.

Cuttings made from newly ripened wood of many kinds of deciduous shrubs, taken now, can be rooted in a cold frame containing damp loam mixed with sand. The frame should be covered with the sash to check excessive evaporation and put in a shady spot. When self-sown seedlings are found in the perennial border it is a simple matter to transplant them to deep flats and carry them through the winter in a cold frame.

Tuesday, Sept. 29.

Narcissi, tulips, and hyacinths for forcing in pots should be planted now. Use moderately rich loam in the pots and bury them in the soil outdoors. Mulch the surface before freezing weather, so that the pots can be lifted at intervals during the winter. Now is the time to work some bone meal into the soil where plantings of hardy bulbs are to be made. Poor soil means poor blossoms, and the bulbs will gradually depreciate.

Wednesday, Sept. 30.

Late perennials that are still in blossom can be protected from light frost with a canopy of cheesecloth placed on a frame. Even sheets of newspapers spread over the tops of the plants will save them. Remove the cover during the day, replacing it after sunset. Gladiolus bulbs may be taken up with a broad-tined fork. After digging, the bulbs should be cured in the sun for several days before cutting off their leaves and storing the corms in a cool, dark part of the cellar. When the leaf tips are brown it is time to dig them.

Thursday, Oct. 1.

The best way to store apples and other tree fruits for winter use is to wrap each one separately in tissue paper and pack in a box in a dry, cool cellar. Throw away all bruised fruits and those which show even indications of rot or insect damage which might spread to others. A plant or two of parsley, taken up from the garden and reset in a pot of good soil, will do well all winter if kept watered and in a sunny window of the kitchen. This is one herb whose appearance, odor and flavor are all welcome in winter weather.

Friday, Oct. 2.

Changes in hardy border arrangement planned this summer ought to be carried out now. Thus there will be no delay when next spring comes along. Stone chips used as top dressing will not only reduce erosion in the rock garden but also help to prevent soil heaving and its damage to roots. Work them up close around the crowns of the plants. Get them in place now and let them remain there permanently.

Saturday, Oct. 3.

Transplanting of trees and shrubs can begin as soon as their leaves fall and may be continued until just before freezing weather. Always tramp the best soil firmly around the roots. The top growth ought to be reduced about one-third, and even more if the roots were badly damaged. Staking is recommended for trees two inches and over in diameter to prevent swaying by the wind before they are established.

Plaits Gain Importance in Tailored Frock Which Takes Well to Woolens.

Fashion at your fingertips! With emphasis on current trends in styling, the new modes presented in the fall and winter edition of Chicago Tribune Book of Clotilde Fashions offer you a complete wardrobe which you can create yourself. The booklet, just off the press, is 15 cents, or 10 cents when ordered with a pattern. Address Chicago Tribune, P. O. Box 537, Grand Central Station, NEW YORK CITY; or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower.

By Clotilde.

THIS charmingly tailored frock claims originality by virtue of its use of plaits. Far from being merely the usual means to the end of getting fullness into a skirt, plaits are to the fore in this model, lending trimness and youthful lines to the bodice. They extend from below the shoulder yoke clear into the peplum. Topping them is a neat and rather saucy little shirtwaist collar, and sleeves which have a way of their own, wilfully puffing where they join the shoulder. They may be either long or short.

The skirt is fitted snugly through the hips, and takes to plaits just below the knee, thus acquiring a gentle flare where it is needed most for everyday comfort, at the hemline.

This frock for both women and misses is an important one in any wardrobe, since it may go gracefully to classroom, library, business, and club events. Because it is a two-piece model, it is doubly useful. The skirt may be worn with several of the blouses and sweaters in your clothes collection, garments which will acquire a new lease on life simply by being given a new companion. The same principle applies to the modish little blouse. It is so divinely tailored that it will be perfect with any skirt which has been orphaned by the usual wear and tear which every busy woman gives her wardrobe.

The original version of this two-piece "indispensable" is fashioned of green woolen. The season for woolens definitly has arrived, and the sheers are both warm and made to fit easily into the prescription of tailored lines. Any other of the smart autumn and winter fabrics will be suitable, too, such as crêpe silk, satin-back crêpe, and novelty mixtures in both silk and woolen.

Style No. 3416 is designed for sizes 14, 16, and 18 years, and 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measurement. Size 16 requires 4⅝ yards of 39 inch material, with 5¼ yards of binding.

American Interest in Windsor Chairs Two Centuries Old

WINDSOR chairs, still sold by the thousands each year, were popular in this country as far back as the 18th century. When the continental congress came together at Independence hall to adopt the Declaration of Independence the members were seated in Windsor chairs.

Thomas Jefferson liked a commodious, round seated Windsor with one broad arm for writing. He wrote the first rough draft of the declaration while seated in it. The original chair was made about 1760 and remodeled in 1810.

Exhibit Features Unusual Collection of Old Glassware

COLLECTORS of old glass, and those interested in antiques, will be fascinated by the enormous gathering of important items now being displayed at a large Chicago store. Instead of having to travel far and wide to pick up a bit here and a piece there, it will be possible to add to your treasures simply by visiting this exhibition, for everything in it is, of course, for sale.

Many types of old glass, including milk, marble, luster, overlay, etc., are shown in covered dishes, compotes, plates, cream and sugar bowls, spoon holders, berry dishes, goblets, decanters, celery holders, little ornamental shoes, rare whisky bottles, and oil lamps. Some of the pieces were made by artists brought to America from Bohemia, Italy, France, and Ireland—countries famous for their glass making.

Others are examples of the first machine made or pressed glass. During the years 1840-'70 hundreds of patterns were manufactured and distributed. Thousands of amateur collectors have a good start for their collections right in their own cupboards or in those of their parents and grandparents.

One of the most interesting collections to start on is an assembly of barber bottles. These originated in ante-bellum days and were made until the turn of the century. They are becoming increasingly hard to find, which enhances their charm to any true antique-lover.

The heavy glass paper weights you used to admire as a child also make fascinating collectors' items, for there are many different kinds and all have a quaint charm and attractive color of their own.

If you have been laboring under the impression that old glass lacks interest, that it is merely a curiosity, visit this collection and discover for yourself how intriguing it can be. Before you know it, you'll become a collector.

James Monroe Is Called 'Last of the Cocked Hats'

JAMES MONROE was nearly 6 feet tall, very slender, a man of polished manners. His usual attire was a dark blue coat, buff vest, small clothes, and top boots. He wore a cocked hat of the revolutionary style and has been called by many writers "the last of the cocked hats," because he was the last of the Presidents to adhere to the fashion of the last century.

THE STAMP COLLECTOR

By Richard McP. Cabeen

Mr. Cabeen will answer questions about stamps, except concerning value. Do not ask where stamps may be sold as the Postage Stamps and Coins advertising section adjoining contains offers to buy and sell. Inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

ON Sept. 1 the first examples of Edward VIII. stamps were placed on sale in the postoffices of Great Britain and Northern Ireland. Unusual secrecy marked the launching of the new issue, for it was not until the morning of Aug. 26 that the public was made aware of an impending new issue. On that date a message was sent to the press to the effect that Assistant Postmaster General Womersley would make a statement at 5 p. m. At that time it was announced that three values, the ½d, 1½d, and 2½d, would be placed on sale on Sept. 1, and would be sold as a matter of course until the following Saturday, after which time they would be supplied only upon special request until the existing stocks of George V. stamps are exhausted. It also was stated that the 1d stamp would be issued in the near future.

All of the stamps issued so far are in the same colors and are of the same size as the stamps of the previous issue and show a profile portrait of Edward VIII., facing left, from a photograph taken by Hugh Cecil Portraits, Ltd. The design is rather startling in its simplicity, but has been acclaimed throughout Britain as the best since the classic penny black was issued in 1840.

Fred J. Melville, preëminent British philatelic writer, speaking of the new stamps, says: "I think the public will like them better than they have liked any new English stamps these fifty years. Their charm is their simplicity. There is no damned art about them. Only the art that disguises art."

He also states that he asked Sir Walter Womersley, M. P., the assistant postmaster general, if there were any special significance in omitting the usual "and revenue" from the inscription, and was told that officials felt these words unnecessary as the public was well aware of the dual use of British stamps. In no other case have stamps bearing the portrait of a new British sovereign been brought out in such a short space of time, and it may be conjectured that this was done at the express instance of Edward VIII. in order, perhaps, to establish a precedent for the empire stamps.

If the new issues which will come from each dominion and colony are as pleasing as the samples from England, collectors will feel less regret in spending the large sum needed to buy them.

The remarks on rotogravure varieties in Egyptian stamps published in this column during the early summer, and reproduced in the Stamp Collectors' Fortnightly of London on Aug. 1, have brought a response from Douglas McNeille of Cairo, Egypt, also published in the S. C. F., explaining some of the vagaries of this issue. He states that many experiments were made during 1925 and 1926, and that 1, 3, 5, 10, and 15 mils values were issued with a vertical, or very nearly vertical, screen, while other values, and the 15 mil value also were issued with diagonal screen.

It was not until about 1897 that Germany issued any special stamps for her colonies abroad. The first issue generally consisted of the current German "arms" issue overprinted diagonally with the name of the colony. Prior to these special issues ordinary German stamps were used and may be told from those used in the fatherland, only if on cover or if they show a clear postmark. Togo was placed under the suzerainty of Germany by its native king on July 5, 1884, and remained a German colony until portioned by the allies following the world war.

Stamp Notes.

A new price list of the stamps of British North America has been received from the Marks Stamp company, 462 Spadina avenue, Toronto, Ont., Canada. This list is free to collectors. The postage on a card to Canada is two cents.

A new contender for honors as the first stamp issuing country appears with the discovery of a half dozen copies of a Cape of Good Hope one penny stamp on newspapers mailed in 1832, says R. A. Barry in the New York Herald-Tribune book section. While South African collectors look upon these stamps as being in the same category as American "postmasters'" provisionals, "Stamp Collecting," of London, suggests that it will require the most unimpeachable evidence to support the claim, and reminds collectors that a few years ago when claims were made that Greece issued stamps in 1832, the labels turned out to be poll tax receipts.

Continued interest in the Susan B. Anthony stamps has caused a second printing to be ordered, increasing the supply from 75,000,000 to 100,000,000. The stamps are printed on rotary presses in sheets of 400, making four postoffice panes of 100 each, from plates numbered 21588, 21589, 21590, and 21591.

A FRIEND IN NEED

By Sally Joy Brown.

MOVING or house cleaning activities will take place in many homes during the next week, and if you're in that category you probably will be changing and discarding many of the furnishings in your rooms. Cleaning closets and basements and attics often brings to light many articles stored away and forgotten. If your home harbors any surplus of useful materials, perhaps you'd like to place them with some of the needy cases now listed in our files. There are hundreds of homes which have been without even the simplest of household necessities for many months, you know, and you can kill two birds with one stone during the next week if you'll just let me know what you have on hand. We can place almost anything, as the following samples of our requests will illustrate.

"Dear Miss Brown: If any reader is taking down a heating stove that still is useful, I would appreciate having it for an elderly man who is sadly in need of one which will burn soft coal. He often has been ill because of the lack of warmth in his small home in the country during the cold weather. A friend has promised to drive out to his home with the stove, if we are able to procure one for him.—K. J."

"Dear Miss Brown: We are a family of three. Our baby is 22 months old, and we expect another in November. We are living in two small furnished rooms, unable to afford anything better on my husband's low wages. We now have a chance to get a four room flat, if we only had some furniture. We do need more room before the baby comes, and feel we could live inexpensively. A friend with a truck would be glad to call for things for us. We will appreciate anything—rugs, dishes, beds, furniture of any kind.—Mrs. R. W."

From a suburb west of Chicago—"Dear Miss Brown: I have heard of you often and finally have decided to write to you for help. I have been a widow for the past nine years. There is no money coming in and everything is wearing out. I was disabled by falling from a ladder while house cleaning two years ago, and now am able to go out to work. Could you help me get some cooking kettles? I haven't a single good one. Even my coffee pot has no handle.—Mrs. M. B."

Certainly some of our readers will have extra utensils which can be sent to Mrs. B., who also is in need of a coat, size 50 or 52.

"Dear Miss Brown: I am a young man, 22 years old, with a mother and sister dependent on me for support. I work for the WPA and earn barely enough to keep us going. I am in urgent need of a bed for my mother, as the one she has is so worn that it fell apart the other night. I had to tie it up to make it partly serviceable, as I am unable to buy one. If some reader has a bed, I'd appreciate it a great deal and am willing to call for it.—E. P."

This boy lives on the south side of the city.

This letter comes from a case worker in a north side office of a welfare organization:

"Dear Miss Brown: Mrs. L. is trying to get a job to support herself and two small children. She is taking excellent care of them, and is doing her best to provide a good home, but does not have enough furniture. If any reader has a dresser, kitchen, or other chairs, she would appreciate them greatly. Also, her eldest child, 2 years old, has no toys, except one old cloth "bunny" which was given to her. If any reader can help this woman we will be glad to call for the offers.—Mrs. N."

Many boys and girls have far too many toys, more than they possibly can play with. Would some youngster like to give up just one of her toys for this child?

We always can use musical instruments if you have any tucked away. For instance, W. S., on the south side, writes as follows:

"Dear Miss Brown: I am a young man, 18 years old, writing to you because I know you have helped many other people and may be able to help me. This may seem to be asking a great deal, but perhaps one of your readers has an accordion which he no longer uses or needs, and may pass on to my brother. He is unable to work, having ben ill with tuberculosis for the past two years. We are on relief at present, and having the instrument would make him happy. I would be glad to call for one."

NOVEL HAT

The "Viceroy," acclaimed by stylists as a fashion pace-setter, is a particularly flattering adaptation of the new high-crowned trend. The trimming, of black and white cire and satin rolls, is made in imitation of cigarettes.

SENSIBLE DIET FOR FAT FOLKS

A Fat Life Is Often A Short One Statistics Show

Too much fat puts too much work on any heart—the heart is apt to break down under the strain. Insurance companies constantly warn overweight folks to reduce, but make sure you use a safe, sane method. The following has been proven ideally successful—

Cut down on fat meats, butter, cream and sugar sweets. Eat more fresh fruit and vegetables.

Take a half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts first thing every morning in a glass of hot water for proper elimination. Women Voters Out to Provide Election Data

Illinois League to Furnish Information Booths in Stores and Communities.

FROM now until November members of the Illinois League of Women Voters will be occupied with the task of making their fellow citizens election conscious. Information booths will be set up in department stores in the loop and in various communities next Friday and Saturday and the following Monday, before the final day of registration Oct. 6, and again on Oct. 30, 31, and Nov. 2, preceding the general election, Nov. 3.

Here the inquiring citizen can find out where and how to register, where to vote, and how to mark a ballot, but not for whom to vote. That information the nonpartisan league withholds.

Mrs. George G. Bogert, president of the Cook County League of Women Voters, has announced that the local leagues are planning their own preëlection activities, and will conduct information booths in their respective communities in addition to serving as poll watchers at the election to help avert frauds. Mrs. Will F. Lyon has charge of the booths in the loop.

MRS. GEORGE G. BOGERT.

Detailed nonpartisan information about candidates for local, state, and national offices is made available in the Illinois league's preëlection issue of its publication, "The Illinois Voter," just out. Information on candidates' past records, their stands on previous and current legislation, and a point-by-point summary of the national party platforms are included in the issue.

Forum of League to Open Season on Oct. 10.

The forum of the league will open for the season Saturday, Oct. 10, with a talk by John Ward Studebaker, United States commissioner of education, on "The Way Out for Education." The federal constitution will be the topic of the November meeting. Harry D. Gideonse of the University of Chicago will speak on "An Economist Looks at the Constitution," and Miss Sophonisba P. Breckenridge, also of the university, will discuss "Social Security and the Constitution." Mrs. Eric Stubbs is chairman of the forum.

The six major departments of the Illinois league will meet separately Wednesday morning, Oct. 14, and jointly that afternoon in order to formulate and coördinate their programs for the year ahead. Mrs. Clifton Utley will address the six groups at luncheon on "Europe Today and Our Relation to It." Mrs. Utley recently returned from a summer in Geneva, Germany, England, and the Balkans.

Several Departments to Take Part in the Conference.

Taking part in the conference, which will be held at the Harriet Hammond McCormick Memorial Y. W. C. A., 1001 North Dearborn street, will be departments dealing with government in relation to child welfare, economic welfare, education, foreign policy, the legal status of women, and government operation.

Legislation in which the league is particularly interested this year includes an improved pure food and drug bill, and renewal of the reciprocal trade agreements, and the neutrality act, both of which expire next year. The league also will support bills, in the Illinois legislature, providing pensions to needy mothers and to the blind.

Two of the largest federations of women's organizations in the city jointly are sponsoring an American Home day program Tuesday at the Food and Household exposition which opened yesterday at the Coliseum. The Chicago and Cook County Federation of Women's Organizations, headed by Mrs. Walter H. Hermsdorf, and the Cook County Federation of Women's clubs, of which Mrs. John Van Wakeman is president, together have arranged the program.

Dr. Clifford J. Barborka of Northwestern university heads the list of speakers. He will give an illustrated lecture on "Food Fallacies." Also included on the program will be an address on "Modern Trends in Interior Decoration," by Frank Van Viessingen, interior decorator for a furniture company; a talk on "The Purchase and Care of Wash Fabrics," by Mrs. Kathryn Casterlin, education director of the Approved Laundries of Cook County; and a discussion of "Modern Lighting and Its Place in Future Home Planning," by Carl Zersen of the Chicago Lighting institute.

Chicago Woman's Ideal Club to Have Opening Reception.

After the program club leaders will have tea in Shoji Osato's Japanese tea garden in the building. The Food and Household exposition will continue through next Sunday, Oct. 4.

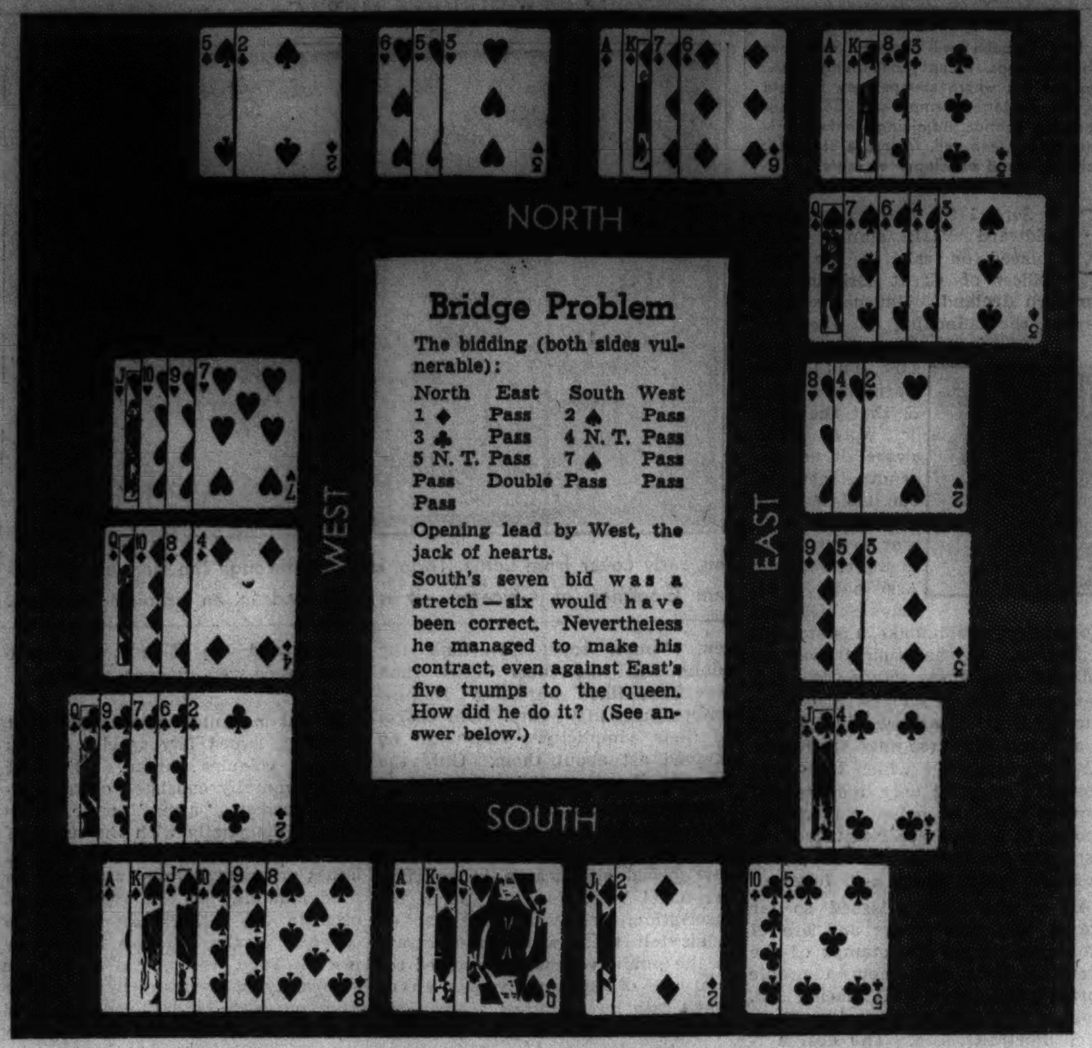
The Chicago Woman's Ideal club will hold its opening reception Thursday at 12:30 o'clock at the Blackstone hotel. Included among the guests will be Mrs. Walter W. Seymour, second vice president of the General Federation of Women's clubs; Mrs. William Franklin Farrell, General Federation director; Mrs. Edward J. Lehman, president of the Illinois federation; Mrs. Marion Biel, president of the first district of the Illinois federation; Mrs. George Hanley Nippert, state radio chairman, and Mrs. Frank M. Fulton, founder president of the club.

MRS. AMIE HEILMANN. [Maurice Photo.]

Mrs. Amie Heilmann is president of the club, and other officers who will serve the club this year are Mrs. Charles E. Krebs, first vice president; Mrs. Arthur W. Nelson, second vice president; Mrs. Frank J. Zavadil, recording secretary; Mrs. Fredric Wellman, corresponding secretary; Mrs. H. T. Braschler, treasurer; Mrs. Fulton, Mrs. Emil J. Gutgsell, Mrs. Walter E. Hughes, Mrs. Perry R. Johnson, Mrs. Joseph Mills, Mrs. Levi Nelson, and Mrs. Adolph Weber, directors.

This year St. Elizabeth hospital, 1433 North Claremont avenue, is celebrating its golden jubilee, and among the events planned in observance of the anniversary is a benefit football game between De Paul university and Omaha university at Wrigley field on Saturday, Oct. 24. The woman's auxiliary, of which Mrs. Caroline Zuber is president, met Thursday at luncheon at the hospital to make plans for the event. The auxiliary also will give a card party and dance for the benefit of the hospital's charitable work.

Contract According to Culbertson



Bridge Problem

The bidding (both sides vulnerable):

North	East	South	West
1 ♦	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	4 N. T.	Pass
5 N. T.	Pass	7 ♠	Pass
Pass	Double	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead by West, the jack of hearts.

South's seven bid was a stretch—six would have been correct. Nevertheless he managed to make his contract, even against East's five trumps to the queen. How did he do it? (See answer below.)

ANSWER: He won the first trick and led a club to the king. Then he took a trump finesse and, when West showed out, saw that a trump coup would be necessary. He cashed the two remaining heart tricks, then entered dummy again with a club and took a second trump finesse. Next a diamond to the king and a ruff of a club. Finally his other diamond to the ace, and any card from dummy, overtrumping whichever trump East played. A very easy coup, the only point being that South had to cash his heart tricks at an early stage to preclude a heart discard by East.

By Ely Culbertson

WHENEVER the question arises of comparing one player's bridge skill with another's I bring up the case of two certain experts.

From the viewpoints of technical knowledge, experience, and the ability to execute all the most difficult and subtle plays, both on defense and as declarer, there is absolutely nothing to choose between them. Yet playing in the same foursome over a considerable stretch of time, in those rubbers where the cut of the cards has decreed them opponents, one has enjoyed tremendous superiority in results over the other.

What is the reason for this? The answer may be summed up in one word—temperament!

Of the other two players one is average plus, the other average minus—an estimate on which the experts agree perfectly. But Expert A, the successful one, puts this estimate to actual account by letting it guide, or at least influence, his bidding, play, and general strategy. He neither expects nor relies upon effective coöperation when partnered with the weak player; faced with the choice of allowing the opponents to take the rubber or saving at an indeterminable sacrifice, he invariably lets discretion triumph over valor and chooses the former. Why, he asks himself, should he deliberateley prolong a contest in which he has less than an equal chance?

Expert B's bridge philosophy remains precisely the same whichever of the two weaker players he cuts. Though his knowledge is such that he cannot help being aware of his partner's ineptness, he gives his customary aggressive raises in the bidding, putting the poor fellow into contracts that would tax the ingenuity of a master. On the defense his plays and his signal cards are gems of subtlety—and consequently hardly suitable for the occasion!

But these are not all of his indiscretions. The worst of the matter is that he is not even consistent! As I have said, at times his faith in his partner's bidding is more sublime than sensible, particularly when the bids have been those that he wanted to hear! This, by the way, is a psychological phenomenon that is overlooked by almost all players. Holding a good hand, they naturally hope for raises from partner. If they come they accept them at face value, but if partner fails to raise, then that irrepressible hope induces them to think his failure nothing more than a sudden attack of conservatism. Of course, this lack of logic is not peculiar to bridge; it is simply another instance of believing what we want to believe.

But the Expert B of whom I speak carries this sometimes believing, sometimes unbelieving, process to absurd lengths. Spurred on by a free raise (which subsequently shows itself to have been quite unwaranted), Expert B not only reaches for a game but when doubled redoubles, usually with disastrous results! Then, in gambling parlance, he gets himself whipsawed by refusing to heed the weak player's persistent passing on another hand.

Obviously there can be no royal road to success with a partner who cannot be relied on for reasonably accurate valuation of his holding. There is, however, a policy that can be followed with much better results than can be had from sheer guessing. This policy is best described by the homily: "Take it (his bidding) with a grain of salt." Manifestly some credence must be placed on a partner's bids or passes; the weakest player can see his own cards better than can the greatest expert from the other side of the table. A policy of limited trust permits the bidding of questionable games only when a failure cannot be catastrophic. It practically bars redoubles, especially when the weak player must be the declarer. (The very sound of the word "redouble" is often enough to send him into such a funk that he will chuck a cold contract.)

The margin of safety where slams are concerned should be jacked up considerably, and close penalty doubles—the type where good defense will be an obvious prerequisite—must be thrown out entirely.

Nor need the modifications be considered as defeatism; for all of their observance, many a fat rubber can still be won. And at least no such catastrophe will happen as befell Expert B coupled to the weak partner on the following hand:

♥ K Q 9 7 2
♣ A 8 4 2

WEST
♠ A 10 4
♥ A J 10
♦ K 10 9 7 5 4
♣ 10

♥ 8 5 4
♦ Q 6
♣ Q J 9 7 6 3

SOUTH
♠ K Q J 7 2
♣ K 5

The bidding (both sides vulnerable):

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Double	Redouble	2 ♣
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♥	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Double	Redouble	Pass
Pass	Pass

North's (the expert's) final redouble was none too good, judged on any basis. That he dared redouble when his weak partner was to play the hand was tantamount to committing a particularly gruesome type of suicide.

West opened the ten of clubs, declarer won with the king and, without giving a passing thought to the probable distribution of opponents' hands and the position of their honor cards, straightway launched out on the dub's delight—a cross ruff! He laid down the diamond ace and ruffed a low diamond, then naively tried to cash the club ace preparatory to returning to his hand with a club ruff. But West rudely interrupted the proceedings by cutting down the club ace with his low trump, after which he led a diamond (having observed East's play of the queen on the second diamond lead). East overruffed dummy and returned a high club; declarer ruffed with the jack and was overruffed with the ace. Then East used his other trump to excellent advantage by again overruffing the dummy on a diamond lead. Finally, with four tricks already lost, West, of course, had to make his heart ace for a 1,000-point penalty.

As penalties go this was not terrific, but considering the score that should have been made by declarer the swing was enough to give North (the expert) a severe headache.

Proper play not only would have fulfilled the redoubled contract but would have snared an extra trick as well. Declarer, after winning the lead with the king of clubs, should have played a heart. Probably West would not go up with the ace, but if he should, things would be all the easier for declarer. Dummy's heart queen then would win, and now a trump should be led. Again West should lay off, and declarer should follow with another high trump. If West took this one and made his best return of a diamond, declarer should win and lead another heart. West would have to win and would be helpless to take another trick. If he should lay down the diamond king, dummy would ruff, declarer would return to his hand with a heart ruff, draw the outstanding trump, cash the good diamond jack, and discard his two low diamonds on dummy's hearts, using the club ace as entry. A low diamond lead by West should be allowed to run to the jack, with the same final result. And, of course, either a trump or a heart return by West would be duck soup for the declarer.

The swing between going down 1,000 points and making five spades on a redoubled four contract was a mere matter of 2,380 points!

Today's Questions

Question: Is there a penalty if declarer's partner informs declarer which hand has the lead?

Answer: If declarer's partner on his own initiative informs declarer which hand has the lead, or warns him not to lead from the wrong hand, the defender on the left of declarer's partner may choose the hand from which declarer shall lead.

Question: What are the requirements for a two no trump response over partner's takeout double?

Answer: This bid shows about two honor tricks and guarantees a probable double stopper in the opponent's suit.

New Nursery Interiors Gay and Modern

"Furnishing Your Home on a Modest Budget," a new booklet by Claire Winslow, tells how to have attractive rooms without running up large bills. It is full of helpful suggestions. Price, 5 cents by mail, 3 cents at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower lobby.

By Claire Winslow.

IF you were a before-the-war [world war] baby you probably spent a good deal of your first months in a crib with painted iron or shiny brass rods down the sides, and, when you could boost yourself up, you enjoyed shaking those bars with all your might because they made such a nice, rattling, metallic noise.

Well this year's crop of infants has something to crow about. They spend their time in elegant affairs with gayly painted circus animals, or puppies, or chicks painted on the head and foot boards. They spurn iron and brass for the new blonde woods, if you please, and for delectable enamel finishes in pastel tints. O, the 1936 heir apparent goes in for style in a big way!

The modern nursery is as pretty as a flower, and as immaculate as an operating room. It has furniture especially built for youngsters, floor coverings that can't be hurt by hard wear, and walls that can stand a lot of smudgy fingers and survive. Curtains and crib covers are washable, the type that no amount of tubbings can spoil.

Linoleum Is Used Both as Floor and Wall Covering.

In one of the pictures today you see a nursery with linoleum on the floor and climbing right up the walls. A buff, marbleized pattern is used underfoot, while above is a new, easy to apply wall linoleum in a lighter buff that can, of course, be scrubbed with soap and water, and that will keep its nice appearance indefinitly. For a completely immaculate nursery it is hard to equal this one.

The furniture, too, can be washed off when it becomes soiled, for it is enameled. The large, button-like decorations on the various pieces are painted in several different colors, adding a gay note to the ensemble.

If you want some sort of rug to spread over the linoleum floor the shops are showing any number of inexpensive, washable ones in plaid effects, in solid colors, or in the old fashioned, hit-or-miss pattern. They are appropriate for a youngster's room because they can so easily be kept clean.

Have you seen the clever little felt base linoleum rugs with all sorts of games and figures printed on them? They cost so little, yet afford hours of amusement for children.

Pieces Are Finished in Clear, Lovely Yellow.

The second picture today shows a new grouping of pieces produced by a firm noted for its high grade springs and mattresses and for its metal beds. This ensemble, however, is of wood. It is finished in a lovely, clear yellow and the cute little chicks that go parading across it are in red with white polka dots. Besides the crib shown, a child's bed measuring 2 feet 9 inches by 5 feet 6 inches also is available, as are a "chiffochest," a chair, a costumer, and a table.

The toy chest at the left in the photograph is one of the best looking we've come across, as it has shelves and a broad top surface as well as two closed sections for toys. The little three panel screen is a convenience in a nursery, too.

A large number of nursery patterns are available in the new, washable wall papers. If your walls are painted have the final coat in a glossy enamel so you can wipe off smudges and spots easily with soap and water or a cleaning fluid.

The most practical materials for bedspreads for a child's room are homespun, candlewick, monk's cloth, corduroy, sail cloth, and quilts. For draperies: Chintz, dotted Swiss, organdy, voile, dimity, or plain sheeting on which you can appliqué cut-outs in glazed chintz in several colors.

We will be glad to help you work out color schemes if you will enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your letter.

Watch for the special section of The Sunday Tribune on Oct. 4. There will be news stories and pictures featuring National Home Furnishings week, which will be observed here beginning Oct. 5.

MODEL ROOM

What better place to use the new wall linoleum than the nursery? Here a marbleized pattern is on the floor and a soft, buff, wavy design on the walls. It offers years of service and can be kept immaculate with little trouble. Photographed at the American Furniture Mart.

A Cozy and Decorative Hand Knit Shawl for Baby's Pram

By Jean Macdonald.

NO MOTHER ever can have too many shawls for the new baby or growing infant. They serve so many purposes that every layette should include at least three or four. As a protection against drafts when the baby is being fed or as a decorative cover on the baby's pram, this hand knitted shawl illustrated today is one of the loveliest of the many types of hand knitted shawls. It is made on large needles and with an interesting lacelike stitch which works up rapidly. Pompadour wool usually is the favorite yarn for this type of shawl, but any of the lovely, soft baby wools may be used. The nicest thing about using hand knitted shawls is that they always retain their cozy wooliness.

HOW TO ORDER

If you wish instructions for knitting the baby's shawl illustrated today, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to Jean Macdonald, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago. Be sure to send name and address with your letter.

Boy Meets Girl in New Paris Styles for Fall

Swallow Tail Jackets and Fur Trimmed Suits Vie for Fashion Honors.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Boy meets girl in the new Paris fashions for fall and winter 1936-'37, and this meeting makes the big romance of the clothes shown by the dressmakers.

The "boy" element in the styles comes chiefly from cavalier days in the 18th century. There are handsome, virile jackets from this epoch in all the collections, like Leslie Howard wore in "The Scarlet Pimpernel." They make jackets for daytime suits, they make fur coats and gorgeous brocaded wraps for evening. Blouses wear the lace jabots of the cavaliers of the revolution, and fancy vests abound on the scene of fashions.

Second in the "boy" lists is the swallow-tail, of which I have told you before in these columns. It is a star turn in the Paris shows, and such grand houses as Vionnet and Paquin make it an outstanding part of their suit and ensemble styles.

Napoleon's hat is back in style, but for women only. The tricorne of the cavalier is in, too, but veiled and feminine.

Top hats for ladies come on the stage with swallow-tails, but with draperies instead of brims.

Suit skirts are narrow as trousers, when they pair off with cutaway and cavalier jackets.

Heavy Gold Watch Chains Among Mannish Details.

Mannish details in the shows include heavy gold watch chains stretched across vests in Maggy Rouff's collection, purse pockets in Rochas' show, and pants plaits pressed into skirts in the Paquin collection.

Short sports coats like the boulevardier of Paris wore befo' the war, coachman coats with capelets for daytime, and double breasted marine reefer coats for evening in glamorous velvet come in with the new boyish clothes.

Lanvin proposes knickers for sports and Rochas continues to put trouser stripes on skirts.

The "girl" part of the fashions that meets the "boy" is expressed in a thousand ways. The wide skirts of dresses, with sheer tulle petticoats in Mainbocher's show, the spangled embroidery on wool frocks and jackets in Molyneux, Paquin, and Mainbocher collections; the softly shirred satin blouses in Schiaparelli's show, and Alix' complicated bosom draperies are pure girl. The same may be said for Patou's girlish sashed frocks for afternoon, with gently flared skirts.

Coats with fox and mink rampant in bands and collars announce the eternal feminine in every show in town.

Cocktail and Evening Gowns Shown in Lame.

Day length cocktail and evening dresses made of shining gold, silver, and copper lame, worn under rich coats of fur trimmed cloth, are a leading dress-clothes feature of the Paris shows. Schiaparelli, Mainbocher, and Rochas collections make them sweetly feminine.

The colors, as you've guessed, are rich, gay, and feminine with nary a bit of sober, mannish restriction about them. The materials, with the exception of broadcloth, are of the greatest opulence and fantasie.

Among the new detail colors, amber or topaz, worn with black or dark red or blue, lead off. Fuchsia shades make merry on black clothes, and cathedral window blue with ruby red announce that modesty in color is no longer the big thing in clothes.

Among the "boys" of the new Paris fashions, Molyneux black velvet evening coat is an outstanding model. This coat is about knee length and tailored as severely as a man's overcoat with eight bone buttons making it's double breasted closing.

Jean Patou Ensemble Is Truly Feminine in Spirit.

The black satin broadcloth coat has a silver fox collar that begins at the back of the sleeves and ties around the waistline on a broadcloth sash. There it almost meets two bands of silver fox placed up the side-front of the flaring coat skirt.

Creed's swallow-tail evening suit is made of mannish dull, black broadcloth. The jacket is a faithful reproduction of a man's formal evening suit. Such deviation as there is will be found in the black ottoman revers and the buttoned back "tails," the one on the right side housing a fancy white chiffon handkerchief. A white lace jabot fills in the neckline.

The blouse pretends to be a cavalier waistcoat, but is a halter blouse of black chiffon with exquisitely worked shirred bands and a black tulle jabot.

Household Queries

DEAR MRS. BARGELT: We washed out our boiler last spring with washing soda and vinegar, but I don't think we did a good job. What do you recommend for a good boiler cleaning? RAY W.

ANSWER: There is a boiler cleaning compound on the market which you can buy at a plumbing supply house, hardware store, or material supply house. Better let an expert do the work. He has the tools and the knowledge necessary to give your boiler a good cleaning. It won't cost you much and it will be worth what you pay for it.

DEAR MRS. BARGELT: Some of the tiles in our bathroom floor are coming loose. What would you advise us to use in resetting them? One tile in the wall has loosened also. K. E.

ANSWER: A loose wall tile can be reset with plaster of paris. For your tile floor, however, you should reset them with a mortar, or cement and sand. Better call in an experienced workman for your tile floor. The proportions of sand and cement he uses will depend somewhat on existing conditions, and you want a workman who can "judge conditions," and mix his mortar properly.

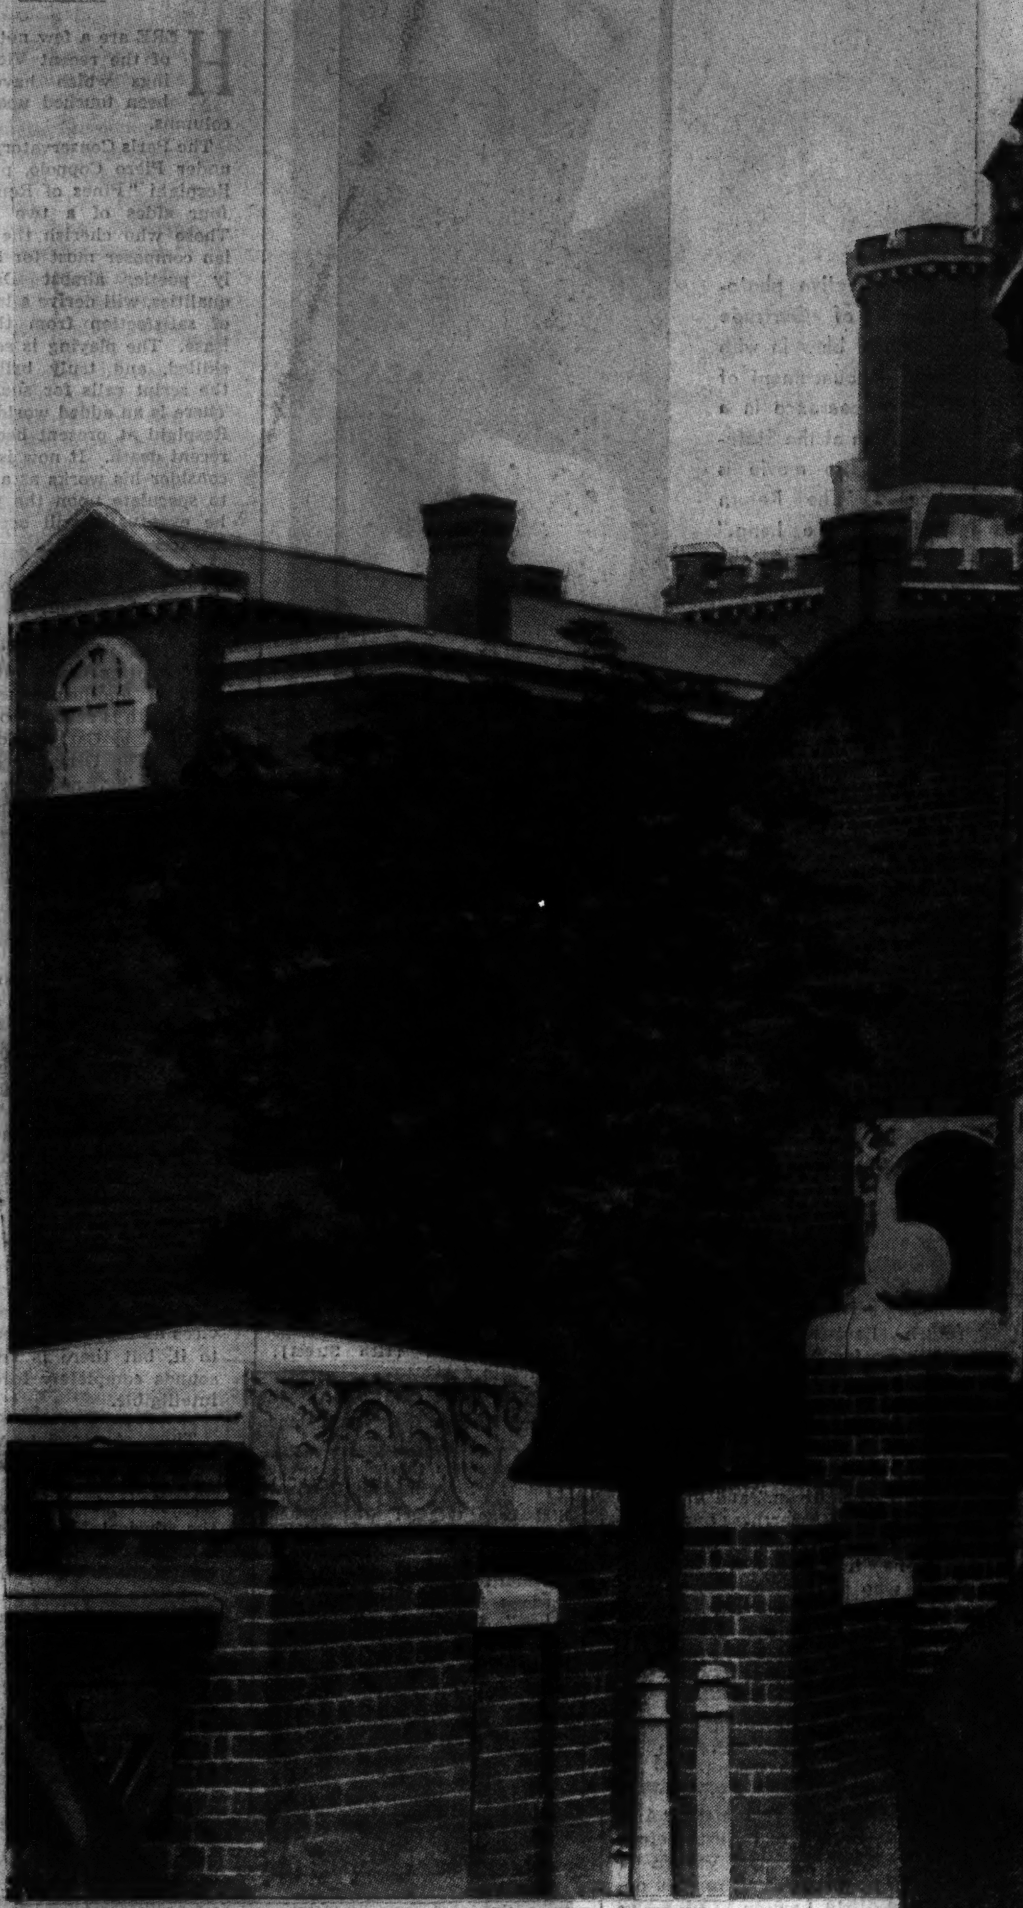
The Fall of Oscar Wilde



THE name of Oscar Wilde has recently come back into the limelight after more than thirty years of contumely and shame.

● Who was this man, once the idol of London and the toast of exclusive literary circles, who was sentenced by society to two years at hard labor in Reading gaol?

● What were the hidden causes which drove him to make of his name an anathema, to be mentioned in whispers, a low byword to be dragged through the mire?

● What strange malady impelled him to desert those heights whereon he enjoyed phenomenal success and to plunge deliberately to the depths in the search for new sensations?

● What madness urged him, against the frantic protests of his friends, to engage in the terrific legal battle with the marquess of Queensberry and expose himself to the fury of a British mob?

● The story of Wilde is a strange and tragic tale of a brilliant genius whose only enemy, after all, was his own worst self.

● The first telltale signs of his later undoing are glimpsed in "Dorian Grey," which shocked England with its pagan challenge to accepted standards of morals and sins. Later he wrote "Salome," which Paris refused to produce; and after that, at the height of his career, as sparkling plays as have ever appeared on a modern stage—"Lady Windemere's Fan" and "The Importance of Being Earnest."

● Out of the anguish of the prison years, amid the crushing debacle of all his hopes and ambitions and achievements, he wrote two great masterpieces—"De Profundis," a confession of his "deeds done in the flesh," and "The Ballad of Reading Gaol." This last is a ballad which will take its place as one of the greatest English ballads ever written.

London's Drab Idol of Gay Nineties

By LOUISE BARGELT

CHAPTER I.

ON NOV. 13, 1895, a man stood, manacled and chained to a gang of convicts, on the platform of Clapham Junction station in England. He was being transferred from Wandsworth gaol to Reading gaol. He stood bareheaded, scantily clad in prison garb, in the bleak and drizzling rain.

● Suddenly someone in the gaping crowd which had gathered recognized the man. "By God, that's Oscar Wilde," he shouted, and strode over to him and spat in his face.

● The crowd went wild. "Oscar Wilde! Oscar Wilde!" they jeered. Soon their taunts rose to a menacing roar.

● This was the man who a few months before had been the idol of brilliant London. For several years he had basked in the warm glow of phenomenal success. Europe as well as England had rung with praise of the sparkling young genius, Oscar Wilde. Now he was standing with convicts around him, the object of a mob's furious hate. It would have torn him limb from limb, but the guards interfered and hurried him to the shelter of a waiting train.

● Hard to picture how a man could fall so far in so brief a space of time; how his name almost overnight could become anathema, to be mentioned in whispers or not at all. But such had happened. Oscar Wilde was the ruin of a man. He had deliberately brought upon himself public disgrace and punishment. As he writes in his confession, "De Profundis," after nearly two years in prison:

Reading Gaol, 1896.

I must say that I ruined myself and that nobody great or small can be ruined except by his own hand. This pitiless indictment I bring without pity against myself. Terrible as was what the world (Continued on page eight.)

So-So Plays Initiate Broadway's Theatrical Season

Melodrama Is Plentiful, but Thrills Lacking

Best Comedy of Week on Glamorless Calendar, 'Seen but Not Heard.'

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—The theater season opened last week with what might be described as a modified rush. There were a half dozen new attractions and a couple of revivals, but none of them added excitement to the situation nor glamor to the scene.

[1] A comedy in which three precocious children uncover a murder that was justified and keep it secret. [2] A comedy in which three writing men exist amusingly on their wit, achieving financially promising marriages for two of them and an affair of convenience for the third. [3] A melodrama, a quite terrible melodrama, in which an unfortunate young woman is arrested for the death of a man who had abused her mother and is obliged to confess herself his illegitimate daughter in the end. [4] A melodrama in which a husband plans his own suicide so the circumstantial evidence surrounding his death will convict his wife and her lover of his murder. [5] A new edition of last season's "Follies." [6] A revival of the Gilbert-Sullivan "Yeomen of the Guard." [7] A production of a somewhat primitive Russian farce. These all added some life to the theater sector.

Play About Little-Pitchers-Have-Big-Ears Type of Kids.

The best comedy of the week is the one called "Seen But Not Heard." Mostly about children, the little-pitchers-have-big-ears type of children, it is rather interesting in idea, but pretty labored in the playing and obvious in the stage arrangement, which isn't the children's fault.

It was not so many years ago that the only presence on a stage more distressing than that of a stage child was that of a stage horse. You were never quite sure what either was going to do. Stage children have improved vastly. I'm still running away from the horses.

In "Seen but Not Heard," the children are three, Duke who is 15, Elizabeth, 13, and Tommy, 10. They have been brought at Christmas time with the rest of the Winthrop clan, to the funeral of a favorite aunt, killed in an automobile accident.

The children, being sharp-eyed and intuitive, come first to suspect the dead aunt's husband of having had something to do with the accident which killed her. He had, as the audience knows, loosened a nut on the wheel that came off the aunt's car. Then, when the uncle is found mysteriously dead with a wound in his temple, the kids believe they can fasten that crime on an unpopular butler.

They lay their plans and are just ready to explode their charge when they discover that their evidence will most surely convict not the butler, but another uncle who is their favorite. Their determination to keep their secret and outwit the sherif provide one hysterical and amusing scene at the play's end.

Frankie Thomas Gives Deft, Intelligent Performance.

Young Frankie Thomas, who scored a major success three years ago in "Wednesday's Child," being 12 at the time, and repeated that success twice later, as the crippled boy in "The First Legion," and as the young man afflicted with an attack of puppy love in "Remember the Day," is the 15 year old in "Seen but Not Heard." His chances are not so good in this one, but his performance is deft and intelligent.

Anne Baxter, 13, and Raymond Roe, 10, abet him skilfully. The adults in the cast, though they include Paul McGrath, John Winthrop, Ralph Theodore, Boyd Davis, and a half dozen others, matter little. . . .

We really began the season early in the week when one Bobby Clark chased the frayed end of a cigar butt he was smoking onto the stage of the Winter Garden. This marked the renewal of the run of the "Ziegfeld Follies," which had been interrupted last summer. In personnel it is a new "Follies," however, though much of the material remains unchanged. Fannie Brice is still the leading comedienne, free now of the arthritis that laid her low some months back, and funnier, though Fannie is not one to let a little arthritis interfere with her performance.

Josephine Baker, the colored idol of Paris, France, is no longer with the troupe. Neither is Hugh O'Connell, Herb Williams, or Harriet Hoctor, the best of American ballerinas. In their place we have the above mentioned Señor Clark, Jane Pickens of the Pickens Sisters and, of all people, Gypsy Rose Lee. You probably do not know about Gypsy.

New "Follies" Star Formerly with Minsky's Burlesque.

In these parts for some seasons she literally has been the uncovered sensation of Minsky burlesque, the queen of what is known to her branch of the profession as the strip-tease act.

Gypsy, as it happens, is quite at home on Broadway, and at home in the "Follies," which represents burlesque of a dressier class. She is tall, dignified, shapely, of course, and quite seriously devoted to her job. She takes part in most of the sketches, reading lines uncommonly well. Her chief song is one explaining what it is the strip-tease lady thinks of while she is divesting herself, piece by piece, of all her coverings. You may think she lowers a shoulder strap to thoughts of George Bernard Shaw, or rolls down a stocking while in communion with the theories of Prof. Einstein, in which case, Miss Lee assures you in song, you're wrong. But, do you think it is sex that is uppermost in her mind? If you do, you're right. It is. Thanks to Mr. Clark, Miss Pickens and, yes, Miss Lee, the new edition of the "Follies" is better than the first.

The night after the "Follies" was reëstablished we had the new comedy called "The Golden Journey," written by Edwin Gilbert, presented for our approval. It was only partly successful, being bright of line, lively of action, and well played, but pretty dull and familiar as to story and really not worth the tarif or the time.

Play Describes Adventures of Impoverished Writers.

The idea here engaged was that three impoverished young writing men, a novelist, a playwright and a poet, were living rather handsomely on the east side of New York, largely on epigrams and dates. The epigrams they self-consciously fed each other, and the dates were mostly with infatuated females. The playwright had a play produced because his girl put up half the cost, and the novelist had a manuscript accepted because he was willing to tolerate the attentions of a publisher's amorous wife.

The play was a failure, though the girl who produced it was a hit in the leading part, and the novel was a plagiarism from the French. Mr. Gilbert managed a pleasant ending of sorts by having his novelist discovered to be the literary heir of the Frenchman from which he had stolen his story, and by marrying the playwright to his bankroll lady. This left the poet free to court the publisher's wife.

Alan Bunce and Leona Powers are chiefly concerned with the playing, they being assisted by Alan Hewitt and Hugh Rennie, as well as a couple of fledgling ingenues named Eleanor Lynn and Joan Tompkins. . . .

The first melodrama was called "Arrest That Woman," written by Maxine Alton and produced by A. H. Woods. I can forgive Miss Alton because this probably is a first play. But it isn't easy to understand that old master of melodrama, who is Woods, lending his indorsement to so hackneyed a piece. Attendez:

The heroine is Marie, who has quit prostitution for modeling because she hopes to marry Tom, an honest boy. Tom steals $1,000 to help his poor old mother through an illness. Marie, to get the thousand and keep Tom out of jail, threatens to bring scandal on the name of a Supreme court judge who is her father, though never married to her mother. In a struggle for a gun, the judge is killed, Marie arrested, and the case turned over to whom do you think?—the judge's son and Marie's half brother! Learning the truth, the half brother resigns as an assistant district attorney and takes the case for the defense. Confessions and belated explanations follow.

Theodore Kremer and Owen Davis were writing this sort of thing for Mr. Woods thirty years ago. Since then the pictures have served to supply the demand for them. Doris Nolan plays the lead and two cinema actors, Hugh Marlowe and Gertrude Short, were imported for other parts. Marlowe playing opposite Miss Nolan, and Miss Short doing a toughie.

IN WELL-LIKED FILM

This town seems to be going for "Romeo and Juliet" in a big way! The picture is now starting its fifth week at the Erlanger. And here's a charming picture of Juliet (Miss Norma Shearer) for your albums.

GOOD Morning!

Sophie Lang, the notorious, the beautiful jewel thief, is dead! [At least, in an English cemetery, there is a brand new grave with a headstone that attests to that fact.]

As this picture opens, a slim and lovely veiled lady stands thoughtfully contemplating the grave.

Comes a hurried and handsome young gentleman in a taxi to deposit flowers on same.

"You knew Sophie Lang?" the lady asks, softly.

It develops that the newcomer, a foreign newspaper correspondent for a New York daily, while not acquainted with the defunct, had entertained much respect for her prowess. So naughty, but O, so smart . . .!

She Is None Other than Sophie Lang . . . Reformed.

"You're telling ME!" the questioner might have replied to this. Only, she doesn't. She is, of course, Sophie Lang. Reformed!

Read on . . .!

It is some days later. Aboard a great ship, about to ply its way across the ocean, comes a jittery old lady, Araminta Sedley, and her attentive paid companion—Sophie Lang—under a different name. . . . Also, very much there, is a suave, middle-aged man who causes Sophie's heart to go kerplunk the minute she spies him. For she had known him well in the past she is trying so hard to forget. Maximilian Bernard, passionate lover and purloiner of sparkling gems that are not his own—and she realizes that he is after the Kruger diamond which is Miss Sedley's prize stone in a justly famous collection. . . .

Maxie Recognizes Sophie in Spite of the Disguise.

Maxie, of course, recognizes Sophie. . . . I refer you to the picture for further information regarding an exciting mixup of thieves, cops, a doughty old woman who stands by a girl who has confessed all to her, the girl—who uses Sophie Lang's brain and ingenuity to confound the enemy, and the valiant newspaper man who, of course, has fallen for Sophie like the proverbial ton of brick. . . .

This movie is good fun and excellently acted. Though I will say I feel certain I'd have detected the masquerading Sophie under her respective disguises of reporter and Miss Araminta. Just the same, Gertrude Michael's charm and ability keep you liking her so much you're fatuously pleased to see her get away with what she does get away with.

Ray Millard plays with pep. Elizabeth Patterson, always the clever trouper, is a peach as Araminta, and Sir Guy Standing contributes a distinguished performance as Bernard. Bit rôles were excellently cast and the direction pleases.

You're certainly glad Sophie DID return. Because she's far too fascinating a femme to be a dead one!

See you tomorrow!

"RETURN OF SOPHIE LANG"

This effective photograph of Gertrude Michael blew in with the announcement of her appearance in a new film at the State-Lake. The movie is called "The Return of Sophie Lang." Miss Michael has the title role.

Savoyard Drama.

Hassard Short will produce a play by Cosmo Hamilton called "Gilbert Meets Sullivan," and in it the famous operetta partners and other prominent Victorians of their time will be impersonated. Kenneth Kent, who played Napoleon in the London company of "St. Helena," and Edwin Styles may be imported for the title rôles. Boston will see the tryout in mid-November.

Guild's Schedule.

It is likely that "Prelude to Exile" will be the second play on the Theater Guild's New York schedule to be staged just after "And Stars Remain" and just before "Jane Eyre." Evelyn Varden is mentioned for the leading rôle, opposite Wilfrid Lawson.

Latest Record Sets Feature Classic Gems

'Rosenkavalier' Waltzes and 'Pines of Rome' Among New Releases.

HERE are a few notes on some of the recent Victor recordings which have not yet been touched upon in these columns.

The Paris Conservatory orchestra, under Piero Coppolo, presents the Respighi "Pines of Rome" on the four sides of a two record set. Those who cherish the great Italian composer most for his delicately poetic, almost Debussyesque qualities, will derive a large amount of satisfaction from the new release. The playing is sensitive and skilled, and truly brilliant when the script calls for such an effect. There is an added world interest in Respighi at present because of his recent death. It now is possible to consider his works as a whole, and to speculate upon the place which he eventually will occupy in the hierarchy of music.

Eugene Ormandy and the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra are jointly responsible for a delectable performance of the "Rosenkavalier" waltzes which take up three sides of another two record set. The fourth is devoted to an unfamiliar tidbit by Carl Stix called "Spielerei." The Ormandy strings sing the yerning, nostalgic "Rosenkavalier" tunes in a most satisfactory manner. Meters have that easy freedom and flexibility which this emotional music demands. The finished product, as a result, preserves the half sad, half glad humanness of the great Strauss opera.

Claude Lapham, an occidental who has made himself an authority on Japanese music, and who has done considerable pioneering in the work of adapting some of its characteristics to western art, plays the solo instrument in a Victor pressing of his own Japanese concerto for piano and orchestra. The work was written in Tokio in 1935. This music can be readily enjoyed even by a person with no interest in Japanese music as such, for neither the themes nor their treatment are terrifyingly exotic. Japanese atmosphere pervades the piece, such devices as the use of woodblocks add to it, but there is nothing which sounds completely foreign and unintelligible.

Those concertgoers who feel that they could never hear enough of the Dvorak Slavonic dances in a single evening can now obtain in the Musical Masterpiece series an album containing all eight of these exciting and wayward tunes. The orchestra is the Czech Philharmonic, conducted by Vaclav Talich.

Lillie's Next Show.

Lillian Ellis, young Danish actress, has come to New York for her American debut in the new Beatrice Lillie-Bert Lahr show "The Show Is On." Gracie Barrie and Paul Haakon are also in the cast.

Lawrence Tibbett Starts 'Stage Arts' Concerts on Oct. 15

A New Work by Stravinsky in Prospect

New Music Association to Give Nine Concerts for Chicago Season.

A FEATURE of the Stage Arts association's plans for the music season will be a concert of modern Russian composers, including the first performance in Chicago of Stravinsky's "Persephone," also "Les Noces," and excerpts from the Russian opera, "Lady Macbeth of Mzensk." Eva Gauthier will appear in the rôle of the narrator in "Persephone." This concert will be the ninth in the series.

Lawrence Tibbett, opera baritone, radio and motion picture star, will appear at Orchestra hall on Oct. 16 as the first of the artists sponsored by the association. Others who will be heard are Rosa Ponselle, returning to Chicago after an absence of six years, on Oct. 30; the Cleveland orchestra in its first Chicago concert with Artur Rodzinski conducting; José Iturbi, pianist; the new Viennese contralto, Enid Szanto; the English Singers in a Christmas program; George Barrere and the Barrere Little symphony in a French program, and Uday Shan-Kar and his company in a program of the music and dances of India.

The fall opening of the federal music project's Illinois Symphony orchestra, originally scheduled for the Blackstone theater for Oct. 4, will take place on Sunday, Oct. 11, with Dr. Nikolai Sokoloff, former conductor of the Cleveland Symphony orchestra, in the rôle of guest conductor. Rudolph Ganz, Chicago composer, conductor, and pianist, who was announced to conduct the opening concert, will lead on Oct. 18. Rudolph Reuter, president of the Society of American Musicians, will appear in the rôle of piano soloist in the Ganz concert.

The box office sale for the Chicago engagement of the San Carlo Opera company, which is to be of three weeks' duration, opens tomorrow morning. The first week's répertoire consists of nine of the company's tried-and-true favorites and has been arranged to bring forward in succession, from night to night, the principals already well known to Chicago operagoers, and three additions to the company assigned to important duties in five of the operas. Charlotte Symons, Chicago soprano borrowed from the Metropolitan for the San Carlo fall season, is to sing Marguerite in "Faust" and Nedda in "I Pagliacci" in the opening week. The engagement at the Auditorium theater will begin on Oct. 5.

Harry Hamilton and Wana Williams, two young dancers, will be seen in a program of original dance compositions assisted by Kathleen Elles at the piano in the Goodman theater, Sunday afternoon, Oct. 4, under the direction of Bertha Ott. Hamilton is a graduate of the Evanston Township High school.

Harriet Eells, American mezzo-soprano who formerly sang leading rôles with the American Opera company, but who more recently has been acting on Broadway, will give a Studebaker theater recital on Sunday afternoon, Oct. 25, under the direction of Bertha Ott.

Mercado's Tipica Mexican orchestra will appear in Orchestra hall on Sunday afternoon, Oct. 18, at 3:30, under the management of Bertha Ott. Native Mexican instruments provide much of the flavor of the orchestra. Probably the most unusual of these is the "salterio" which resembles the zither. As soloists the orchestra will present Señorita Lolita Valdez, soprano; Señorita Sarita, salterist, and Viniegra and Del Monte, dancers.

The Apollo Musical club of Chicago plans to give three concerts this season. The first will be Handel's "Messiah," to be sung on Dec. 28, in Orchestra hall. The second concert, on Feb. 16, will be George Schumann's "Ruth." The third will be the "Children's Crusade" of Pierné, on April 20.

Julius Huehn, basso, will return to the Chicago City Opera company for the rôle of the giant in Louis Gruenberg's opera, "Jack and the Beanstalk," which will be sung in English. This will be its first professional performance. The Julliard Players presented the opera in New York recently. . . . Maria Claessens will return after an absence of five years to sing the rôle of the mother in "Louise," with Helen Jepson and Joseph Bentonelli in the major rôles.

A subscription program of 11 performances, a series of three popular Saturday nights, and two repeat performances will form the 1936 season of the San Francisco Opera association. The performances will begin on Friday, Oct. 30, and end on Sunday afternoon, Nov. 22.

Gaetano Merola, Richard Lert, Gennaro Papi, Fritz Reiner, and Karl Riedel will be the conductors. Armando Agnini and Adolph Bolm will be stage director and ballet master, respectively.

Plays at Goodman.

The sixth season of "members' plays" at the Goodman theater of the Art Institute will open Monday, Oct. 5. The first play will be "The Late Christopher Bean."

SAN CARLO OPERA PRIMA DONNA

Play About Poe

ARTHUR HOPKINS is ready to stage Sophie Treadwell's play about Edgar Allan Poe with Henry Hull in the leading rôle. It is slated to arrive on Broadway in the week of Nov. 9. Miss Treadwell's work was first called "Nepenthe," but its title may be changed to "Plumes in the Dust." Richmond, Va., where the poet spent his childhood days, will see the play on Oct. 23.

"Green Pastures" Sextet.

The "Green Pastures" sextet, from the company which acted Marc Connelly's Negro folk drama, will sing at the Metropolitan theater on Saturday, Oct. 3, in connection with the showing of the film version of that play. This event will be in observance of Richard Harrison day, in memory of the original actor of the rôle of "De Lawd." There are four women and two men in the sextet, which is directed by Ben Travis and has made frequent appearances on the concert stage.

New Sessions Work to Have Eastern Debut

Albert Spalding is studying a newly completed violin concerto by Roger Sessions, American composer, which he is to perform this season with the Boston Symphony orchestra. Other highlights of the famous eastern organization's fifty-sixth year will be solo appearances by Myra Hess [the Schumann concerto], and Jascha Heifetz [the Beethoven], presentations of the Bruckner Eighth and of Mahler's "Das Lied von der Erde," with Ranzow and Althouse as soloists, and an American première of a Shaporin symphony which attracted considerable attention abroad. Serge Koussevitzky will serve the Boston orchestra as conductor for the thirteenth season.

Georges Enesco, Rumanian composer, conductor, and violinist, will make a ten weeks' tour of America this winter. He is to conduct the New York Philharmonic orchestra for two weeks, appear as guest director and soloist with the Detroit, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Montreal, and Toronto orchestra, give several recitals, and wind up his season in Town hall, New York, March 13.

One of the cleverest ideas of 1936 must be credited to Fritz Rotshchild of the Rothschild String quartet. He decided that a great many violinists, violaists, and cellists might want to practice ensemble playing at home, and that recordings of chamber music works with one instrument missing would be a considerable boon to them.

Accordingly, he recorded the Beethoven G major quartet [Opus 18, No. 2] four times. In one version the first violin is missing, in another the second. The third drops the viola and the fourth the cello. Thus, whichever instrument a man plays, there is a recording of the work which offers him the opportunity of taking a vital part in a performance with thoroughly routined musicians.

The Linguaphone institute, which has made the pressings, supplies the music for the missing instrument, carefully cued and fingered. The records sound a clear A for tuning and a time signal to set the pace.

Schubert's A minor quartet is available with second violin missing. The Brahms in the same key omits viola. Beethoven's F major quartet [Opus 59, No. 1] and two minuets of Mozart and Haydn drop cello. The slow movement of the Brahms F minor quintet has been recorded without piano.

Horace Kiser, the Chicago entrepreneur who was active in the formation of the Mary Garden master classes here last year, has arranged an autumn tour for the Garden Scholarship quartet. It consists of Louisa Hoe, Elizabeth Brown, Robert Long, and Will Blailock. They are going to several midwestern and southern cities to present fragments and scenes from operas in which Miss Garden coached and directed them.

These are the four young singers who were selected by exacting judges from among the scores who tried for the scholarships. They have had the benefit of intensive training under Miss Garden herself.

Paul Longone, manager of the Chicago City Opera company, returned from a summer in Europe with a pessimistic report on the future possibilities of that continent as a source of supply for American opera houses. He believes that this country has more talent than Europe, but admits that a young artist's opportunities for experience and thorough routining are still much better there than here. The reason is the large number of small, second rate opera companies in moderate sized towns, companies which are admirably adapted for their function as feeders to the great metropolitan centers.

The discovery of seventeen first editions of works by Beethoven, with corrections and marginal notes in the composer's own handwriting, was reported recently from Budapest. The find was made by a Hungarian collector in a second hand book shop. The unsuspecting dealer who sold the music wished to erase the scribbled notes to make the copies more presentable. He was dissuaded from doing so only with difficulty.

Film Epic Has Distinguished British Cast

"Lloyds of London" to Be Historical Drama of Admiral Nelson's Time.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—On stage 14, past a door which bore a placard: "Only subscribers admitted," we walked into an austerely furnished, big, gloomy room where ten men were seated on green lether high backed oak chairs around a long, massive table. They were the ten directors of a historic British organization and were assembled so that Film Director Henry King could shoot a picture of their periwigged dismay when a messenger burst in to tell them of the death of Admiral Lord Nelson in one of the big scenes of Twentieth Century-Fox's current epic of history and adventure; "Lloyds of London."

This picture, which is being filmed with an almost all British cast, is expected by Hollywood to equal such recent successes as "Cavalcade," "Lives of a Bengal Lancer," "Mutiny on the Bounty," and "Charge of the Light Brigade."

Nelson's Death in Historical Battle Is Highlight of Film.

It will include the battle of Trafalgar and Nelson's death there, and shots of other sea battles and marine adventure. In the background will always be the sweep of the rollers and the moaning of the bar as the recital of disaster and heroism at sea enters the records in the musty rooms of the 18th century coffee shop which became Lloyd's ship insurance brokerage office.

Sir Guy Standing, wearing a wig whiter than his own well kept hair and with his mustache shaved off, was Sir John Julius Angerstein, at the head of the long table of solemn directors. Sir Guy played this scene in a knee pants suit of violet colored moiré silk. There were ruffles at his sleeves and throat, and he wore a bow tie of white satin. A huge marble fireplace was in the background and a great framed chart hung from the wall above the fireplace. The wooden frame around the chart was three inches wide. Other large framed pictures of British admirals, long since dead, looked down in musty splendor from the walls of the directors' room.

"The room is authentic, we believe," said Mr. Blake Owen-Smith, technical adviser on the picture. He pointed to a large red and black model of a three masted schooner standing in a case at the side of the room. There was no name on the ship's stern and the technical adviser admitted: "That is atmosphere."

Well Known English Actors Assembled for British Epic.

Among the cast of British players whom Director King has assembled to lend an air of authenticity to "Lloyds of London" are the following, all well known, and almost all of them middle aged and steeped in the lore and patriotism of England:

C. Aubrey Smith as marquis of Queensberry; Joseph M. Kerrigan as Watson, Angerstein's partner; Lumsden Hare as Capt. Suckling of his majesty's navy; Montague Love as a drunken seaman, who tries to pirate his own sloop; Freddie Bartholomew and Douglas Scott as children of seafaring families [Scott plays the 10 year old Horatio Nelson], Will Stanton, Keith Kenneth, Murray Kinnell, Forrester Harvey, Wilfred Lawson, Miles Mander, Charles McNaughton, Leonard Mudie, Charles Coleman, Gavin Muir, Arthur Hohl, Reginald Barlow, and Virginia Field. The latter is a daughter of a London barrister and not yet out of he teens. She was imported for on of the romantic leads with Tyrone Power Jr. Power is among the few Americans in the cast.

Joe Kerrigan Plays Role of One Legged Man in Picture.

Joe Kerrigan plays the rôle of a one legged man in the film. To do this he has to have his real leg doubled up and tightly strapped. Because of the acute discomfort Kerrigan suffers, Director King decreed that Kerrigan's stand-in should not have to go through the same grief, and one legged Jack Teitlebaum was procured to serve as Kerrigan's stand-in. Kerrigan plays the crier who pulls the bell at Lloyds to serve notice of the sinking of a ship. Inbetween shots of scenes in the directors' room hammering could be heard in a side room. We peeked in and saw a workman busy attaching bronze heraldic emblems to the walls of a castle banquet room which was being prepared for a later sequence.

The screen play is by Ernest Pascal, from Curtis Kenyon's story, and it is being shot from a script of 194 pages, which is more than double the number of pages in the ordinary film script. This does not necessarily mean a long picture, but it does mean that a lot of action and considerable description is included in the script so that the doings and dialog of the players will be historically correct.

Of more than ordinary interest is the fact that the picture itself has been insured by Lloyds of London for $1,000,000, although the budget of expenses allotted to it exceeds this sum. The policy covers against delays in production which always are quite expensive to a studio, and against accident, or illness of any principals in the cast.

Similar Policy Was Written on "Mutiny on the Bounty."

A similar policy was written on "Mutiny on the Bounty," insuring that expensive but now highly profitable movie "epic" for property damage, liability, compensation, etc., during the Tahiti Island scenes. All Lloyds had to pay out on that policy, it is said here, was $129, so it will be seen how the famous English insurance combination continues to make money.

It also was learned that Lloyds at present is paying off on one Hollywood policy that did not turn out favorably to the insurers. This is on the cessation of film shooting on "Ladies in Love," necessitated by Constance Bennett's illness. Prior to this the London brokers paid off part of Film Producer John Hay [Jock] Whitney's loss on the all color picture, "Becky Sharpe." That payoff was for the money lost during the time the feminine star, Miriam Hopkins, was sick with laryngitis.

Incidentally, Shirley Temple, who is the main money making star of the studio where "Lloyds of London" is being shot, is insured by that studio with the company named in the film title. Shirley's insurance is a blanket accident and health policy which covers kidnaping and "everything except war, insurrection, or injury due to intoxication."

O, yes, and one learns from the local Lloyds' office that Lloyds has insured Joan Crawford's dachshund and Jean Harlow's St. Bernard.

Dionne Quintuplets Have Many Constructive Toys.

Constructive toys predominate on the shelves of the Dionne quintuplets' nursery at Callander, Ont., according to the word brought back by Jean Hersholt and Dorothy Peterson of the "Reunion" cast. Cecile Dionne and her four sisters have dolls and Teddy bears and stuffed animals, but for the most part they play with blocks, rings that fit together, sand pails, and shovels, and other objects designed to develop their 2 year old minds.

The Twentieth Century-Fox film took more than $1,500 worth of toys to Callander from Hollywood to be used during the filming of "Reunion," which is the quints' second starring picture. These were brought forth, a few each day, for the purpose of gaining the babies' interest. They were left at the nursery when the unit returned to California.

Norman Taurog, director of "Reunion," said that a little stuffed tiger with a concealed noise making apparatus seemeed the favorite toy.

Charles Bickford is scheduled to leave for England to play Terence Mulvaney in "Soldiers Three" as soon as he finishes his rôle in "The Plainsman" with De Mille.

"THE CRIME OF DR. FORBES"

Lovely Gloria Stewart has a leading role in "The Crime of Dr. Forbes," which is unreeling at the Oriental. Prominent in the cast are Robert Kent, Henry Armetta, J. Edward Bromberg, and Sara Haden.

ACTS IN "DEAD END" DRAMA

VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

Letters published in this department should be written on one side of the paper. If you wish a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Jean Harlow Fan Gives Mae a Brief Lecture.

Dear Miss Tinée: Why is it, no matter in which picture Jean Harlow plays, you give her a bum writeup? What's the matter? Didn't she smile to you at one time, or is it that she's not Irish?

The only stars you give a good writeup are Myrna Loy, Pat O'Brien, and James Cagney, etc.

Why don't you snap out of it? After all, you really are not as smart as you think you are.

A READER.

P. S.: Maybe you don't like blondes.

Editor's Note: Maybe you don't like me.

Similarity in Names Is Problem for This Reader.

Dear Mae Tinée: Is Rex Ingram, De Lawd of "Green Pastures," the husband of Alice Terry and is it true that he renounced the Christian religion for Mohammedanism? Please tell me something about him in your Sunday column.

Sincerely,

ADRIENNE MACK.

Editor's Note: No, De Lawd is a Negro actor, son of a fireman on the Mississippi river boat Robert E. Lee. Director Rex Ingram now is living in retirement at his villa in Nice.

Violin Recital

Dr. Erich Sorantin, Viennese violinist and conductor-composer, now of Chicago, will make his season's debut at the Beaux Arts salon this afternoon at 4 o'clock at 180 East Delaware place. Morris Gest Brings Chinese Drama to Chicago Stage

'Lady Precious Stream' Ready for Premiere

Theater Society Starts Season with Folk Play in Oriental Style.

By Charles Collins.

CHICAGO'S firstnighters of the American Theater society's subscription list have a date for tomorrow evening with "Lady Precious Stream," at the Harris. They are not well informed on this subject, however, because this play was not staged by the New York Theater Guild, in whose works they specialize, but by Morris Gest, who has been in retirement for several years after long service as an importer de luxe of European dramatic novelties. A little lecture on "Lady Precious Stream", in advance of its opening, is therefore in order.

This is a pice of chinoiserie which will recall Mei-Lan-Fang to some and "The Yellow Jacket" to others. In other words, it is a specimen of drama from China, with all the well known characteristics of its genre—make-believe stage effects, pantomime to suggest violent physical action, invisible doors, imaginary horses, unseen combats, and all sorts of bland and childlike didoes. The Chinese drama is an art of suggestion rather than realization, and is famous for its charm.

Ancient China Provides a Novelty.

It will stagger the typical American playgoer, always demanding the latest example of the newest vogue, to know that "Lady Precious Stream" is two thousand years old or more. However, the play is a fashion in London at the moment, and last season it was much in style in New York. These facts may persuade Chicago's modernists to forgive its high antiquity.

Nothing is known about the original inventor of the tale; it is woven into the fabric of Chinese folk lore. But it has been kept in performance in China, in many different versions, from the dawn of civilization down into our own times. It was old when a young Venetian named Marco Polo visited the land of Cathay with his uncles and became a favorite of the Great Khan, returning to tell tales that backward Europe refused to believe.

Dr. S. I. Hsiung, a learned Chinese playwright and theatrical manager of the present, prepared a composite of several versions of the Lady Precious Stream legend, and then made a translation from Chinese into English. He took his manuscript to London, where it was staged as an experiment and proved to be a hit of commercial importance. Morris Gest saw it there, loved it, and imported it to New York, which repeated the London verdict.

Old Fable of Princess and Commoner.

The story follows the Patient Griselda pattern. Precious Stream, high born lady and daughter of a prime minister, marries a poor but gifted gardener against her father's wishes. She is disinherited, of course, and they go to live as humble peasants, with only a cave to shelter them.

Fortune at last smiles upon the gardener husband. He goes to the wars, spends eighteen years on the western front, and becomes king of a remote province. He is about to marry a princess when he receives a letter from his long lost Precious Stream, stating that she is still in their cave and faithfully awaiting his return. So he sends for the little lady and makes her his queen.

This simple outline probably does "Lady Precious Stream" an injustice, for the play is said to contain cleverly drawn characters and to be rich in engaging and humorous touches of the Chinese philosophy of life. Constance Carpenter and Clarence Derwent will appear as the lovers. The former comes from the cast of the London production.

Jury service in "The Night of Jan. 16" will probably be a favorite Chicago diversion for several months. This play's première at the Selwyn theater last Sunday night contained ample evidence of a long run hit. It is an extremely diverting gadget of the drama, acted with skill and full of topics for gossips to chatter about. Although apparently in earnest, with none of the madhouse tricks of the mystery play school, it rounds into its third act as a puzzler whose secret is never completely revealed. Thus it provides a new and unorthodox formula for success in dramatic frame-ups, to wit: "Send 'em home guessing and making bets."

Novelty in café entertainment will be seen in the performance of Ruth Aarons and Sandor Glancz, world's table tennis champions. They will appear in the 10 o'clock show only.

Georges and Jalna, dance duo; Lester Cole and his Eight Midshipmen, a singing octet; Dale Winthrop, tap dancer; Paul Rosini, a magician, and the Abbott Dancers complete the bill.

● Joe Sanders and his Nighthawks will leave the Blackhawk next Wednesday, to be succeeded by Louis Prima and his orchestra for a limited engagement. This will be Prima's first Chicago appearance. He features Velma Raye, vocalist, and the instrumental "New Orleans Five."

● Xavier Cugat and his Spanish-American musicians have been engaged to return to the Continental room of the Stevens hotel on Friday evening, Oct. 2. Cugat again will feature his Mexican songstress, Carmen Castillo, and Charita Ortega and Milongo, Cuban singers.

The room will be redecorated, and the new fall review will contain Leon and Marcia Mace, dancers, and Serge Tekar, Viennese tenor. The dancers are appearing together for their third season. Tekar came to this country for an engagement at the Rainbow room in Rockefeller Center. This will be his first appearance in Chicago.

● The new autumn revue at Chez Paree co-stars a trio of well known performers—Jimmy Savo, pantomimic comedian; Georges Metaxa, operetta singer; and Niela Goodelle, "blues" singer of radio, stage and screen. This is Savo's first café appearance in Chicago. On the supporting bill are the Stuart Morgan dancers, an adagio foursome; the Readinger Twins, dancers; and Betty Bruce, tap dancer. Henry Busse and his orchestra play for both the show and for dancing.

● Rudy Baie, master of ceremonies and singer, has been added to the present Terrace room show. Since leaving the Terrace room last spring, he has appeared at the Chez Maurice, Dallas; and the Park Plaza hotel, St. Louis.

● The date of the formal opening of the Gold Coast room has been advanced to Friday, Oct. 9, instead of Saturday. There will be two formal parties, Friday and Saturday, for the patrons of the Drake to welcome the return of Pat O'Malley, star of the Jack Hylton revue last season. A new collegiate organization will provide the music.

Yankees Turn Attention to New Crops

By DR. THOMAS M. BECK

AMERICAN agriculture has never been static. From the time of the first settlements at Jamestown and Santa Fe farmers have constantly been experimenting with new crops grown from plants imported from abroad. Some of these efforts to adapt products of foreign origin to American soil have turned out quite well, particularly in the cases of wheat and cotton. On the other hand, there also are a number of failures recorded; for instance, the attempt about a hundred years ago to establish silkworm culture, and the later effort to introduce the camel as a beast of burden.

Since the World war we have seen the phenomenal growth of the cultivation of the soy bean, which was brought to this country from the far east. This can scarcely be called a new agricultural product, and, moreover, it has been discussed in more detail in a previous article. It is worth mentioning, however, that its value to the farmer may in time be equaled by its importance to the manufacturer because of the wide variety of applications that can be made of its products. At the present time the most important of these products is the oil that is extracted from the beans.

Purified soy bean oil has properties which lie about midway between those of linseed and cottonseed oils. It is therefore in a position to compete, at least to a limited degree, with either of them. With suitable refining it can be used as a food or for soap making. It also can replace considerable amounts of the more expensive linseed oil in the paint and varnish fields.

The value of linseed oil lies in the fact that it is a drying oil; that is, it is capable of absorbing oxygen from the air to change from a liquid to a tough, elastic solid. Soy bean oil, on the other hand, is what is known as a semi-drying oil. It absorbs oxygen to form a resinous material, but when used alone it never becomes completely solid. Paints made from it always will remain sticky. Its value in the paint industry lies solely in its use when blended with other materials such as linseed oil or certain synthetic resins. It is not an adulterant when mixed with linseed oil, as it produces useful modifications in the action of the latter.

The quest for oils for paint and varnish has suggested two new crops for American agriculture. As stated above, linseed oil is a drying oil, and a very good one. Nevertheless it is not the best available.

Corn crop ruined by drouth and grasshoppers. More attention is being paid in this country to the cultivation of plants from which insecticides are prepared. (Associated Press photo.)

That honor goes to perilla oil, which is pressed from the seeds of a small plant grown in Manchukuo and China. Perilla oil is a little too pronounced in its drying properties to be used alone, but when blended with soy bean oil it makes an effective competitor for linseed oil.

Pyrethrum yields a poison much used in the fight against insects.

The tremendous increase in soy bean production has led to heavy imports of perilla oil from Japan during the last year or so. As a result experiments are being made to determine whether or not these seeds can be profitably grown on American soil. It is yet too early to learn anything conclusive from this work, but the results seem to indicate the possibility of growing the plant. It appears that the best growing conditions are found in certain southern states, particularly Georgia.

In this connection mention should be made of a similar product, tung oil, or chinawood oil. This is a thick oil, rather unpleasant in both smell and physiological action. As its name suggests, it is pressed from the nut of a tree that has been cultivated in China for 2,000 years. Tung oil dries at about the same rate as linseed oil to form a tough and highly resistant film. It long has been the basis of the celebrated Chinese lackers and during the last decade has been finding ever-increasing use in high-grade American paints and varnishes. In addition it has, when heated, the unusual property of setting to a gelatinous mass which cools to a rubberlike solid. Because of this it is finding additional uses as an ingredient for plastics.

Some years ago an attempt was made to introduce the cultivation of the tung tree to this country. Florida seems to have the best soil and climate for growing it. The experiment has been a slow one, as it takes about six years from the time of planting for a tree to reach a profitable maturity, and it has been only during the last year that appreciable amounts of American tung oil have reached the market. However, the experiment appears to be a definite success. The American oil, produced by methods far superior to the primitive ones of the Chinese, is a better product.

The paint and varnish manufacturers recently have become quite interested in a product resembling tung oil and known as oiticica oil. This is obtained by pressing the fruit of a tree that grows wild in tropical Brazil. In appearance the material is a semi-solid, buttery fat at ordinary temperatures. In its drying properties it resembles tung oil to a marked degree. At the present time there have been no attempts to grow this tree in the United States, but such experiments without doubt will be tried.

Another agricultural product that is attracting considerable attention is the Jerusalem artichoke. The name is not aptly chosen, as it is not an artichoke, but a plant related to the sunflower. Moreover, it has nothing to do with the Holy City, for it probably originated in this country and is now cultivated chiefly in Europe.

Mirrorlike finishes for automobiles are made from soy bean and other drying oils.

Its economic value lies in the fact that its roots store up food in the form of tubers resembling sweet potatoes. These tubers contain large amounts of a sugar known as levulose, which is chemically different from cane and beet sugar but is equally nutritious and is about 50 per cent sweeter. Its chief fault is the fact that it is considerably more difficult to refine. The material can now be prepared commercially, but at a price that prevents direct competition with other sugars. However, it may find a limited use, because of its greater sweetness, as a constituent of diets for those whose sugar intake must be limited.

In recent years there has been a phenomenal growth in the cultivation of the soy bean, from which food products and valuable oils are made. (Tribune photo.)

Jerusalem artichokes probably are more important as a potential source of industrial alcohol. For this purpose the sugar can be fermented without previous refining. The plant grows with the vigor of a weed and can be successfully cultivated almost anywhere in the middle west.

Efforts are being made in this country to cultivate pyrethrum flowers, one of the munitions in the war against insects. The best way of fighting insect pests is by means of poison. There are two kinds. One kills the insect that eats it. Poisons of this type have the defect of being equally poisonous to men and animals and consequently must be removed at considerable cost before the plant can be used for any human purposes.

The other type of insecticide is the so-called contact poison. It is not quite clear how poisons of this type attack insects, but their effect is to produce death through paralysis of the central nervous system. The nicotine or tobacco dusts long used by florists are examples of this type of poison. So are the household sprays that are used against flies and mosquitoes. Contact poisons are in general much less poisonous to men and the higher animals than they are to insects.

The principal contact poisons are of vegetable origin and, with the exception of the tobacco products mentioned above, are all imported. The materials used in most of the fly sprays, rotenone and extracts of derris root or cube root (this last is not a mathematical term; "cube" is pronounced "koobay"), are produced in tropical climates and are consequently of little promise as possible American crops.

Pyrethrum flowers, on the other hand, show promise as a future addition to our agricultural wealth. They are the dried and powdered flowers of a small plant which originally came from Jugo-Slavia. At the present time the bulk of the world's production is in the hands of the Japanese. Recent experiments have shown that with sufficient care the plants can be grown almost anywhere in the United States. It is claimed that the flowers are most concentrated in poison when grown in a hot, dry climate. If so, we should be able to grow pyrethrum of unparalleled deadliness.

Discoveries and Inventions - Our Debt to Private Enterprise

MEDICINE

THERE was a time when the people of the world looked upon tuberculosis as an unconquerable disease. Their fears of this ailment were well founded indeed, as it for many decades led all other maladies as the cause of death. Ninety years ago out of every million persons more than 4,400 died annually of tuberculosis. Today the figure is well below 1,000 and growing less each year. Tuberculosis as the cause of death has dropped from first place to a position well down in the list of fatal ailments.

Dr. Robert Koch

Although some scientists attribute the decline in tuberculosis prevalence and death rate partly to a certain immunization set up by nature, the fact remains that a large share of the victory over the scourge can be credited to scientific men and women of the medical and kindred professions. These fighters in the war on tuberculosis in the main have been private experimenters and discoverers who have labored for the sheer love of performing deeds beneficial to mankind. A large portion of the money spent in combating the disease has come from private sources.

Dr. Allen Kramer Krause, an authority on tuberculosis, says: "The forces that are combining to bring tuberculosis under control in the United States are by no means clear. They are no doubt numerous and complex. That the sanatoria are playing their part can hardly be questioned. These institutions annually remove tens of thousands of the ill from active life and thus interrupt innumerable infectious contacts between the sick and the healthy. They meanwhile train the patients in habits of better health and return them to the community as living object lessons of the benefits of a hygienic regimen."

Medical treatment, proper diets, plenty of rest, fresh air, and other factors are contributing toward the lessening of the tuberculosis peril, along with the facilities afforded by the hospitals mentioned by Dr. Krause.

The medical world had but scant knowledge of the proper means with which to combat tuberculosis so long as the disease was a complete mystery, but when Robert Koch, the noted German bacteriologist, isolated the bacillus of tuberculosis in 1882 there was laid the foundation of the present-day methods of treatment. Many scientists have followed in the footsteps of Dr. Koch, adding valuable contributions to the war on the disease. As early as 1909 there was perfected the tuberculin test to reveal the presence of the dread bacilli in the human system, and in more recent years there have been some successes in the vaccination with living but attenuated tubercle bacilli of infants born of tuberculous parents.

Dr. Koch, whose discovery of the tubercle bacillus laid the groundwork for modern science's war on the disease, was born in Klausthal, Hanover, Germany, in 1843 and died at Baden-Baden in 1910. In 1876 he obtained a pure culture of the bacillus of anthrax, and seven years later announced a method of preventive inoculation against the disease. As previously mentioned, he isolated the bacillus of tuberculosis in 1882. In 1890 hopes were aroused by the announcement that in tuberculin he had prepared an agent which exercised an inimical influence on the growth of the tubercle bacillus, but the expectations that were formed for it as a remedy were not fulfilled, although it proved useful as a means of diagnosing the presence of tuberculosis in animals. Dr. Koch devoted several of his years to the study of cattle plague and bubonic plague. He was awarded the Nobel prize for medicine in 1905.

TRANSPORTATION

MILLIONS of persons each day ride to and from their work and upon other missions as well in electric street cars, which have been developed directly from the first horse-drawn street car of New York City, a marvelous conveyance of 1832.

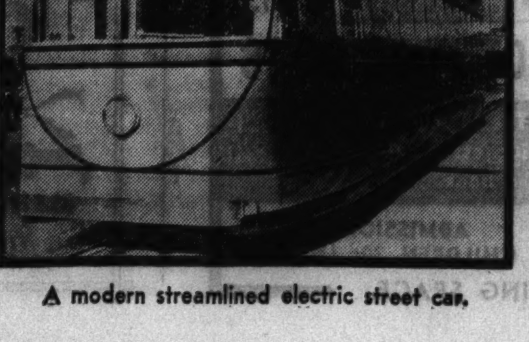
Frank J. Sprague

Electric transportation, which takes into consideration the present-day trolley cars of the city streets, the elevated and other third rail trains, and the great electric locomotives used on railroads for both long and short hauls, owes its existence to private enterprise almost entirely. Inventors, depending upon their own meager funds or backed by private capital, kept at the problem of electric transportation until today we have the most ingenious of vehicles, such as the modern streamlined electric street car shown in the accompanying illustration.

It was in 1875 that a poor mechanic of Kalamazoo, Mich., George Green, applied the electric dynamo to a street car and created the first electric street car. Two years later Stephen D. Field built the first street car to be run successfully with electric current generated by a stationary dynamo. In Field's system, devised to supplant the cable cars then in operation in San Francisco, the current was carried by one of the rails to a wheel of the car and thence to the motor. From this it flowed back through the other wheel, which was insulated from the first one, through the other rail to the dynamo. At the Railway exposition in Chicago in 1883 was exhibited a small electric elevated railway system in operation. A train was pulled by a 15-horsepower locomotive upon a three-foot gauge track for the entertainment of the exposition visitors.



A modern streamlined electric street car.

Although Charles J. Van Depoele, a Belgian who migrated to America in 1868, has been called the "father of the trolley," it is said upon good authority that the trolley that is used to conduct electric current to the street car actually was the invention of a young American named John C. Henry. His first trolley car ran between Kansas City and Independence, Kas.

Many inventors and business organizers have contributed to the development of electric transportation as it is today, but few are so well remembered for their work as Frank Julian Sprague.

While in England in 1882 Sprague considered the possibility of operating the London district railway electrically, first planning the use of the main and working conductors, the latter to be carried between the tracks, with automatic means for maintaining tension. But to meet the complication of switches he later conceived the idea of a car moving freely between two contact planes, the terminals of a constant-potential generating system, for which in practice would be substituted the rails and switches, with wheel contact, and roof-supported conductors following the center lines of tracks and switches, with under contact from a compensating device carried on the car over the center of the trucks. This was the genesis of the present-day trolley.

In 1887 Sprague equipped in Richmond, Va., what is said to have been the first modern trolley system in the United States. He died in 1934 at the age of 77.

SCIENCE

IN THE realm of photo-electricity many uncanny experiments have been carried out and a number of marvelous devices have been invented in which the photo-electric cell is employed.

Prof. H. H. Sheldon

The photo-electric cell in its simplest form is a glass bulb silvered internally, with this silver coating lined on the inside with a thin layer of some metal such as potassium. In the center of the bulb is arranged a collecting electrode supported on a wire sealed directly through the glass. Metallic connection is made in the same way with the potassium. Silver is removed from a certain area of the glass to allow light to enter, and when light does enter the bulb, electrons are ejected from the potassium. These electrons are charged up positively, collect on the center electrode, and render the latter negative. It is upon this phenomenon that are based many of the experiments in photo-electricity. Also employing this phenomenon, a number of the marvelous devices are put to practical application.

So far this field has not been explored fully, but sufficient has been accomplished to forecast its possibilities. There is the photo-electric device that opens doors when persons cast their shadows on the sensitive cell that is the nucleus of the contraption. There are other ingenious apparatuses that turn on streams of water, ring bells, and do this or that to eliminate manual effort. Virtually all of these devices have been developed by individual endeavor—by private enterprise.

Another device is the colorscope, which was invented in 1930 by Prof. H. H. Sheldon of New York university and Dr. W. A. Schneider. The colorscope employs photo-electric cells. Their reactions to light beams make them give off infinitesimal electric currents capable of operating light relays, which will stop or start machinery, operate graph needles, or perform other laboratory or shop service. The colorscope matches colors more exactly than can the human eye.

The Chicago Tribune of June 6, 1930, had this to say of the colorscope:

"This new robot is as fast as the eye. Its decisions are instantaneous. Its eyes are two photo-electric cells. The colors to be compared are laid in front of them. A needle pointer between the eyes immediately swings. If the match is perfect the needle exactly balances between the two cells, its point at zero on the scale. If the match is off, the needle swings to one side for too light, to the other for too dark, and, moreover, it indicates on the scale exactly how far the match is off. It registers color differences invisible to the most expert eyes."

HOUSEHOLD

THE modern home without a telephone would be somewhat like a ship without a radio, for it is the telephone that brings the outside world into the home and permits the household to function properly. Considered only from the standpoint of home use, the telephone is a vastly important instrument. In addition it is an invention vital to business and industry. Without it all activities of peace and war would be plunged into confusion.

(Kadel & Herbert.)
Alexander Graham Bell

The telephone, like nearly all inventions that have assisted mankind in its advancement, is the creation of private enterprise—the development of private experimentation. We have our great telephone network today, that can link every home in the country with every other home and even stretch out to other lands to bring the whole civilized world literally at arm's reach, because of the efforts of men such as Alexander Graham Bell, Theodore N. Vail, John J. Carty, Charles E. Scribner, and others.

The telephone was invented by Bell, a young Scotsman who went to Canada in 1870 to seek health and fortune. He moved to Boston in 1872 and while engaged as a teacher of speech hit upon the idea of improving the carrying qualities of the voice by the use of a trumpet as a transmitter and a harp as a receiver. For several years Bell experimented, gradually bringing into being the first telephone actually capable of transmitting understandable words. On March 10, 1876, Bell's assistant, Thomas A. Watson, heard in a telephone receiver these words uttered by Bell:

"Mr. Watson, please come here; I want you."

With that immortal sentence the telephone was born. Bell exhibited his telephone at the Centennial exposition in Philadelphia that year. The world was amazed. From then on the new invention saw rapid development. Even the electrical wizard, Thomas A. Edison, had a hand in perfecting it by inventing an improved transmitter. Without the aid of Vail the first telephone company might have died in infancy. Without the inventions of Scribner the present-day electric switchboard might not have been evolved. Carty's inventions likewise were valuable contributions to the development of the telephone.

The first home to have a telephone was that of Charles Williams Jr. of Boston. The instrument was installed in April, 1877. The first switchboard and exchange was set up in Boston a month later. The first multiple switchboard was set up in Chicago in January, 1879. The first automatic exchange, doing away with the operator, was set up in La Porte, Ind., in 1892.

On Jan. 25, 1915, Bell talked by telephone from New York to San Francisco, the first transcontinental transmission. Nine years ago commercial telephone service was establised between New York and London.

Few persons who today turn to their dial phones to call a friend or make a business connection realize the vast amount of effort and money expended in perfection of the world's modern telephone systems. One look at the Chicago telephone directory, however, will give some idea as to the great number of people using this convenience.

New York's Royal Rascality

The Drukman Murder and Its Political Angles

FOREWORD

In New York City royal rascals rule. These members of the organized underworld exact a toll of $200,000,000 a year from the helpless citizens of that area largely because of quiescent public officials and conniving politicians.

Last week the story of Charles (Lucky) Luciano, chief royalist of crime, was presented in this section. Today's article deals with the murder of Samuel Drukman, an obscure garage clerk. At first regarded as a minor crime, this case has become an issue in New York state politics. Bribery and political fixing have marked its progress. Royal political heads may fall because of it.

Gov. Lehman recently supplied the latest chapter in this amazing story. An extraordinary grand jury investigated the Drukman case and brought charges of negligence, incompetence, and questionable association against William F. X. Geoghan, district attorney of Kings county (Brooklyn). The jury demanded that Lehman remove Geoghan.

At the conclusion of a hearing, presided over by Gov. Lehman under powers granted him under the constitution, Lehman refused to oust the district attorney. Instead he dismissed the removal charges.

The chief executive said he found "no allegation nor the slightest evidence of corruption, dishonesty, or willful misconduct in office on the part of District Attorney Geoghan. I am convinced that Mr. Geoghan is an honest man."

Here is the story of the Drukman case:

By WAYNE THOMIS

New York.

THE slaying of Samuel Drukman and its consequences have become virtually a clinical study in crime conditions as they now exist in New York City. It is an astounding picture of crooked politicians plotting with racketeers and gamblers to defeat justice.

Evidence produced in court during the trial of the murderers and some of the "fixers" who sought by bribery to purchase immunity for the slayers, portrayed the effrontery of the underworld rascals and their counterparts among the city's politicians. It demonstrated that these rogues did not hesitate to tamper with the courts.

Now the case has drawn to a close. The murderers finally have been convicted after pressure of public sentiment proved weightier even than the conspirators' dollars. Some of the fixers also have been imprisoned. But the politicians who moved behind the scenes and the politically controled prosecuting officers of the county escaped, as usual, with a whitewashing.

This is an old political custom. It is a custom with which Franklin D. Roosevelt was familiar during his four years as governor of New York state from 1928 to 1932. Consequently, it is hardly surprising that Roosevelt's protégé, Herbert H. Lehman, now governor, should apply the whitewash to William F. X. Geoghan, district attorney of Kings county.

Lehman acquired the technique by watching his predecessor whitewash Thomas T. C. Crain, district attorney of New York county in 1930, when the latter was charged with "failure properly to conduct prosecutions of crimes and offenses cognizable by the courts of New York county." The crimes Crain had failed to prosecute were those of racketeers.

The Roosevelt whitewash pail cleared Mayor Jimmy Walker of New York City the first time that dapper opportunist was accused by civic organizations of incompetency, negligence, and inability properly to serve in his important office as chief executive of the city.

This was two years prior to 1932, when it became public knowledge that Walker had accepted large cash sums from business firms later receiving city contracts, and that he had banked more than a million dollars in cash during five years immediately after entering the mayor's office. Walker resigned following these disclosures.

In 1932 Roosevelt applied the same old whitewash to James A. McQuade, former register, then sherif, of Kings county. McQuade had deposited a total of $510,000 in his personal accounts during six years in office. In explanation of this sum he told Samuel Seabury when that attorney was investigating graft among city officials that he had borrowed the money. Roosevelt "peremptorily denied" the demand of a civic organization that McQuade be removed.

Seldom, if ever, have conspirators been as brazen as those of the Drukman case. There was an atmosphere almost of the opera bouffe about the entire affair. This was especially evident during the conspiracy trial when the free and easy manner of offering bribes to detectives was described from the witness stand.

And seldom, if ever, has a district attorney freed murder suspects on any pretext when such a preponderance of evidence pointed directly to their guilt. It was literally true in the Drukman case that the police captured the killers with the victim's blood still on their hands. Yet they were released within four days.

They were not rearrested, indicted, and tried until the Drukman murder had acquired political significance. By that time the murder had become an issue in the November, 1935, election, and was threatening not only New York state officials but also President Roosevelt.

The killing had been another one of "those murders which occur frequently in New York and make no ripple on the public conscience," as one news writer put it. When Joseph P. McGoldrick, the Republican candidate for district attorney of Kings county against Geoghan, the incumbent, made it the basis of his campaign speeches New Yorkers began to learn about the case.

At that time it was important for the Democratic party to carry New York state, rich in electoral votes. Lehman's future was at stake, for he is up for reëlection this year. So, too, is President Roosevelt's future at stake, since he also seeks reëlection this November. Any evidence of skullduggery by Democrats therefore might do important damage.

Let it be understood, then, that the investigation into the Drukman murder case and conspiracy was reluctantly undertaken by New York Democrats. It was politically expedient to bow to the demand made by Republicans for a thorough inquiry.

Samuel Drukman was an inconspicuous garage clerk. He was employed as a bookkeeper for Meyer Luckman, 62 years old, and Fred J. Hull, 46 years old, partners. Luckman and Hull enjoyed a monopoly in hauling flour for the bakers of Brooklyn. They were racketeers—not racket leaders, but part of a racketeering machine which had "organized" the bakers.

Drukman knew that the business had its basis in racketeering. He was careless with his employers' money. Over a period of years he stole thousands of dollars which had been lost to Brooklyn bookmakers as a result of unlucky bets on horse races. It later developed that these losses occasionally ran as high as $800 a day. Ultimately the partners, Luckman and Hull, learned of Drukman's thefts.

About 8:30 o'clock the evening of March 3, 1933, the Brooklyn police received a telephone call directing them to go to the automobile garage at 223 Monroe street in the Williamsburg section of the town. The caller, who did not give his name, said "something terrible" was happening there. The alarm was answered by two squad cars full of detectives and patrolmen who were accompanied by newspaper men.

They found blood spots on the garage floor which lead to a small coupe. In the rumble seat of the machine police found the body of Drukman, who had been hit on the head and then strangled by a rope tied round his throat and connected with his feet.

"He was trussed like a chicken for market," one of the detectives said.

There were blood stains on the sides of nearby trucks, indicating Drukman had put up a fierce struggle before he was downed. About this time several of the police saw a man running away from the place. He stopped after a shot had been fired over his head. It was Meyer Luckman.

Then a thorough search revealed two men hiding behind the trucks. One of them was Hull and the other was Harry Luckman, nephew of Meyer, who also was one of the garage employés. Police discovered that the automobile in which the body was found belonged to Morris Luckman of New Jersey, a brother of Meyer. Hull and Harry Luckman had blood smears on their clothing and hands.

Prosecutor Geoghan did not handle the case personally but assigned two of his assistants, Harry Sullivan and Hyman Barshay, to the job. These men presented evidence in the Drukman murder case to the Kings county grand jury from April 18, 1935, to May 10, that year. Barshay was assigned to other work before the evidence was completed.

On May 10 a no-bill was returned. The official records of the case state that no motive for murder was proved. This was placed in the transcript despite the fact that policemen had obtained evidence to show that the Luckmans and Hull had discovered Drukman's thefts only a few days before the slaying. Checks constituting positive proof to this effect were available for the jury's examination.

The bail bonds of the Luckmans and Hull were returned to them. Several days later, at the express direction of Prosecutor Geoghan, their checks, their bloodstained clothing, and other exhibits gathered by the police were turned over to them. Then the matter was dropped by Geoghan's assistants.

But in July, that year, Detective Charles S. Corbett of the homicide squad, one of the city's crack detectives, wrote directly to Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine. Corbett had been an obscure but earnest worker on the Drukman case.

He informed the commissioner that a bribe of $100,000 had been offered to him, to other detectives, and to prosecutors who were charged with the duty of punishing Drukman's killers. He added he had been informed an attempt had been made to influence at least one of the grand jurors who heard the murder evidence.

Valentine conducted a quiet investigation. He became convinced that fixers and bribery had played a part in freeing the Luckmans and Hull. Then he informed Geoghan of his findings and suspicions.

Geoghan scoffed at the idea. There was an exchange of letters on the subject and finally the commissioner arranged a meeting with Geoghan. At the meeting the commissioner produced police and grand jury reports. These were analyzed. The commissioner then demanded a reopening of the investigation into the crime.

"Mr. Geoghan . . . flatly refused to follow my suggestions and, despite my lengthy and minute analysis of official reports, he insisted that the evidence was insufficient and failed to prove a motive for the murder. He . . . also refused to consider the bribery charges because he had no 'confidence' in any statement that might be made by Detective Corbett," the commissioner wrote later at a time when Geoghan was trying to throw the blame for the noninvestigation of the Drukman case on the police department.

While all this was going on behind the scenes, McGoldrick was preparing for the campaign against Geoghan. He heard of the Drukman case and adopted as his campaign slogan the phrase, "Murder is safe in Brooklyn."

McGoldrick, from the speaker's platform, told audiences all the details of the Drukman case. He charged that enormous bribes had won liberty for the Luckmans and Hull. Geoghan was forced to deny the charges and in his defense stated that McGoldrick "was taking unfair advantage of him" by repeating baseless rumor.

The campaign—this was in October, 1935, prior to the election of certain state and county officials in November—became a bitter one.

Finally McGoldrick, having obtained evidence to back up his story, appealed to Gov. Lehman to remove Geoghan. He sent the plea to Albany on Oct. 17. McGoldrick sent the governor the transcript of grand jury minutes and other evidence.

The move embarrassed Lehman. Geoghan was a Democrat and a machine man from Brooklyn. Lehman needed the support of the machine both for himself and later for President Roosevelt in the 1936 election. If the machine representative in the prosecutor's office was removed, it would cost the ticket support in the election.

Lehman announced he would take no action against Geoghan. On election day Geoghan was returned to office by the machine. His first act was to announce that the Drukman murder was "a closed issue." Citizens, meanwhile, were beginning to ask what was the real story of the killing. Soon Geoghan felt it wise to reverse his decision. He obtained court orders allowing him to begin anew, and Meyer Luckman was arrested. The current grand jury soon indicted Luckman and began to hear evidence against Hull and Harry Luckman.

About this time Gov. Lehman decided that the pressure of public opinion called for action on his part. He appointed a special grand jury to take over the probe into the Drukman murder case. After confering with a number of attorneys known to be Democrats he finally appointed Hiram C. Todd, a Republican and one of the best private lawyers in New York City, as special prosecutor superseding Geoghan in the Drukman matter.

The governor asked Supreme Court Justice Erskine C. Rogers, also a Republican, to hear the trials if indictments were returned. The investigation began on Jan. 6, 1936.

By this time both the Luckmans and Hull had been indicted by the regular grand jury. These indictments were dropped and new ones voted by the special grand jury. The trial of the three defendants began soon afterward. Prosecutor Todd had no difficulty convicting all three. On Feb. 20, 1936, the jury found them guilty of second degree murder. They immediately were sentenced to serve twenty years to life at Sing Sing prison.

This was, however, only the first step in the special grand jury's work. A week after the conviction and just before he was taken to prison Meyer Luckman was persuaded to appear before the special grand jurors as a witness. What he told them has never been disclosed, but it is significant that a series of indictments against the principals in the conspiracy phase of the case were returned soon afterward.

The first indictments were voted March 13. James J. Kleinman, father of William W. Kleinman, an assistant of Geoghan, was charged with tampering with one of the April grand jurymen. It was the April grand jury which first considered the Drukman case and voted no indictment. James Kleinman had been a member of the March grand jury. Carmine Anzalone, a Republican state committeeman, was indicted at the same time on the same charge.

Three days later another indictment was returned naming Henry G. Singer, former United States attorney in Brooklyn. He was charged with offering a member of the first Drukman jury $100. On May 18 eight individuals were charged with conspiracy to hamper law enforcement agencies in connection with the Drukman murder case.

These defendants were Assistant District Attorney William W. Kleinman, Singer, Anzalone, James J. Kleinman, Detective Giuseppe F. L. Dardis, who was a partner of Detective Corbett in an investigation of one phase of the Drukman case; Jack Silverman, owner of a Brooklyn electrical shop; Ike Luckman, brother of Meyer Luckman, and Max Silverman, a Brooklyn flour racketeer and friend of the Luckmans. The latter two were fugitives when indicted and never have been apprehended.

There were others named in connection with the conspiracy by the grand jury report made public at that time. These for varying reasons were not indicted. They were: Joseph A. Solovei, Brooklyn lawyer; Leo P. Byk, formerly slot machine "czar" of Brooklyn; a detective sergeant named Charles Hemendinger, who committed suicide two days before he was to appear as a witness before the special grand jury; Meyer and Harry Luckman and Fred J. Hull, the three convicted of the Drukman murder; Lillian Lipiansky, a relative of the Luckmans; Charles Nagle and Arthur Elliot, members of the original Drukman grand jury, and Michael J. Hogan, Brooklyn politician.

During the trial which consumed weeks the state charged that William Kleinman and Dardis accepted bribes. In developing the details of the conspiracy the state charged that on March 4, the day after the murder, Detective Hemendinger conferred with the Luckmans in regard to "employment of a fixer."

It was unfolded that on March 8 Ike Luckman obtained $5,000 from one Abraham Rosenblum in Manhattan. This, the state charged, was part of the fund for purchasing freedom for the three defendants charged with Drukman's murder. On March 13, according to state witnesses, Detective Dardis received $500 as a bribe.

On about March 15 Ike Luckman, Lillian Lipiansky, and Harry and Dora Kantor held a conference. Kantor was a bookkeeper employed by the Luckmans and presumably was a valuable state witness. As a result of this conference the Kantors agreed to remain in hiding. Later Kantor presumably committed suicide in Chicago by jumping from his hotel room window.

On March 17, it was charged, Lillian Lipiansky paid the Kantors $100, and later paid them $500 more to stay in hiding outside New York state.

On March 28 and 29 Jacob M. Silverman and Byk met in Hot Springs, Ark., and discussed certain phases of the fixing. Then on April 9 Byk communicated with Dardis and Corbett "for the purpose of inducing Corbett to neglect his official duties." Max Silverman and the Luckmans and Hull had a conference on April 11 in the Brooklyn city prison and later Jacob Solovei also communicated with the Luckmans and Hull.

Between April 17 and May 10 Solovei was in communication with Hogan in connection with "contacting" a member of the April grand jury, and about April 29 Anzalone was alleged to have offered one of the grand jurors a bribe of $100 "on condition he would vote against a murder indictment." Subsequently James J. Kleinman communicated with Charles Nagel and Nagel reached Arthur Elliot. Elliot communicated with Herman Rieke, a member of the April grand jury, "for the purpose of improperly influencing" Rieke's action in the Drukman case.

It was about May 1, according to the state, that Attorney Kleinman received $300 from the conspirators. On May 10 the April grand jury had reported "no indictment" in the Drukman case.

Two weeks later Solovei "induced" District Attorney Geoghan to return to the Luckmans and Hull the checks, clothing, and other evidence.

Presentation of the evidence was difficult. Each point was covered by many witnesses, more than two hundred being called at the trial. Detective Corbett's testimony probably was the most direct of the trial.

In telling how a bribe was offered to him by Abraham Weinstein, a produce merchant of Manhattan, Corbett, a large, slightly stooped man who has had twenty-nine years' experience on the New York force, related that he went to Weinstein's office with Dardis looking for evidence.

"Are you boys ready to do business? I understand you are in the Luckman case. If you are ready I will go out of here and be back in ten minutes with a man who will have $100,000. The pay-off man is A. R.—Abe Rosenbloom. This is a nice opportunity for you and Louis [Dardis] to make some money. This is a real mob you are dealing with. This bunch can obtain and reach any power in the city or state," the detective quoted Weinstein as saying.

"I told Weinstein that we had the Luckmans right for murder; that there was no possible way out. I said, 'John, it's a bad thing to interfere for men of that type.' He said, 'It's a sure beat.'

"'I said,' the detective continued, 'Johnny, we have good jobs, good reputations, and good standing in the police department; we get the highest pay. We got the Luckmans dead to rights.'

"He said to me, 'I can only say you are foolish.'"

Later in his testimony the detective said he met William Kleinman outside the office of the district attorney in Brooklyn. He quoted Kleinman as addressing him with the following remarks:

"I didn't know you were in the Luckman case. I am very much interested. It means a great deal to me. They are very good friends of mine; I wish you would stop and hold back the evidence."

Still later he told how he and Dardis were asked to visit Byk in the latter's office. There, Byk said, according to the detective:

"I don't know why I am always selected for these tough jobs, but I always am. You are certainly a hard fellow to handle. What do you want for the Luckman case? What is your price?"

"I told Byk," Corbett said in his deep voice, "that three weeks before an old friend of mine had offered $100,000 to throw the case and I had turned him down."

"Byk said, 'Don't be afraid or scared; everything is fixed O. K.' I told him again there was nothing doing; that they were guilty of an atrocious crime, and I told him all the details of the murder.

"Byk said, 'Hasn't a man high up in the police department spoken to you already?' And I said 'No.' Then as we were leaving Byk said, 'Charlie, let me warn you, anything that little white haired boy, Willie, wants you to do, you had better do.'"

Corbett at that moment did not identify "Willie." He then continued with direct examination to tell how Dardis later told him Detective Hemendinger was "handling the Drukman money."

On cross-examination by William Kleinman, who acted as his own attorney, Corbett admitted that the "Willie" referred to by Byk had been, in his mind, William F. X. Geoghan, the district attorney.

Anzalone pleaded guilty to the conspiracy at the outset of the trial. He told how he had approached a member of the April grand jury with an offer of $100, but was turned down, the grand juror saying, "The Luckmans are guilty as hell." He had done this to earn a $50 fee, but never collected the money.

During the trial it was shown by the state that Byk, who has a criminal record and is generally known as a racketeer, had made a disguised contribution of $500 to District Attorney Geoghan's campaign fund.

On June 26 the case was given to the jury. For twenty-four hours the debate continued. Then on the 27th the jury announced it had reached a verdict on three of the five defendants who stood trial.

When court was in session the jurymen announced they had found Singer, James Kleinman, and Jacob Silverman guilty. Then they retired in an attempt to come to a verdict on William Kleinman and Dardis.

After debating for three hours more they asked to be dismissed, telling the judge that they had stood 10 to 2 for conviction during most of the time, and that there seemed little possibility of unanimous agreement.

Following the trial the state announced that William Kleinman and Dardis would be retried this fall. The date for their retrial has not yet been set.

The termination of the conspiracy trial did not end the special grand jury's work. Before the trial opened on June 1 the grand jurors secretly demanded that Gov. Lehman remove District Attorney Geoghan. The governor refused to act and suggested that the grand jury limit its attentions to the Drukman case.

There were three grounds for the grand jury action it was then disclosed. The jurymen charged Geoghan with negligence and gross incompetence, noncompliance with the obligations of his office, and with associating with persons of ill repute. The jurors in reply to the governor's refusal to act sent him a letter outlining their findings and saying in conclusion:

"We are convinced that our charges are timely. We are further convinced that, while the indictments which we have found are essential to maintain respect for the proper administration of justice, they cannot accomplish as much lasting good as the removal of District Attorney Geoghan and the appointment of a district attorney who will conduct a vigorous and fearless administration of the criminal law. Only thus can a check be put on the murders and other serious crimes committed daily in our county, and protection be given to the lives and property of our citizens.

"We therefore urge you to expedite in every proper way the charges which we have filed with you to the end that the enforcement of the criminal laws in Kings county may cease to be a public scandal."

Immediately after the jurymen who acted in the conspiracy trial were dismissed, Prosecutor Todd revealed that one of the men on the jury had been approached by some unknown person who slipped a note into his pocket. The note asked the juror, Charles Sayles Jr., No. 10 in the panel, to "go easy" on one of the defendants. He stated that an investigation to determine how this outrage could have occurred had reached a blank wall.

Hardly had this sensation died down when the special grand jury sent a communication to the appellate division of the Supreme court in Brooklyn, charging that Joseph Solovei, counsel for Hull, and one of those named as a conspirator, but not indicted, in the conspiracy case, was "unfit to be a lawyer." In effect the special grand jury asked for Solovei's disbarment and charged him with five specific acts, of which three involved him in the Drukman jury tampering plot. The fourth cites an instance of his perjury before the grand jury, and the fifth cites his refusal to waive immunity when asked to appear before the grand jury as a tacit admission of guilt.

Solovei's fate will be determined by the court. Just what the procedure will be in this matter has not yet been made public.

On July 7 Lehman called upon Geoghan to answer the charges of the special grand jury and show cause why he should not be removed.

Geoghan filed an answer denying negligence and averring that any delays in prosecuting the Drukman case were due to interference or inefficency of the police department. Geoghan repeatedly affirmed that he was an honest man. Lehman announced he would preside at an executive session to consider Geoghan's case.

Then for thirteen sessions there began a strange trial. Special Prosecutor Todd introduced evidence to show that Byk and Geoghan were close friends. He summoned Byk as his own witness and elicited from the racketeer that he had borrowed large sums of money while the Drukman murder case was pending before the April, 1935, grand jury. Todd also proved that Geoghan was a frequent companion if not a close friend of Frank A. Erickson, a nationally known bookmaker and underworld banker.

But when he sought to show what had been the disposition of the sums Byk borrowed he was balked by Lehman and by Geoghan's lawyer, Lloyd P. Stryker of New York City. Again and again Todd returned to this theme, finally showing that Byk had borrowed some $50,000 from various sources shortly before the April grand jury voted a no-bill on the Drukman case.

Finally Gov. Lehman turned on Todd and roughly stated he had not shown any acceptable evidence that Geoghan had been dishonest or incompetent. On Sept. 17 the governor closed the sessions and issued a 3,000 word statement in which he vindicated Geoghan. He said:

"I find the charges against the district attorney have not been sustained and they are accordingly dismissed."

Oscar Wilde, Apostle of Estheticism—His Inglorious Fall

London's Idol Formed of Clay

did to me, what I did to myself was more terrible still.

My father and mother bequeathed me a name they had made noble and honored, not merely in literature, art, archæology, and science, but in the public history of my country, in its evolution as a nation. I disgraced that name eternally. I made it a low byword—I dragged it through the very mire.

On Nov. 13 I was brought down here from London. From two o'clock till half past two that day I had to stand on the center platform of Clapham Junction in convict dress, and handcuffed, for all the world to look at. Of all possible objects, I was the most grotesque. When people saw me they laughed. Each train swelled the audience. For half an hour I stood there in the gray November rain, surrounded by a jeering mob.

A pillory is a terrific reality. . . . I have lain in prison for nearly two years. Out of my nature has come wild despair, an abandonment to grief that was piteous to look at: terrible and impotent rage: bitterness and scorn: anguish that wept aloud: misery that could find no voice: sorrow that was dumb. . . .

The gods had given almost everything. But I let myself be lured into long spells of senseless and sensual ease. I became the spendthrift of my own genius. Tired of being on the heights, I deliberately went to the depths in the search for new sensation. What the paradox was to me in the sphere of thought, perversity became to me in the sphere of passion. I took pleasure where it pleased me and passed on. I forgot that every little action of the common day makes or unmakes character and that therefore what one has done in the secret chamber one has some day to cry aloud on the housetop. I ceased to be lord over myself. I allowed pleasure to dominate me. I ended in horrible disgrace. . . .

Apostle of estheticism, Oscar Wilde. This is a reproduction of an old magazine sketch.

In Oscar Wilde the boy there were no telltale signs of that dormant depravity and later degeneration of character which were to wreck him. He was a highly gifted, singularly light-hearted Irish lad.

"I was the happiest man in the world when I entered Magdalen for the first time," he continues in his "De Profundis." "It was always springtime in my heart. My temperament was akin to joy.

"Knowledge came to me through pleasure, as it always comes, I fancy.

"I was nearly sixteen when the wonder and beauty of the old Greek life began to dawn on me. My very soul expanded with joy.

"Oxford is the capital of romance. Oxford was paradise to me."

Wilde was popular and admired from the first day he entered Oxford in 1874. He had just passed his twentieth birthday, and it was not long before the students were flattering him and the instructors were predicting for him a brilliant future. He was an amiable, kindly, pleasure-loving young man who carried off a goodly number of academic prizes with astonishing ease and speedily won the reputation of being the cleverest and wittiest talker who had ever attended the school.

The parental inheritance of Wilde throws no real light on his later fatal propensities. His father was a famous Dublin surgeon and oculist, his mother a dominating woman of considerable literary ability whom Ireland loved for her zealous advocacy of the principles of self-government.

Psychologists have blamed the father for many of Wilde's instincts. Dr. Wilde, with all his admirable qualities, was a man of unbridled passions and excessive sensuality. Psychologists have also sought to trace his leanings to the fact that his mother had a preponderating influence over his early life. She had, moreover, longed ardently for a daughter before Wilde's birth and when he was small had dressed him like a girl and treated him like a daughter.

Oscar Wilde as a small child.

Certainly Wilde inherited no strong moral sense from either parent, and while he absorbed at Oxford much of the fine culture it had to offer, he lived a life of luxurious ease. He found time and money between his studies to maintain exquisitely equipped rooms, wear expensive and showy clothes, entertain with fine brandies and choice cigars, and indulge in endless witty conversation. In "De Profundis" he says:

"Oxford delighted me. No one seemed to know anything about money or care anything for it. All the appurtenances of life were perfect—the food, the wine, the cigarets. It was at Oxford I first dressed in knee breeches and silk stockings. There was no grossness, no coarseness, but all delicate delights."

Unfortunately for Wilde, while other boys were throwing themselves into strenuous athletics, or burning midnight oil over their studies, he was idling in brilliant talk and delving deep into those "wonders and beauties" of Greek life. He was becoming too familiar and too tolerant for his own good with the lives of those men and women of antiquity whose morals and standards would not be tolerated for a moment today. A "cultured Sybarite of modern times was slowly unfolding."

When Wilde left Oxford he had two definite ambitions. He was determined to be famous and he was going to enjoy life. He had a deep-rooted aversion to suffering and pain and resolved that life should yield him only pleasure. He would conquer the world as he had conquered Oxford. His love of pleasure he admits frankly in his confession:

"I used to live entirely for pleasure. I filled my life to the very brim with pleasure, as one might fill a cup to the very brim with fine wine. I shunned suffering and sorrow of every kind. I hated both. I resolved to ignore them as far as possible. They had no place in my philosophy.

"My mother, who knew life as a whole, often used to quote me Goethe's line, written by Carlyle in a book he had given her years before, and translated by him, I fancy:

"'Who never ate his bread in sorrow,
Who never spent his midnight hours
Weeping and waiting for the morrow,—
He knows you not, ye heavenly powers.'

"They were the lines which that noble queen of Prussia, whom Napoleon treated with such coarse brutality, used to quote in her humiliation and exile; they were the lines my mother often quoted in the troubles of her later life. I absolutely declined to accept or to admit the enormous truth hidden in them. I remember how I used to tell her that I did not want to eat my bread in sorrow or pass any night watching for a more bitter dawn. I had no idea that it was one of the special things that the Fates had in store for me; that for a whole year of my life, indeed, I was to do little else."

No. 16 Tite street, London, where Wilde and his wife dwelt in the early years of their married life.

An esthetic reception featuring the lionized Oscar Wilde in knee breeches and with untrimmed locks.

Literary fame did not come to him for some years, but he had not been out of Oxford long before he had managed to get himself talked about, and not pleasantly. This did not worry him. He was as irresponsible as in his Oxford days and took a perverse relish in notoriety. He believed this was the first step toward his coveted fame.

By 1890, when "Dorian Gray" appeared in Lippincott's Magazine, Wilde had focused a great deal of unpleasant attention on himself, and peculiar rumors regarding his private life were plentiful. "Dorian Gray" added considerable fuel to the fire. This story of a young man who leads a frankly wicked life stressed the influence which one person can exert over another. A Lord Henry Wotan converts the youthful Dorian to the philosophy of hedonism, that old Greek doctrin which regards pleasure as the only conceivable object of life. From this time on Dorian goes through life in search of new sensations:

"I believe," says Wotan, "that if one man were to live out his life fully and completely, were to give form to every feeling, reality to every dream, the world would gain a fresh impulse of joy and a return to the Greek ideal. But the bravest man among us is afraid of himself. The mutilation of the savage has its tragic survival in the self-denial that mars our life.

"Every impulse that we strive to strangle broods in the mind and poisons us. The body sins once and has done with its sin, for action is a mode of purification.

"The only way to get rid of a temptation is to yield to it. Resist it, and your soul grows sick with longing for the things it has forbidden to itself, for desire for what its monstrous laws have made monstrous and unlawful. . . . You, Mr. Gray, you yourself, with your rose-red youth and your rose-white boyhood, you have had passions that have made you afraid, thoughts that have filled you with terror——"

"Stop!" faltered Dorian. Yes, there had been things in his boyhood that he had not understood. He understood them now. Life suddenly had become fiery colored to him. It seemed to him that he had been walking in fire. Why had he not known it?

With his subtle smile Lord Henry watched him. He had shot an arrow into the air. Had it hit the mark? How fascinating the lad was!

"You have a wonderfully beautiful face. . . . Live the wonderful life that is in you. Let nothing be lost upon you. Be always searching for new sensations. Be afraid of nothing. A new hedonism—that is what our century wants! There is such a little time your youth will last. The pulse of joy that eats in us at twenty becomes sluggish. Our limbs fail, our senses rot. We are haunted by the memory of passions of which we were too much afraid and the exquisite temptations we had not the courage to yield to.

Strange Fate for Famous Writer

Youth! There is nothing in the world but youth!"

The public waded through "Dorian Gray" and began to argue that there might be some truth, after all, in the odious suspicions in regard to Wilde. He was certainly enormously concerned with unpleasant sins and enjoyed writing about them.

At the same time Wilde was much seen with a young man by the name of John Gray. Tongues wagged and whispered that this John was the licentious Dorian of Wilde's novel. To make matters worse, Wilde jocosely agreed that it "might quite possibly be true," and thereafter referred to John Gray as "Dorian."

Wilde had many friends who refused to listen to the stories which were now circulating freely in London's highways and byways. Wilde's extreme refinement in conversation and lack of any coarseness or vulgarity in manner or speech—the other side of his dual nature—made it hard for those who admired him to tolerate the mounting insinuations against him.

The fact that Wilde was married and the father of two small children did not help to quell suspicions. In 1884 he had suddenly decided to marry. His wife, Constance Wilde, whom he met in Ireland on a lecture tour, was a pretty, brown-haired, dreamy-eyed girl. She yerned to be a poet and adored Wilde. He in turn seemed to be genuinly devoted to her. They had a delirious honeymoon in Paris, and Wilde proved himself an ardent lover, sending his bride flowers at all hours of the day, and impassioned letters and sonnets. After this Parisian interlude the couple had returned to London. Wilde had bought a house on Tite street with the small dower his wife had brought him.

Constance Wilde never ceased to love her husband. The shock of his arrest and the horrifying revelations which followed almost killed her. Her love letters are among the most pitiful in all history, read in the light of all that was to happen later. The one quoted here is typical of many she wrote him:

Another sketch of Wilde.

"My darling love, I am sorry I was so silly; you take all my strength away; I have no power to do anything but love you when you are with me. . . . Every day that I see you, every moment you are with me, I worship you more. My whole life is yours to do as you will with it—such a poor gift to offer up to you, but yet all I have, and so you will not despise it. . . . Do believe that I love you most passionately with all the strength of my heart and mind; anything that you asked me to do I would, in order to convince you and make you happy. . . .

"When I have you for my husband I will hold you fast with chains of love and devotion so that you will never leave me or love anyone as long as I can love and comfort you."

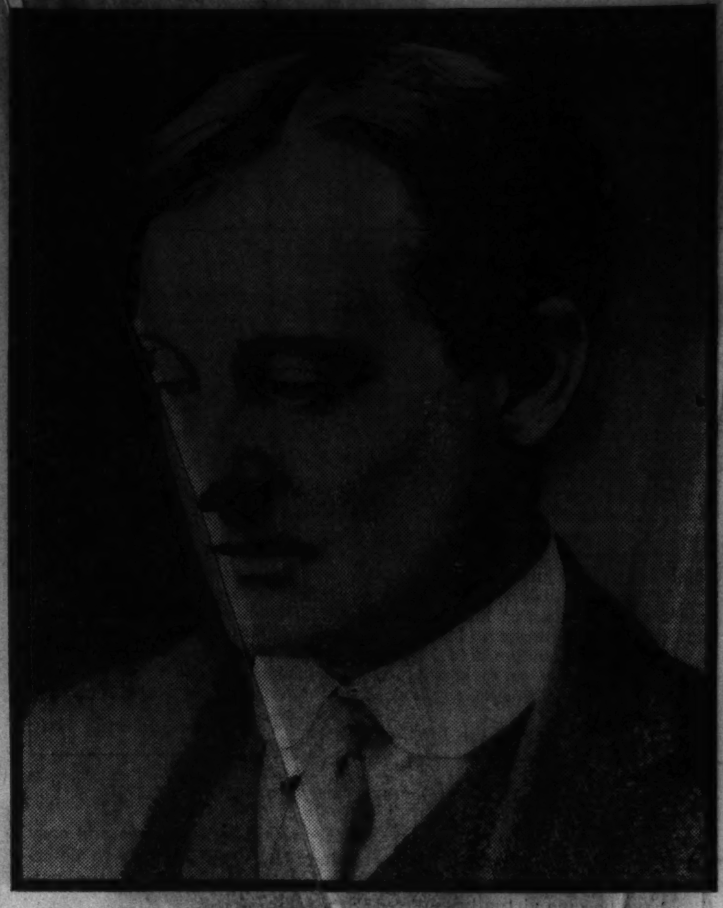
Oscar Wilde decided to work in grim earnest after they were settled in their own home. Fame was still ahead of him, and he must capture it. He had his study decorated with buttercup yellow walls and the woodwork lackered red. Posing a little, as always, he swathed himself in a monkish robe with a cowl and worked long hours at his desk. He had his hair waved to resemble the head of Nero, whose bust he admired, and when he went out he swung an ivory cane set in turquoise. Two boys were born in 1885 and 1886. Wilde was proud of his children and fond of his wife, but he spent little time with his family. He entertained lavishly at clubs and restaurants and reveled in the excitement which he and his writings continued to stir up.



Lord Alfred Douglas, son of the dour marquess of Queensberry.

One afternoon in the autumn of 1891 a friend, Lionel Johnson, brought young Lord Alfred Douglas to tea at the Wilde home. It was the beginning of a friendship which was to ruin Oscar Wilde for all time. Wilde was now 36 years old and on the eve of his first tremendous success, "Lady Windermere's Fan." This play was to open the following year at St. James theater, London, and place Wilde on his long-dreamed pinnacle of fame.

Lord Douglas was a handsome golden-haired youth of 21 with large, angelic blue eyes and much charm of manner. He fell at once under the influence of Wilde's enthralling conversation, originality, and culture. Wilde in turn was much impressed by the youth's rank and position.

A fast friendship was formed at once, and the two men were seen constantly together in the months which followed. Wilde began to spend a good deal of money on Douglas—money which he did not have. Even when thousands of pounds a year began to pour in from royalties on plays, Wilde found it hard to live up to young Alfred's standards of entertainment.

"Alfred frightened me as much as he attracted me," Wilde was to confess mournfully in prison. "I held away from him, but he wouldn't have it. He sought me out again and again, and I couldn't resist him. That is what ruined me. He increased my expenses so that I couldn't meet them. Over and over I tried to free myself from him. But he always came back."

Lord Alfred Douglas told a different story:

"From the first day I met Wilde he was continually asking me to dine or to lunch with him and sending me letters and telegrams. He flattered me and gave me presents and copies of all his books. He did succeed in weaving spells. One sat enthralled and listened to him. It was indeed enchantment and nothing else."

At the end of the first year of this friendship rumors against Wilde began to crystalize into specific accusations. The fact that he was married to a charming wife and the father of two small boys did not help any.

An increasing number of people refused to be introduced to Oscar Wilde. Once Frank Harris, who has written an illuminating book, "Oscar Wilde—His Life and Confessions," and who was always a loyal friend of Wilde's, tried an experiment. Harris was beginning to be disturbed by the growing feeling against Wilde. He scorned the current gossip at this time, but he did feel that Wilde could be more circumspect, more restrained in speech and actions. Harris sent out invitations to a luncheon to meet Wilde and "hear a new story." Four out of the twelve men whom he invited refused to come and gave as their candid reason that they had not the slightest desire to meet Wilde or to listen to anything he might say.

This showed quite plainly the direction of the prevailing winds, but Wilde refused to take the warning seriously. He was growing a bit puffy physically from overeating and drinking and inflated mentally from overconfidence.

Early in 1892 some letters which Wilde had written to Lord Douglas were stolen, and threats of blackmail were in the air when the story of the theft leaked out.

But Wilde merely shrugged his shoulders and laughed. No one could hurt him, he boasted. He was blind to the gathering clouds, which hung darkest over the Pelican club in London.

At this club a sullen-mouthed, hot-eyed man was frequently seen in the lounges, muttering dire invective against Wilde. This man was the marquess of Queensberry, Lord Alfred's father. He swore loudly to anyone who would listen that he was "going to stop that damned Wilde from going with his son if he had to thrash the hide from him."

The marquess was clever enough to know he had a popular rôle for once.

"No one with any decent self-respect should be seen with that beast," the marquess said. "I know the rotten reputation he had when he came down from Oxford. He's hypnotized my son with his glib tongue and heliotrope ties ever since the first day he met him. It's my duty as a father to break up the affair. Believe me, I'm getting my proofs and plenty of them. I've got enough now to hang him, and I'm going to do it if he doesn't leave Alfred alone."

A few of Wilde's best friends carried Queensberry's threats to him in genuine alarm. Didn't he know the type of man he was dealing with? The marquess had the temper of a maniac. No one liked him, but he'd have the public's sympathy if he could make the crowds believe he was a distressed parent anxious to save his son from "a m_n of Wilde's reputation."

Wilde repeated the threats to Lord Alfred, who promptly went into a rage. He hated his father for his years of abusive treatment of Lady Queensberry. Alfred and the other children had taken her side. They had suffered enough from the marquess, who was a coward and a bully. Let him rave. He had been writing nasty letters to Alfred ever since he and Wilde were first acquainted. He had even cut off his allowance. If his father wanted to try assault he would go him one better. He would use a loaded revolver which he always carried. He added bitterly that if his father should die there wouldn't be a soul who would miss him.

Unluckily for Wilde, the youthful Lord Alfred, in the heat of his hatred for his father and his impassioned championship of his mother, had not drawn an accurate picture of the marquess of Queensberry. The older man was no coward. He was a brutal fighter, and he had the temper of a madman. Wilde dismissed the marquess from his mind, and he and Lord Douglas continued to flaunt their friendship to the world. Wilde was walking blithely ahead to his own destruction.

His enemies openly predicted that it would not be long before he would have plenty of rope to hang himself. His friends were in despair. What the end would be no one could say. It came shortly, and with terrifying suddenness.

A SENSATIONAL TRIAL

In next week's instalment of the life story of Oscar Wilde, the famous writer whose downfall was one of the sensations of the nineties, will be recounted the story of his ill-advised suit against the marquess of Queensberry, father of his best friend. How that case was tried, how the plaintif made a sorry figure in the courtroom, and how subsequently he was arrested on grave charges will be retold in detail, illustrated with rare old photographs.

The Affair of Teresa Sickles

Sensational Triangle Slaying That Shook the Nation

FOREWORD

Daniel E. Sickles, central figure in this story, was truly a toy of destiny. He outlived a sensational murder trial to become a famous Civil war general, a minister to Spain, a congressman, and a city and state official of New York. His life would provide material for a dozen books. He lost a leg at Gettysburg—and almost his military reputation; but that was long ago. His fame at Gettysburg is now quite secure. Sickles was of New York Dutch stock (Van Sickels), probably by way of Vienna, Austria, whence came the first immigrant, Zachariah Sickels. A brilliant lawyer, politician, and congressman, Sickles first burst upon the national horizon in a big way when in 1859 he slew the seducer of his wife. It is with this chapter of Sickles' exciting career that the present article deals.

By FRANK CIPRIANI

TWO men high in the social and political life of Washington met suddenly one gray morning in February, 1859, just off Lafayette square, diagonally opposite the White House. One, Daniel E. Sickles, cried to the other, Philip Barton Key:

"You have dishonored my bed and family, you scoundrel; prepare to die!"

So speaking, he flashed a pistol. At the same moment Key drew from his pocket what Sickles might have taken to be a gun but what was, in fact, an opera glass.

"You had better not shoot," warned Key, backing away.

Sickles leveled his weapon. He fired. The bullet grazed Key's left shoulder. Simultaneously Key hurled the opera glass at Sickles. He missed. Then Key leaped for protection behind a tree. Sickles fired again. This bullet scratched a piece of bark off the tree.

His face livid and his eyes slits of hate, Sickles followed Key behind the tree. Key grabbed his arm. Both men were large and, ordinarily, equally strong. But fury gave Sickles Herculean strength. He disengaged his arm with a single jerk. Then, as Key backed away in terror, Sickles fired another shot.

This one, at closer range than the others, found a vital mark. Key fell upon his hip. Supporting himself with one arm, he looked up, and cried: "Murder, don't shoot, don't shoot." But Sickles, now a madman if ever there was one, leveled his pistol less than three feet from Key and fired again. Key sank to the sidewalk—dead.

The shooting was seen by at least a dozen witnesses. Among them was Samuel Butterworth, a close friend of Sickles, who stood by composedly, leaning against a fence not more than ten feet away. Other witnesses were Thomas Martin, a government clerk, and Cyrus McCormick, the Chicago inventor. Martin was the first to swing into action. He ran to the exclusive Club house, less than 100 feet away, shouting:

"Key is murdered, Key is murdered!"

Half a dozen club members, among them a Mr. Upshur, a Mr. Tisdall, and a Mr. Doyle, ran to the scene. As they approached they saw Sickles standing over Key, his pistol at the fallen man's head. Twice Sickles snapped the trigger; twice the gun missed fire. Doyle touched Sickles on the arm. Sickles looked up.

"Gentlemen," he explained, "this man has dishonored my bed."

Just like that occurred one of Washington's most sensational slayings, a slaying that shook the capital and shocked the nation. Well it might, for the principals were two of Washington's best known figures.

Daniel E. Sickles was a United States congressman from New York, a Tammany leader, and a former corporation counsel for the city of New York.

Philip Barton Key was the United States district attorney for the District of Columbia, a son of Francis Scott Key, author of "The Star Spangled Banner," and a relative of Chief Justice Roger B. Taney of the Supreme court.

The not inculpable cause of the unhappy incident was Sickles' pretty wife, the former Teresa Bagioli, mother of his 4 year old daughter, Laura.

Sickles had married her in 1853. At the time he was corporation counsel for New York. He had progressed swiftly since leaving the home of his wealthy and sternly Dutch father. He had studied law under Benjamin F. Butler, attorney general under President Van Buren. He had been admitted to the bar before he was 22. Excellent legal perception, plus fine oratorical ability, had brought him financial means and political prestige.

Then had followed his marriage with Miss Bagioli; she was only 17 then. She was dark eyed and, in the words of a contemporary writer, "as beautiful as an Italian morning." She had been Sickles' childhood sweetheart. As a mere youth, studying the Romance languages, he had lived in the home of his tutor, a Prof. Da Ponte, former poet laureate at the court of Emperor Joseph II. of Austria. To the Da Ponte home one day had come Da Ponte's friends, the Bagioli family, Prof. Antonio Bagioli, grand maestro of the Montressor Opera company; Mrs. Bagioli, and Teresa. She was only 4 then; but Sickles, himself a juvenile, fell in love with her.

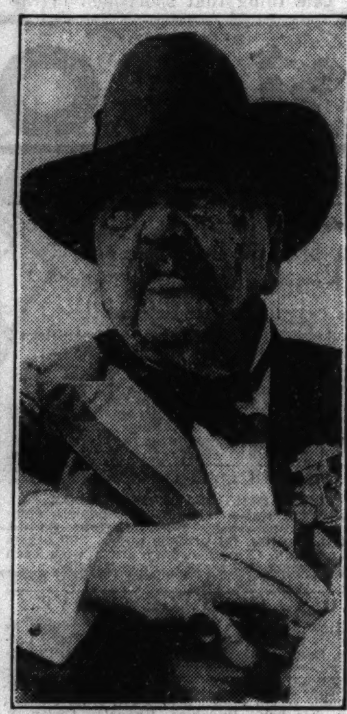
The Hon. Daniel E. Sickles, congressman from New York, avenges his honor by shooting the Hon. Philip Barton Key, United States district attorney of Washington, D. C. The nonchalant onlooker is Samuel Butterworth, a friend of Sickles.



"A veteran of fate." Daniel E. Sickles as he appeared in the later years of his life.

Marriage opened a new vista for the young bride. Joyous in her disposition, and even hoydenish at times, she made a perfect companion to the life-loving Sickles. He was a veritable man about town, at home in exclusive clubs, at home—in the Bowery.

Soon after the wedding Sickles was appointed secretary of the American legation in London, under United States Minister James Buchanan. London society bubbled over the young couple. Mrs. Sickles in particular made a distinct impression, not the least part of that impression being made by a tendency to coquetry. But she was well liked. She was presented to the queen. Lady Palmerston and Lady Clarendon virtually mothered her debut, and before long she became known, with a Miss Lane and a Mrs. Colonel Lawrence, as "one of the three American graces."

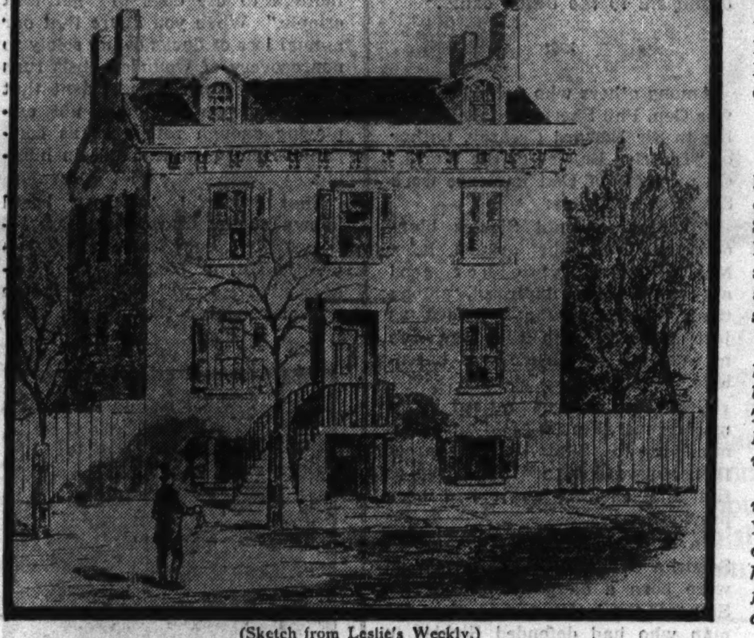
Eventually Mrs. Sickles returned home and gladdened her husband with a baby daughter. Not long afterward Buchanan and Sickles also returned, the former to be elected President of the United States and the latter to be elected congressman.

The Sickleses moved to Washington. Washington was a gay place in the latter 1850s. Life was fast. There was much moral looseness. Giddy heads were easily turned.

The United States district attorney at that time was Philip Barton Key, about 40 years old. He was a southern aristocrat of the first rank. In his veins ran the blood of the Lees, the Calhouns, and the Pendletons. His father had already made the family name immortal by his composition of what is now the national anthem.

Key was tall. He was athletic in build. He was downright handsome. He knew all the niceties of social life. Eccentric in some respects, he yet was haughty, reserved, and gallant. He was a widower. His wife, the former Ellen Swan, with a lineage as noble as his, had left him with five children.

Key was a familiar figure on the bridle path, always atop a gray horse. His athletic build would have set him apart anywhere; if not that, then his aristocratic face, with its finely trimmed mustache and hair slightly graying at the temples.



(Sketch from Leslie's Weekly.)

The Sickleses occupied a white stucco house in Monroe place within calling distance of the White House. There they entertained lavishly.

But Key had one failing.

He was a ladies' man. Such he had been before marriage; such he became again after his wife's death. He knew he was a ladies' man. His friends knew it. The whole town knew it. And the ladies idolized him.

The young congressman, Sickles, who was then about 34, and his wife did not meet Key until 1858, after Sickles had been reëlected. The introduction was made by Jonah D. Hoover, President Buchanan's district marshal. Key bowed low to the beautiful Mrs. Sickles as only a southerner of his period could bow. He caught her flashing eye; she caught his.

Sickles and Key became warm friends. It was not long before Key became a frequent, if not regular, guest at the Sickles' entertainments. The Sickleses at that time occupied a white stucco house that was later the home of Schuyler Colfax, Vice President during Grant's first term. This house stood almost conspicuously alone in Monroe place on one side of Lafayette square, within calling distance of the White House. Here every Tuesday Congressman and Mrs. Sickles gave a reception, and here every Thursday a dinner.

The Washington élite enjoyed these affairs—and none more than the handsome United States district attorney.

Politics consumed much of Sickles' time, and he was absent from home considerably during the latter part of 1858. But although Mrs. Sickles did not have her admiring husband with her all the time she never lacked an escort. That escort was Key. At theaters, at balls, at dinners he was generally at her side. Not only that, but he called frequently at the Sickles mansion.

A friend once advised Sickles of Key's constant attentions to Mrs. Sickles, but Sickles apparently felt that his own attractions—he was not far from handsome—precluded his wife from being unfaithful. He did nothing except to caution his wife pleasantly not to "talk too much" with Mr. Key. Key, therefore, continued his attentions to Mrs. Sickles unmolested.

In January, 1859, mutual friends of Key and Sickles noticed that Key almost daily rode past the Sickles home. They noticed, too, that when on foot he strolled frequently in Lafayette square, overlooked by the Sickles residence. The more observant saw that during those strolls he occasionally doffed his hat, even though no lady was near; they also saw that he sometimes waved his handkerchief in a circular motion as though giving signals.

They were signals. They were signals to Mrs. Sickles. They were signals of sin. Often after those signals had been given Mrs. Sickles would leave the house and proceed toward K and 15th streets. Key, too, would go in that direction.

The liaison was as open as a cloudless sky to Key's friends, especially those living at the Club house. This was the only name of the place. The Club house was the rendezvous of Washington's somebodies. It stood in Madison place, between the Maynard and the Madison houses, off Lafayette square. The present day Cosmos club is the old Club house's best identification.

These friends warned Key. Why, his conduct was most flagrant. He was flaunting to the world that his friend's wife was his mistress. Even a blind man could see his obvious signals. He had better have a care. There would come a day of reckoning.

Key laughed at the warnings.

"A fig for common license!" he said, snapping his fingers. "French intrigue and romance with a good spice of danger in it for me!"

Such was the attitude of this handsome devil of a man.

On Thursday, Feb. 24, 1859, the Sickleses gave their usual Thursday dinner. There was a hop on at the Willard hotel, and, the dinner ended, Mr. and Mrs. Sickles and most of their guests left for the hop. As Sickles left the house an unidentified person thrust a sealed letter into his hand. Sickles was too occupied then to read the letter. He put it into his pocket. Back home some hours later he opened the letter. As he read his face paled. He sat down, weak, broken, suddenly an old man. This is the letter:

"Dear Sir: With deep regret I inclose to your address these few lines, but an indispensable duty compels me to do so, seeing that you are greatly imposed upon.

"There is a fellow, I may say—for he is not a gentleman by any means—by the name of Philip Barton Key, and I believe the district attorney, who rents a house of a Negro man by the name of Jno. A. Gray, situated on 15th street, between K and L streets, for no other purpose than to meet your wife, Mrs. Sickles. He hangs a string out of the window as a signal to her that he is in, and leaves the door unfastened, and she walks in; and, sir, I so assure you. With these few hints I leave the rest for you to imagine. Most respectfully, your friend, ... R. P. G."

Sickles said nothing to his wife that night. Perhaps the writer was mistaken. Perhaps the writer was his enemy, or his wife's, or Mr. Key's. Yet the information merited investigation. Sickles hired a private detective to investigate.

That sleuth did his work well; it was not a difficult task. He readily found a brick house at 383 West 15th street which unquestionably was used as a rendezvous by Key and "a lady of means." Negro neighbors had seen them many times. Sometimes the man would enter the house first, followed by the woman; sometimes it was the other way around. If the man went in first he generally hung a string out the window to let her know he was in. Sometimes he sat at the window and looked through an opera glass—always in the direction of the Sickles house. The better, probably, to see answering signals there. The house belonged to a Negro named Gray. The man paid him $50 a month rent. The rent came from Key.

The detective reported his findings to Sickles, leaving no doubt in the latter's mind that his wife was untrue to him. He confronted her. He accused her of meeting Key. Mrs. Sickles seemed to freeze. Suddenly she cried out hysterically:

"I am betrayed, and lost!"

Then she swooned.

Sickles, it can be certain, loved his wife. But at this moment he changed. After restoring Mrs. Sickles to consciousness he forced her to write a confession and to sign it in the presence of two servants. This is part of the confession:

"I commenced going to the Negro house in the latter part of January. Usually stayed an hour or more. There was a bed in the second story. I did what is usual for a wicked woman to do.

"The intimacy commenced this winter when I came from New York, in that house; an intimacy of an improper kind. Have met half a dozen times or more at different hours of the day, on Mondays and Wednesdays.

"Would arrange meetings when we met in the street and parties. Never would speak to him when Mr. Sickles was at home, because I knew he did not like me to speak to him. Did not see Mr. Key for some days after I got here. He then told me he had hired the house as a place where he and I could meet. I agreed to it."

Mrs. Sickles pleaded for mercy and forgiveness. She sobbed that Key had overwhelmed her and that, once she had erred, he had compelled her to continue on threats of exposing her. Sickles shook his head. He took back his wedding ring. He broke it in two. He said he would arrange for Mrs. Sickles and little Laura to leave for New York.

But for the time being Sickles' intentions were uncertain, except that he must separate from his wife. Most of the time he seemed more dead than alive. Occasionally he would be convulsed with grief. Mrs. Sickles locked herself in her room and cried hour after hour. The servants cried. Sickles cried. Several friends, among them Samuel Butterworth and Robert J. Walker, dropped in to comfort him. At times they thought Sickles would lose his mind.

On Sunday, Feb. 27, Sickles and Butterworth were alone in an upper room discussing the affair. Sickles wanted advice. He wanted to know what to do. American and European codes left only a few courses open to an outraged husband who had caught his wife and her paramour in flagrante delicto:

He could laugh at it.

He could challenge the paramour to a duel. This was the French way.

He could sue the paramour for damages. This was the English way.

He could take the paramour's life. This was the American way nearly a century ago. [A leading journal in 1859 approved this method with these words: "Terrible as homicide is, this must, on the whole, be admitted to be the most effectual, the wisest, and the most natural revenge."]

With Butterworth, Sickles sadly discussed the entire tragedy. Sickles announced moodily that he must take some action, bring the matter out into the open. Butterworth advised against the course. Sickles was insistent. He was disgraced; he was humiliated; the whole city knew about it.

"Ah, but you must be calm, Mr. Sickles," counseled Butterworth. "If there be a possibility of keeping the certain knowledge of this crime from the public you must do nothing to destroy that possibility. You may be mistaken in your belief that it is known to the whole city."

"No, my friend, I am not," replied Sickles. "It is already the town talk."

Butterworth paused a moment. Then he said quietly:

"If that be so, there is but one course left for you as a man of honor. You need no advice."

What Butterworth meant by "one course left for you as a man of honor" he alone knew. What Congressman Sickles of New York as he appeared at the time of the slaying.

Sickles understood by that remark Sickles alone knew. A few more words followed and the two men decided, so Butterworth later related, to see a Mr. Stuart at the Club house for his opinion on the matter.

At this moment fate intervened. Sickles, looking out his window, noticed a man strolling in Lafayette square. He looked again. Then his body quivered. His breath came fast. The man was facing the Sickles house. He was waving a white handkerchief slowly and with a circular motion.

The man was Key.

Sickles and Butterworth hurried downstairs, remarking to servants that they were going to the club. Butterworth left the house first. Sickles lagged behind to stuff two, probably three, pistols into his pockets.

Key meantime had crossed the square into Pennsylvania avenue. He walked toward Madison place. Butterworth intercepted—or caught up—with him in front of the Maynard house. Key extended his hand. "Good morning, Butterworth," he said cordially. Butterworth replied in kind, adding he was bound for the club to see Mr. Stuart.

Just then Sickles came up. He had cut through the square. Butterworth saw him. He stepped to one side and leaned casually against a fence. This was the picture when Sickles, the wronged husband, shot and killed the man he had thought his friend.

Sickles returned to his home after the shooting. He confronted his wife. He looked like a marble statue.

"I have killed him," he said in a hollow voice.

Sickles did not attempt to escape. Accompanied by friends, he surrendered to the police. He was placed in a cell in the old battlemented jail. The cell was overrun with vermin.

"Haven't you a better cell?" asked Sickles disgustedly. The jailer had a ready retort. "This is the best you members of congress have afforded us," he said.

The killing threw Washington into hysteria. Thousands of people applauded Sickles' act. Other thousands condemned it as wanton. The New York Evening Post demanded that Sickles be hanged at once. The Independent was equally bitter.

"He [Sickles] has made himself obnoxious to the laws of his country, to the terrific inquisition of his own conscience, and, above all, to the judgments of God," wrathily declaimed that paper. "Mr. Sickles has himself been notorious for his profligacies, and many will recognize the awful calamity which has fallen upon this man's house as the righteous retribution of God, which at last commends the poisoned chalice to his own lips."

Those lines were from the pen of that doughty cleric, the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher. Harper's Weekly took another attitude. It blamed moral looseness in Washington for the killing, expressed sympathy for Mrs. Sickles, and called her the real victim of the tragedy.

"Can any of us be surprised by the recent murder of Mr. Key in Washington?" asked Harper's. "When the newspapers declare, and private testimony asserts, that no capital in the world is more rotten than ours, is it remarkable that a wife should be faithless and her husband shoot her seducer?"

The Washington Star took the "He who is without sin" attitude. "Unless his [Sickles'] conduct as a husband has beeen scrupulously correct he cannot properly plead the justification of wounded marital honor," stated that paper.

So much for the press. The public sympathized with Sickles. And all of Sickles' friends stuck to him. Even President Buchanan sent a "message of condolence" to Sickles; cabinet members called on him in jail.

Sickles became far and wide a hero. His lawyers pressed for an immediate trial to catch the full sweep of popular sentiment. The trial opened before Judge T. G. Crawford, a white haired, bespectacled relic of the old judicial régime who looked to England for his law. Chief prosecutors were Robert Ould (afterward confederate commissioner of exchange), and James S. Carlisle. Chief counsel for Sickles were Edwin M. Stanton (afterward Lincoln's secretary of war), James Graham, James T. Brady, and Thomas F. Meagher, brilliant Irish refugee.

Spectators packed the court, among them senators, representatives, judges, and diplomats. Sickles was surrounded by friends. His own father, George G. Sickles, and his wife's father, Prof. Bagioli, sat beside him.

The jury was not easy to get. Most veniremen expressed decided opinions. Curiously, even though popular feeling favored Sickles, most of the jurymen with opinions were against him. Venireman Wiltburgher, who looked as though he did not know how to smile, was typical. "If Sickles is guilty, I say hang him as high as Hamañ," he exploded. Needless to say, he was excused.

This hostile attitude against the prisoner distressed Prof. Bagioli. He stopped one of the veniremen.

"I heard you just now," said Bagioli, "say something harsh of the prisoner; but let me ask you, if you had lost your wife or had your daughter sacrificed, would you have been able to control your feelings and be governed by reason?"

"I don't know," replied the dismissed juror, "but who is asking me this question?"

"I am the father of Mrs. Sickles," was the answer.

The jury was finally impaneled, the jurors striking one contemporary reporter as "though they had a conscience." The prosecution began putting in its evidence. There was and could be no denial or contradiction of the shooting. As James N. Reed, Richard N. Downey, Cyrus McCormick, and many others saw it, it was cold and deliberate. Reed, for instance, told of Key's plea for mercy. Downey remembered Sickles' words after it was all over: "Is the damned rascal dead?"

The prosecution made up a strong case, but then the defense's turn came. The defense was a mixture of emotion, insanity, and unwritten law. The Sickles case, it might be added, was the first in America in which temporary insanity was the primary defense.

Witness after witness told of seeing Key signal to Mrs. Sickles. Others told of their visits to the rendezvous at 383 West 15th street. Little was left to the jury's imagination. Circumstantially, directly, or otherwise the defense showed, or sought to show, that Key had seduced the prisoner's wife, that he had broken up a home, and that he merited the wrath of the Almighty as well as that of a sorrowed husband.

One of Sickles' best witnesses was Robert J. Walker. Walker had called on Sickles after the expose. This is how he saw Sickles:

"Mr. Sickles became very much convulsed indeed, threw himself on the sofa, covering his face with his hands, and breaking into an agony of unnatural and unearthly sounds—the most remarkable I ever heard; something like a scream, interrupted by violent sobbing. From his convulsed appearance he was in the act of writhing. His condition appeared to me frightful, appalling me so much that I thought if it lasted much longer he must become insane. He was indulging in exclamations about dishonor having been brought on his wife and child; he seemed to dwell particularly upon the child."

For a time the defense tried to introduce Mrs. Sickles' confession into the records. But here American manhood of the times rose. The wife had been shamed enough; she must not be further disgraced by use of her own admissions. Sickles probably was fortunate his lawyers did not put in the confession. Otherwise the prosecution would have offered the register of a Baltimore hotel showing that Sickles, only a month before the killing, had registered at the hotel with another woman—not his wife.

The trial became one vast emotional spree, and when the closing hours came the lawyers—they were truly orators in those days—exceeded themselves. Graham, for instance, spoke more than a day. He quoted from the Bible and from Shakespeare. He cited classic instances of infidelity by the score, impelling one amazed but cynical reporter to write, "he appears to have read up for the occasion." But Graham did a good job. The continuing tenor of his talk was that seducers throughout the ages had suffered death, and that by the great unwritten law Sickles was justified in shooting the seducer, Key.

The jury did not take much time to acquit Sickles.

A packed courtroom greeted the verdict with huzzahs. Young men and old men rushed up and kissed the trembling Sickles, who himself wept on Bagioli's shoulder. Stanton yelled his thanks to the jury. Brady shook hands all around. Meagher could not speak. The foreman of the jury piously expressed hope his descendants would honor his memory because he "served on this jury."

Sickles became a greater hero than ever.

But suddenly he lost his hero's halo. Not long after his acquittal he forgave his wife and took her back. His old and early love had overcome his sorrow. But public fancy was not so fickle. The public condemned him. His old friends shunned him. The ethics of the day interpreted Sickles' action thusly: Sickles, by taking back his errant wife had condoned her marital offenses; therefore he had also condoned the offenses of the man he had killed; therefore the killing had been cruel and wanton.

But Sickles was not to be beaten down. Friends or no friends, public approbation or public disapprobation, he would shelter and live with his wife, mother of his child, even though she had been untrue, even though she had impelled him to kill.

(From Leslie's Weekly.)

"I've killed him," exclaimed Sickles as he appeared before his wife after the killing of Key.

"Although it is sad for me to incur the blame of friends and the reproaches of many wise and good people," he said. "I shall strive to prove to all who may feel any interest in me that if I am the first man who has ventured to say to the world that an erring wife and mother may be forgiven and redeemed, the good results of this example shall entitle it to the imitation of the generous and the commendation of the just."

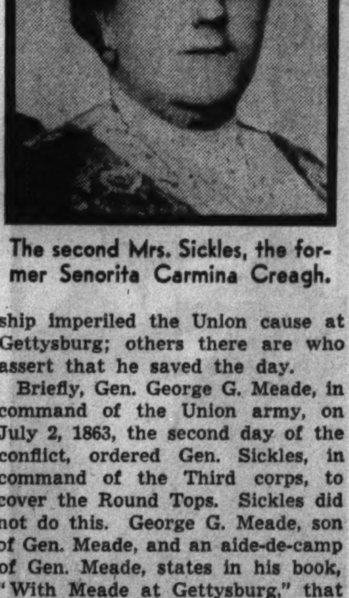
Sickles was a noble example of forgiveness. But Mrs. Sickles was already near the end. The tragedy had broken her. Month by month, then week by week, and finally day by day her heart and her will gave way. She died not long afterward, shunned by society, but with a devoted husband at her side.

The death of Mrs. Sickles closed a tragic chapter of Sickles' life and nudged him nearer that cheerless obscurity toward which he seemed headed. But destiny was not yet finished with him.

In 1861 war broke out between the states. Sickles promptly offered his services to President Lincoln; they were accepted. Sickles organized the Excelsior brigade in New York, and soon afterward was engaged in the thick of the fighting. His conspicuous bravery and leadership won him promotions. Eventually he became a brigadier general and corps commander.

Yet even in his military life, as in his civil life, his fates were fickle. Gettysburg was the turning battle of the secession. It was the turning point of Sickles' military career. It made him a hero—but it could have—and it almost made him an outcast. Sickles lost his right leg at Gettysburg; torn by a confederate shell, it had to be amputated on the field. However, "Sickles at Gettysburg" is remembered not so much for his loss of a leg as for his generalship.

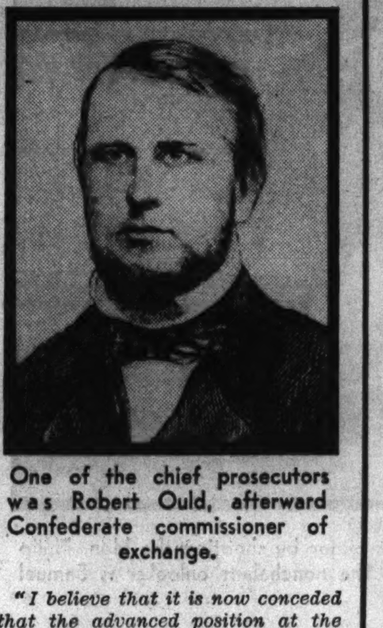
Military historians even today disagree on that question. Some there are who say that Sickles' generalship imperiled the Union cause at Gettysburg; others there are who assert that he saved the day.



The second Mrs. Sickles, the former Senorita Carmina Creagh.

Briefly, Gen. George G. Meade, in command of the Union army, on July 2, 1863, the second day of the conflict, ordered Gen. Sickles, in command of the Third corps, to cover the Round Tops. Sickles did not do this. George G. Meade, son of Gen. Meade, and an aide-de-camp of Gen. Meade, states in his book, "With Meade at Gettysburg," that his father ultimately came to the conclusion that his orders to Sickles "had been wilfully disregarded." Sickles placed his corps in a position, not in accord with Meade's orders, at Peach Tree orchard. Before the situation could be altered the confederates attacked; the attack fell fully upon Sickles' position. Sickles' corps lost one-half its men. Belated reënforcements came to the rescue, however, and stopped the enemy after a slight loss of ground.

After the long battle had ended, and with victory for the Union forces, Gen. Meade censured Gen. Sickles. Sickles' friends then, and afterward, asserted that his reward should have been thanks instead. His handling of the Third corps, they averred, really began to turn the tide. No less an authority than the confederate general, Longstreet, who directed the attack against Sickles and who had bitter knowledge of the strategy, made that concession. In a letter to Sickles in 1902, Longstreet wrote:



One of the chief prosecutors was Robert Ould, afterward Confederate commissioner of exchange.

"I believe that it is now conceded that the advanced position at the peach orchard taken by your corps and under your orders saved that battlefield to the Union cause."

Among others who upheld Sickles was Gen. Phil Sheridan, this according to Sir Edward Creasey, author of "Decisive Battles of the World." On page 450 of that immense work Sir Edward writes:

"Whether or not Sickles blundered will not be argued here. Meade condemned; other good authorities have approved, among them Sheridan, who regarded as just Sickles' claim that the line marked out by Meade was untenable."

Gen. Sickles was retired as a major general in 1869 and appointed minister to Spain. His career thenceforward turned out to be as full and exciting as it had been previously.

In Madrid, in 1871, he married Senorita Carmina Creagh. To them were born a daughter and a son, Stanton, the latter named after the man who had defended Sickles in the Key case. Laura, the daughter born of his first marriage, also lived with the general. During that period Spain was torn by revolution. Sickles went beyond the duties of a foreign diplomat. He aligned himself with one faction, and for a time became practically the ruler of Spain. Home newspapers dubbed him the "Yankee King of Spain." Eventually, and following complications arising out of the Virginius affair, Sickles was recalled.

Sickles was now rather a gruff and tumultuous gentleman, and was being dogged by domestic troubles. Laura, his first child, wanted to marry a Spanish nobleman who was penniless. Sickles would not permit this. He and Laura became estranged. The epilog of this girl's story was more tragic than her mother's. She returned to New York, squandered a fortune of $100,000 in fast living, and died alone. A wreath from Sickles was his only testimonial.

In 1880 Sickles' Spanish wife left him and returned to Spain. They did not see each other again for more than thirty years. But meantime Sickles had continued active in public affairs.

In 1886 he became chairman of the New York state monument commission, in 1888 chairman of the New York civil service commission, in 1890 sherif of Kings county, and in 1893 congressman. Curiously, his greatest service to New York evolved not from these positions but from his position as corporation counsel early in the '50s when he acquired and established Central park.

As the years piled upon the warrior, the fates, too, continued to pile. In 1912 he was relieved from the monuments commission on a charge of mishandling funds. His domestic and financial woes deepened. But the doughty general—he was nearly 90 then—refused to bat an eye. He fought back. In the worst of his crises his Spanish wife returned, with offers of help. He had not seen her since 1880. As she entered his office he eyed her carefully, then shook his head:

"My, how fat you've grown!" he commented.

He refused her help; he denied a reconciliation.

He died on May 3, 1914, verily a veteran of fate.

Mostly About Dogs

Retrievers an Aid to Conservation

THERE are certain breeds of dogs in America today that have a definite relationship to the problem of conservation. Although one might not think of dogs as aids in the conservation of bird life, it is an acknowledged fact that a well trained retriever, capable of marking, finding, and retrieving a crippled bird, is a tremendous help in reducing the appalling loss of crippled birds that never are recovered by hunters.

A sportsman who uses a dog to find crippled game is making a real contribution toward conservation. The shooter who willfully wastes game by not making every effort to find a crippled bird or by not employing a good dog logically can be accused of shooting more birds than he should in order to fill his daily bag limit.

We have hunted upland game and waterfowl from Alaska to the Amazon. Therefore we believe we have some idea of how easy it is to lose wing-tipped birds in brush, heavy sloughs, and marshes. We also have a pretty accurate idea of how many millions of ducks are killed that never reach the sportsman's bag, because we have had government authorities give us their facts on the question. The losses run into the millions every year.

This year waterfowl hunters again have to watch their shooting and their kills, because the flocks of ducks and geese in America are not yet back to normal. Regulations are in effect to give the ducks a chance to add to their breeding stock. So again the urge is to waste as few birds as possible. If we go into a marsh, shoot at ducks, are careless or lazy about retrieving cripples, or do not use a retriever to get birds that we hit, we are wasting ducks in a year when every effort is being made to give sportsmen a little fun but at the same time conserve birds.

As authorities have pointed out many times, the use of a dog capable of navigating in soupy mud, cold water, and heavy aquatic vegetation to retrieve ducks is a conservation measure. Even the biological survey has sent out a call asking duck hunters to use dogs to "get that cripple." When you figure that our annual loss of ducks owing solely to nonrecovery of wounded birds runs into the millions, it is evident that American sportsmen are not employing enough retrievers as companions and practical aids in hunting.

That powerful American breed known as the Chesapeake Bay retriever, the speedy Labrador retriever, the funny looking but stouthearted Irish water spaniel, the golden retriever (as yet but little known in America), and flat and curly coated retrievers are the breeds classed as retrievers by the American Kennel club and are eligible to run in retriever trials. But there are other breeds, of course, that can help the sportsman find crippled birds. There are a number of retriever organizations in the east, where many sportsmen are breeding retrievers.

To emphasize the work of the "duck dogs," promote the interests of these breeds, and urge the need for sportsmen to use retrievers in the middle west, a comparatively new club known as the Midwest Field Trial club was organized last year. It is the only club west of the Atlantic coastal region that is promoting the interests of all breeds of retrievers and the membership of which is open to owners of every kind of retriever recognized by the American Kennel club.

Most dog clubs are concerned with one breed. They do a lot of good work for those breeds, and the more clubs of that sort organized the better it is for the world of dogs. But in the Midwest club an Irish water spaniel fancier works alongside owners of Chesapeakes, Labradors, and goldens, because the object of the club is to help all of these retrievers become better known and appreciated.

In order to demonstrate the work of retrievers the Midwest club staged a field trial near Barrington, Ill., last fall. Licensed by the A. K. C. and awarding championship points, it was the first of its kind held west of the Atlantic coast. A large entry with many eastern dogs, excellent judging, superb shooting by the official guns, and thrilling dog work drew a record-breaking crowd.

On Oct. 24-25, 1936, a second field trial will be held, according to an announcement made recently by the officers of the club. Indications are that between fifteen and twenty eastern Labradors and Chesapeakes will be here to compete against western dogs. The officers of the Midwest club are James B. Meigs, president; A. W. Harris, first vice president; Gordon P. Kelley, second vice president; William Walker, secretary-treasurer; Martin Hogan, Bob Becker, and William Walker, field trial committee.

Owners of retrievers who wish to enter their dogs in the coming trial are advised to communicate with William Walker at 604 Courtland avenue, Park Ridge, Ill. Mr. Walker will be glad to advise retriever owners, duck clubs, or others on questions involving field trial entries, retriever training, use of retrievers for upland game shooting, and other problems about the breeds. Or you may write this department. We have hunted over Chesapeake Bay retrievers, Irish water spaniels, and Labradors. We have seen goldens work in the field and in water. So we have a pretty good idea of what these retrievers can do and for what kind of field work they are preëminently fitted.

One thing that sportsmen in the United States apparently have to learn about the retriever group is that they can be used for upland game hunting as well as for water work. For example, you can use a trained Chesapeake for duck work one week-end and take the same dog on an upland game hunt the following week to find and retrieve dead or crippled game birds. In fact, these retrievers can be trained to work ahead of a gun to find and flush pheasants. In Canada we used an Irish water spaniel for water work on one of our hunts for canvasbacks. The same dog was used for Hungarian partridge shooting, because it had been trained to work close to the gun to flush game.

Last fall we were on a hunt for pheasants with a pair of Labradors working ahead of the guns to flush the birds. Thus these powerful dogs known as retrievers can be put to work in many ways by American sportsmen. But their biggest value, of course, is their ability to work in rough weather, in cold water, and in heavy vegetation to find wing-tipped birds that otherwise would be lost. Several of the breeds in particular have the weight, strength, power, and water-resisting coats to withstand the most severe weather conditions in the field.

An Irish water spaniel. Although a spaniel, this breed is classed with the retrievers when it competes in a field trial. The Irish water spaniel is another efficient water dog for the waterfowl hunter.

APARTMENT HOUSE COUPLES

By W. E. Hill

Copyright, 1936, by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Syndicate, Inc.

The couple with the dog. Has strong likes and dislikes, as his master and mistress will tell you. "You mustn't be afraid of him, for then he will bite you," they say to the elevator boys and the doorman, which doesn't reassure them.

The very loving couple who never pull the shades and are a great source of enjoyment to people living across the court. Especially to those tenants who own good binoculars.

The couple with the children. Getting in and out of the elevator on a pleasant day is as much effort as starting for Europe.

The very domestic couple. Only recently married. They have a swell time playing house and are proudest of the kitchenette, which has so many gadgets you can hardly bear it. Such as an electric dishwasher that toots when dishes are cleaned enough, etc.

The belligerent couple. They know their rights if no one else does. Have a permanent feud with the superintendent about hot water and the nondelivery of bundles. Continually warring with families above and below about noise from radios, things dropped from windows, and the pounding of nails after 10 P. M. (Here they are in the realtor's office, waiting to upbraid the agent for not keeping his word about the bathroom ceiling.)

The couple who give the late parties. These gatherings are at their best about 3 A. M. Much frantic telephoning from other tenants who can't sleep through it, followed by a call in person from the superintendent. Next day they are very contrite and promise "it won't happen again."

The penthouse couple. Though the space is limited, they manage to include all the trimmings of a hacienda or a house on the Riviera. And do they undress the part when the sun shines!

The jealous couple. For days everything will be peaceful, and then there will be a big evening. Fraught with screams, scuffling, crashes, and loud upbraiding by one or the other. Neighbors try to figure out whether they are not married at all, or very much married and just terribly in love.

What's New in World of Airplanes and Air Transportation

Cause of Fatal Crack-Up Is Explained

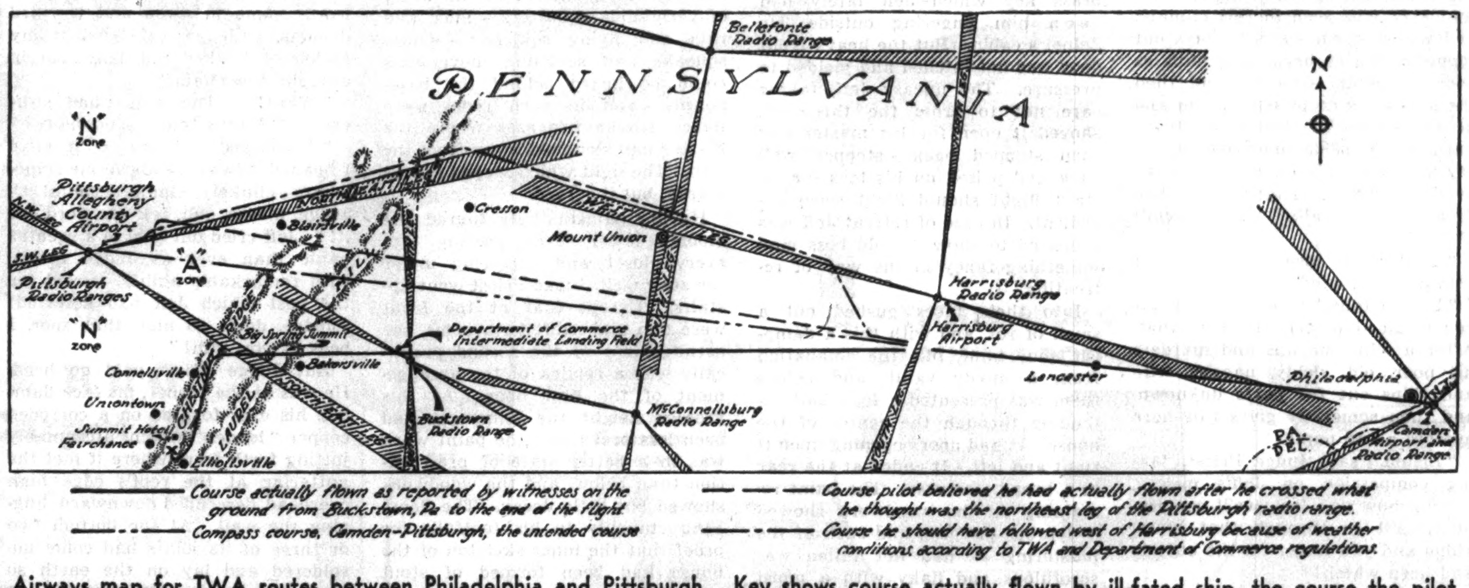
By WAYNE THOMIS

A RECONSTRUCTION of the flight last April 7 of a Transcontinental and Western Air Douglas DC-2 transport plane, which ended in a crash on the granite slopes of Chestnut ridge, three miles south of Fairchance, Pa., and the death of twelve of the fourteen persons aboard, was completed recently by investigators for the bureau of air commerce. Their ideas of what happened and why are retold here.

Because of space limitations the stories carried in the columns of the daily newspapers the day after the report was released stated merely that Pilot Otto Ferguson, who was killed in the crash, had, in the opinion of the investigators, made errors of judgment. The entire report in condensed form is reprinted here in order that all interested in flying can understand the various elements which entered into the tragedy.

Ferguson commanded flight No. 1, designated the Sun Racer, which left Newark airport, the New York City field, at 7:54 a. m., bound for Los Angeles. The first stop was Camden airport, Philadelphia's commercial field, at 8:27 a. m. The ship left Camden at 8:35 and was scheduled to land at Pittsburgh-Allegheny county airport at 10:23 a. m. The co-pilot was Harry C. Lewis of Kansas City, Mo., and Miss Nellie H. Granger was stewardess.

Between Camden and Pittsburgh the ship was to cross the Allegheny ridges, which reach altitudes of 3,000 feet. On this day there were heavy cloud banks at altitudes between 2,500 and 15,000 feet. There were rain, sleet, and low temperatures conducive to formation of ice on airplane wings and propellers. Ferguson's ship, however, was equipped with de-icers on all surfaces, and flying conditions were not considered to be hazardous for an airplane so protected.



Airways map for TWA routes between Philadelphia and Pittsburgh. Key shows course actually flown by ill-fated ship, the course the pilot believed he was following, the compass course the pilot intended to follow, and the bad-weather route. The cross indicates point of the crash.

Before leaving Newark, Pilot Ferguson, like all other air line pilots, was required to draw up his "flight plan." This, reviewed after the accident, showed he proposed to fly from Camden direct to Pittsburgh on a compass course—procedure regularly followed except when weather conditions prevent flying by observation of landmarks.

In this event, according to both TWA and air commerce bureau regulations, pilots are required to alter course so that the plane follows the right-hand side of the Harrisburg radio range and the right-hand side of the northeast leg of the Pittsburgh range. The investigators say radio reports from the plane and testimony of witnesses show the course of flight No. 1 was not altered in accordance with these requirements after Ferguson ascended into the clouds.

This ascent occurred after the plane crossed the south leg of the Harrisburg radio range. Ferguson left proof that he did not alter his course to follow the west leg of the Harrisburg range by reporting to the TWA ground station at Cresson, Pa., at 9:30 a. m., that he had crossed the south leg of the Bellefonte, Pa., radio range "south of the west leg of the Harrisburg range."

Then at 9:49 a. m. the pilot reported crossing the north leg of the Buckstown, Pa., radio range in the "A" twilight zone of the Pittsburgh radio range. This placed him somewhere south of the northeast leg of the Pittsburgh range.

Radio equipment aboard Ferguson's ship picked up the signals of the various radio range beacons shown on the map reproduced here. Each time he crossed one of the "on course" bands as shown he was given a positive check on his progress westward. These checks, however, did not show him his drift to the north or south, if any. Because he was not flying any definite "on course" path of a radio range, he could not know his exact position.

The investigators found employés at the air commerce bureau emergency landing field one mile north and two miles west of the Buckstown radio range who heard a multi-engined airplane flying slightly south of the field and in a westerly direction at 9:50 a. m. These employés were experienced men who "have been observing aircraft in that area for seven years."

These men gave testimony that the plane was not of the type used by Pennsylvania Air Lines or Central Air Lines—two commercial transport companies whose planes fly over that region daily. The report of the investigators concludes on this point: "This testimony satisfactorily establishes that the plane referred to by these witnesses was flight 1, as all other aircraft known to have been in the air and in that area within the period concerned have otherwise been accounted for."

At 10 o'clock Ferguson reported by radio that he estimated his position as over Chestnut ridge. This shows also that he was not flying the northeast leg of the Pittsburgh beam, but was still flying his own compass course.

Meanwhile Ferguson had established contact with another TWA ship, flight 21, bound nonstop from Newark to Pittsburgh and due to arrive there about the same time as flight 1. Flight 21, according to the pilot, R. M. Larson, crossed the north leg of the Buckstown range at 9:51, while flying the right side of the northeast leg of the Pittsburgh range. This crossing was made only two minutes after Ferguson had crossed the same range leg.

In his 10 o'clock report Ferguson gave his altitude as 3,800 feet. The last report from Ferguson came at 10:09 a. m. and was to the airport control tower at Pittsburgh. The pilot gave his estimated position as ten miles east of Pittsburgh, his altitude as 3,000 feet (indicating he was gradually letting down through the clouds), and stating that he was flying on instruments.

Ferguson asked at that time for positions of other ships and clearance to land. The information and clearance were given. In acknowledging receipt of the information Ferguson told the control tower, which has a range of roughly thirty-five miles, "You are very weak." The airport ceiling at that time was 1,700 feet.

Witnesses on the ground at Big Springs Summit saw a large silver gray airplane flying through the lower edge of the clouds at a time given as between 10 o'clock and 10:30. The altitude of the Summit is 2,900 feet, and the investigators believe those on the ground saw Ferguson's ship at 10 o'clock when he was reporting his position over Chestnut ridge and his altitude 3,800 feet.

The airplane was again seen from the ground in the vicinity of Connellsville, which is about thirty miles southeast of Pittsburgh airport, at 10:10 a. m. One minute before the pilot had talked to the airport control tower, saying the reception was weak. This was not strange, since Connellsville is at the extreme limit of the signal range from the airport control transmitter.

At this time the plane was traveling in a southerly direction about two miles due east of Connellsville. Other witnesses saw the ship, and their stories indicate Ferguson was trying to keep ground contact and avoid the higher hills. His ship was skimming just above the treetops. Fog obscured the higher peaks, and a light, freezing rain was falling. His course here led up a small valley.

The report continues:

"At the point where the airplane turned west up another small valley its altitude was estimated by witnesses as approximately 100 feet above the ground, and at that height it could only be seen intermittently. This valley is a ravine on the southeast side of Chestnut ridge, which curves toward the north and ascends as it approaches the summit.

"Apparently at the end of the ravine the pilot was suddenly confronted with the ridge directly ahead, the top of which evidently he could not see, due to fog and clouds. A check of this terrain relative to the altitude at which the airplane was seen to be flying just previously shows that to clear the ridge the plane would need to climb 650 feet in approximately three-quarters of a mile."

This rate of climb is far greater than the maximum climb of the Douglas DC-2. Ferguson was in a pocket from which he never escaped. Probably the pilot realized his danger, but by that time he was trapped. He could not turn to retrace his course in the narrow valley, and, as the report stated, his forward progress led him to the wall of the ridge.

The report closes with the statement: "This climb, turning to the right with the ravine, took the airplane into the low-hanging clouds, thus further obscuring the pilot's vision. At a point approximately on top of the ravine the airplane, still turning to the right, struck a series of trees and came to a stop 1,200 feet beyond the first tree hit."

Shortly after Ferguson's plane crashed, Larson in flight 21 arrived at Pittsburgh and landed safely. There were other ships in the air that day flying between Cleveland and Washington, and none of them had difficulty in orienting itself on the radio range beacons, indicating that all protests about the improper working of the beacons must be discounted.

Aside from Ferguson's failure to follow regulations of his own company and the air commerce bureau for bad-weather flying between Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, his chief error was of misjudging his drift. It is now estimated that while in the fog his plane followed a course eight degrees off the line of flight he intended to follow.

When he crossed the southeast leg of the Pittsburgh beam, as shown on the map, he undoubtedly believed he had contacted the northeast leg of the same range. His turn south and his descent before positively identifying his position with relation to the Pittsburgh field completed his series of mistakes.

There was no evidence of malfunctioning of radio, engines, or airplane.

Judge Priest Turns Detective

By Irvin S. Cobb

The Trail Followed by the Slow, Persistent Old Judge Leads Him to a Fantastic Abandoned Mansion on a Lonely Site—"Tarvin's Folly," It's Called

THE STORY TO DATE

Judge Priest promises pretty young Virginia Landrum, daughter of wealthy parents in a small Kentucky town, that he will win her father's approval of her sweetheart, Wally Bledsoe. Next morning Virginia has disappeared. Traces of a struggle in the swamp lands of Buzzard's Tail tell she had been abducted by two men. Bailey Reynolds, Mrs. Landrum's nephew, offers his assistance in the search. Judge Priest privately follows clews of his own apart from Chief of Police Mallory. Wally Bledsoe can't be found for several days. When he returns from a camping trip Judge Priest satisfies himself the boy isn't guilty and prevents his arrest. The judge has Wally and Sherif Giles Birdsong do some secret investigating for him. Gabe Pitts, mulatto servant at the Landrum home, tells the judge he has discovered a clew and will call at his home that night, when he is frightened off by Brother Coxey, eccentric cult leader, befriended by the Landrums. Next day Gabe Pitts has disappeared. A farmer brings a message to Mr. Landrum, supposedly from Virginia, which he says he was paid to deliver. Gabe Pitts is found murdered. A letter from the kidnapers demands that $100,000 be brought to Detroit. Bailey Reynolds is nominated to take the money. The night before Bailey is to leave he telephones Judge Priest that Tip Zelner, town ne'er-do-well, is bringing him information. The judge finds Zelner shot outside his home.

INSTALMENT VI.

OF ALL days Judge Priest chose the very next day for his long-deferred fishing excursion. By a margin of fully fifteen minutes it wasn't seven o'clock when he and Jeff rode across town, bamboo poles protruding like couchant spears from the back of the car, a minnow bucket and a cocoon of rolled-up minnow nets underfoot, a most disreputable coat on Judge Priest's back, an equally disgraceful hat upon his head, and—strange complement for angling—an electric flashlight burdening his flank.

A brace of citizens, meeting on the corner of Clay and Franklin, stood in mild amazement to watch them pass.

"Well, what do you make out of that?" inquired the first of these early risers. "Here, with the daughter of one of his best friends still bein' held by kidnapers, and on top of that Tip Zelner gettin' bumped off last night almost, as you might say, on his own doorstep, and the whole country buzzin' like a stirred-up beehive, that befuddled old codger goes skyhootin' off after a mess of perch. It beats me. He must be slippin' into his dotage."

The travelers in the tinpanny car penetrated the southern outskirts of the town and took the Memphis highway. About four miles down, well on past the semi-tropical, poisonous green verges of Buzzard Tail swamp, Judge Priest gave a command.

"Swing in yonder to the left, Jeff," he said. These were almost the only words he had spoken since starting.

"But, Jedge, that ain't the quickest way to git to Moundbuilder creek," expostulated Jeff.

"Do like I'm tellin' you, boy," said Judge Priest. "Did I say anythin' about goin' fishin'?"

"But you p'intedly told me to have the fishin' gears ready and waitin' when you got up." Jeff scratched a puzzled head.

"Mebbe that wuz fur appearances' sake, goin' through town," said Judge Priest, and vouchsafed no further explanation for his whim. "Git the p'int?"

Judge Priest seemed more concerned with getting to where he was going than with the spring beauties which engulfed him. He bent forward, making sure there were no fresh tire tracks in the earth, proof that thus far today the road had not been traversed by another car.

"Nobody been along here ahead of us since yistiddy, anyhow," he said with a satisfied air.

"Well, ez I recollect, ain't nobody lives in this yere daid-end 'ceptin' Mista Tip Zelner, and he don't live nowheres no more, account of bein' daid sence last night," said Jeff.

"It's his cabin we're headin' fur now," stated Judge Priest. "I'm sort of pleased we're goin' to reach said destination before somebody in authority comes to take possession of the tangible assets of the deceased."

The journey ended when they emerged from the blossoming fringe upon an irregular and unsightly opening of perhaps an acre in scope, a blemished patch which was all the more forlorn by reason of the scalloped ramparts of loveliness encompassing it. Herein, propped on tottering log foundations, stood a lopsided dwelling, shedlike and moldy, with a decrepit lean-to clinging to it, a woodpile and a well box adjacent, and at one side of it an "arbor" of dead oak boughs under which a car might, in a rough way of speaking, be sheltered.

"You stay here," said Judge Priest. "Ef it's necessary to commit burglary gittin' into this shack, no need fur you to be implicated in the crime."

No housebreaking was necessary. The slab door stood ajar. So Judge Priest entered and took visual inventory of the premises. The front half of the shanty had been the dead man's sleeping place. It was littered and untidy, giving off a fusty odor. The back room was for cooking and eating. There was an infirm stove here, and a deal table and a wall cupboard. The lean-to housed little else than a forge and an anvil and a heavy tool kit, these being relics, no doubt, of the days when the late Tip Zelner had followed the farrier's trade.

HAVING completed his general survey, the venerable prowler bestowed a more specialized attention upon certain crannies and certain articles. In the bedroom he poked among the cold ashes of a sooty fireplace and exhumed some half-tindered scraps of note paper. He sorted these charred fragments and folded them and kept them. He ran exploratory fingers along the cluttered mantelpiece, and rummaged through the stale contents of the kitchen cupboard, and searched a home-made wardrobe wherein there were various frowsy and smelly garments. Out in the smithy a short strand of heavy twisted wire cable appeared to intrigue him, possibly because it was the only new looking object in a miscellaneous collection of odds and ends of ironmongery, but he did not remove it for closer scrutiny from the peg on which it snakily dangled. He couldn't raise the lid of the tool chest; he tried to, but it was securely padlocked.

When, after perhaps fifteen minutes, he came forth from the cabin, he was swinging on one finger a big antique brass key. At once he pouched this in a pocket, which from its swollen and bulgy aspect Jeff figured must hold other items of salvage.

"Come on," he called out. "No, no, leave the fishin' poles be. Looks like now the fishin', ef any, mout be indefinitly postponed. And let's hurry."

Choked with curiosity, but too wise in his own generation to ask questions now, Jeff trailed along as Judge Priest crossed the dooryard and at its farther side struck off into a faint footpath almost buried in the undergrowth beneath tall trees.

"See that fascinatin' oddity yonder?" said Judge Priest puffily, he having halted to catch up with his breathing.

"Shorely, Jedge, shorely to Gawd, you ain't fixin' to go no nigher to it 'n whut we is now?" implored Jeff.

"Well, fur why else should we traipse all this long scope?" said Judge Priest. "Think this is a pleasure jaunt?"

"Jedge, suh, please!"

"O, I know the crazy talk that's been goin' 'round for thirty-odd years,' said Judge Priest; "know it ez well ez you do—and mebbe better. Whut of it? Old man Jeremiah Tarvin goes crazy with vanity and out on this remote site he builds himself the biggest house in the country—and the homeliest! Bein' a miser in some regards and a profligate in others, he spares no expense to set up the thickest walls that ever wuz seen in this climate, and within them walls he lays out rooms ez big ez barns and halls ez wide as public streets. And then the stinginess crops out in him and he scrimps on the rest of it, so it's finished off inside more like a livery stable than a home fur human bein's to live in. That's when they first started callin' it 'Tarvin's Folly.'"

"That ain't 'specially whut-all I wuz meanin', suh."

"I keep tellin' you I know whut you mean—I'm jest comin' to that. After a while he ups and murders his poor, old, sickly, naggin' wife and skips out fur parts unknown, and then somebody gives this here eyesore a bad name."

"Listen," said Judge Priest, taking compassion on Jeff's misery, "seein' how you feel, we'll compromise. I'll go through that house alone and you linger on the outside and keep watch!"

"Keep watch fur whut, suh?" Jeff's ears twitched.

"Fur anybody that might come snoopin' around whilst I'm inside. Well, let's git goin'."

So Jeff got going. But his heart wasn't at all in it.

As well as might be judged without taking actual measurements, the house formed an exact square, and it faced west toward wooded bottoms. Close up, it revealed itself as having two stories, with a mansarded cap piece. There was no basement, but even so the headroom for each floor obviously was so great and the garret space beneath the roof so lofty that the house, instead of having squattiness, seemed unduly tall and peaky. The double hips of the mansard were unbroken by either dormers or skylights, and this freakish omission gave the upper stretches of expanse under the slightly outjutting cornices a curious blank expression, like a face lacking eyes and having merely the faint suggestion of eyebrows.

Presumably his native thrift had palsied the owner's hand before his portico was done, so he left it undone and between the bracketing of the useless columns inserted a flimsy piazza now all crazily askew.

Some of the windows had been boarded up. Others, having lost their blinds, showed as grinning square frames with shattered glass in the decayed sashes. At the rear there had been a low, long edifice of logs, containing kitchen and pantry and storerooms, and, in accordance with the now almost obsolete fashion for southern country places, entirely detached from the main structure. Long before this domestic annex had collapsed into its own cellar in a tangled heap of mildewed timber and crumbly hand-riven shingling. Getting around to the front door, the judge and Jeff skirted this separate clump of ruin.

AS THE old man climbed upon the infirm and teetering porch he felt the big brass key which Jeff lately had seen him fingering outside Tip Zelner's cabin. But the heavy front door was not latched and yielded to pressure. The uneasy Jeff, taking care not to cross the threshold, shoved it open for his master and then stepped back—stepped well back and poised on his toes for instant flight should flight seem expedient. In case of retreat Jeff was prepared to show his old boss man something fancy in the way of retreating.

Into their faces gushed out a smell of rot, and with this a dampish, sour taint, like the emanation from a moldy vault, and before them was presented a long hall extending through the center of the house. It had doors opening upon it right and left. It ended at the rear in a broad staircase. The paint remaining on the woodwork showed in leprous patches, and such of the plastering as had not fallen was scrofulous and flaky with a moist looking mildew. There were whole batteries of rat holes in the wainscoting, and from the high ceilings dangled cobwebs, clotted thick with the dust of years.

"Somebody done been here right lately, suh," said Jeff in a shaky whisper, pointing to a crisscrossing of indentations where heavy feet had crunched the trash piles of plastering upon the floor.

"One of the posses we sent out last week had special orders to ransack this here bat cave frum top to bottom."

"Seem lak, then, that oughter be amply sufficient," urged Jeff. "Jedge, won't you, please, suh, change your mind 'bout whut you's fixin' to do?"

"I told you jest a little while back I wuzn't countin' on the pleasure of your company past this p'int."

"I ain't worryin' so much 'bout myse'f. I's worryin' 'bout the risks you's takin', perambulatin' through this yere gashly ole shebang all alone. Jedge, they's a curse laid on this whole neighborhood. You kin feel it, and you kin whiff it, and you kin mouty nigh taste it. Jedge, please, suh, come on 'way from yere now!"

"Never mind me. I bet I'd have soothin' ways when it came to dealin' with ghosts. Let's see, now, where 'bouts had I better post you whilst I'm inside? Yonder at that right-hand corner—that's the spot! Frum there you kin watch back the way we jest came, and also you kin keep an eye peeled out along the line of that old lane goin' out toward Concord church."

Before he finished giving the instructions Jeff was in motion. Some small, furtive creature scuffled in the masking of creepers alongside him, and Jeff jumped fully six feet and clutched inside his shirt for a luck charm that he wore on a string about his neck.

The ground floor, Judge Priest very soon found, was laid out according to a most simple plat. Its main divisions consisted of six huge, drafty rooms set three and three along the central hallway. All were entirely empty except for an army of verminous squatters—mice and rats and flying squirrels—whose squeaks and scuttling movements could be heard behind the baseboards—and in each room were naked riblike expanses where the plaster had sloughed away from the lath. The light which seeped in was scanty, but it served.

Having painstakingly toured the gloomy lower level, peering into every closet and exploring under the stair well, Judge Priest went upstairs. Except that at the front were two makeshift bathrooms, the arrangement of the second practically was a replica of the arrangement of the first floor. At this greater height the dampness had been less prevalent; the paint work was in a better state of preservation than below, and the woodwork showed but little decay. The floors rang stanchly to his footfalls for proof that the inner skeleton of the house had been formed of stout and enduring materials, and, as the searcher already knew, the outer construction was fortresslike in its solidity.

Nowhere on this floor, any more than downstairs, were there obscure recesses or intricacies of scheme. Unlike its mate below, the upper hallway did not terminate in a staircase. But there must be some means of access to the space under the roof. Poking about in the somber false twilight which enveloped him, Judge Priest soon found a narrow cross-passage abutting on one of the two central chambers, and in this cutoff cuddy was a wide-runged ladder running up to where the flat underjambs of a closed hatchway showed in the ceiling.

The old man mounted the ladder, and, straining hard, he pushed the trapdoor up and wriggled through, first flipping the bulb of the flashlight which he had brought with him. He needed its aid, for inasmuch as the garret lacked casements or bull's-eyes, it would have been in inky blackness were it not for a few tiny crevices here and there where the warped shingles had parted so that a little sunshine filtered through to pick up the dancing dust motes and make a minute yellow patchwork design upon the floor boards.

Where he had emerged the judge sent the pencil of illumination from his electric torch darting here and there. This space, he told himself, was commodious enough for a skating rink. The shifting shaft of light picked up festoonings of cobwebs on the rafters and brought out an interlacing fore and aft of scaffolding, as though the builder originally had intended to install bins or storage spaces and midway of it had abandoned the undertaking. Other than for these duplicated mazes of incomplete framework the cavernous loft absolutely was bare. Because sheathings of joined planking covered all four of the walls, no masonry was visible.

So that, it seemed, was all there was to be seen. Nevertheless Judge Priest advanced to the middle of the place and, revolving slowly, let the flash play upon every quarter. He remained there for a short space of time, a perplexed frown upon his face.

He was at the end of his tether. If indication of recent human occupancy within this place had been the object of his hunt, he must confess disappointment, utter defeat. Silently he did confess it. However, it was not altogether this failure which continued to torment him as he wriggled through the trap and started back down toward the friendly outdoors. For there abode with him an elusive feeling of something somewhere in this house being out of key—a vague sense of disproportion. He couldn't put his mental finger on it; he only felt that he felt it. It beset him like the figment of a dream which persists after the dreamer is awake.

In a faint hope of solving the riddle—if there was any riddle—he thoroughly researched the two lower levels, groping again into every odd corner. No faintest clew rewarded him. So it must be, he told himself, a delusion born of these yawning and odorous surroundings. For assuredly no interior could have been more frankly aboveboard in its patterning.

Well, that was that. He gave up. He hobbled out between those dropsical columns which framed the lower-floor entrance and, half blinded by the morning brightness after his sojourn in so much gloom, he peered to the right. But Jeff was not at the post to which he had been assigned. Judge Priest took off his glasses and wiped them and looked again and grunted his annoyance.

FROM down the hillock there was a tremulous hail, and, turning that way, he saw above a clump of neglected shrubbery Jeff's agonized face set on a swaying neck. Jeff was as pale as any person of Jeff's pigmentation ever could be. In other words, Jeff's skin was about the color of wet wood ashes.

"Whut's the matter with you now?" the judge demanded crossly. "Why didn't you stay where I put you?"

"Name o' Gawd, please, suh, come on 'way from there!" quavered Jeff frantically. "Jedge, ole lady Tarvin's ha'nt done start stirrin' by day jest lak I perdicted it would. Jedge, I heahed her!"

"Heared her 'way out there in that yard?"

"Naw, suh, but tha's why I's out yere now. I heahed her jest a few minutes ago when I wuz standin' perzackly whar you told me to stand."

"O, shuckins, Jeff, you heard some varmint rustlin' amongst these here vines, or else a chimney swift scootin' up and down a flue."

"Naw suhree, 'twasn't no sich noise ez that fool me, Jedge." The words came in awed and terrified driblets. "Jedge, ez Gawd is my Maker, I heahed old lady Tarvin draggin' her chain."

"Whut!" The judge had stiffened. "Whut's that? You shore?"

"Jedge, jest ez shore ez I'm alive I heahed it 'way up above me somewhars—clinkety, clank, kerblim! O, Jedge, please, suh, tek my word fur it!" Jeff cried out now in a greater panic than ever as Judge Priest, with remarkable agility, moved for the post which Jeff had deserted: "Jedge, don't go nigh that spot, I begs of you, suh!"

But Judge Priest paid no heed. He was at the corner, his face flaming, his eyes focused on a corroded copper "leader" which, presumably jutting forth from where it met the guttering at the roof's edge high overhead, descended downward, hugging the wall. At the bottom two or three of its joints had come unsoldered and lay on the earth so that its present mouth was now at a level with an average man's shoulders. Judge Priest clouted with his fist on it. It gave off a hollow ringing note, proving it was not choked; proving, too, it was a good enough sound conductor. Judge Priest put his ear to the ragged orifice and listened intently. Although he heard nothing except the gentle buzz of air confined in the pipe, yet apparently he was gratified by the result of his examination.

At any rate as he hastened back toward the porch his voice rang like a clarion blast from a cracked bugle:

"Jeff, dust over to that Zelner shack ez quick ez the Lord'll let you. Git an ax—I saw one on the woodpile, seems like. Git any other heavy tool you kin find. And rustle 'em here quick! Ef I'm not in sight when you git back I'll be upstairs somewheres—in the attic, I think."

"Jedge, don't ast me to put foot inside, 'case I jest p'intedly can't do it."

"Well, then, venture ez clost ez you dare and do some tall hollerin'. Be off!"

JEFF became a dark, swift streak, diminishing as he put space between him and this terrifying venue. In no time at all he had passed the boundary of the ruined lawn and was crossing the encompassing fringe of those untilled and untended farmlands.

As has heretofore been remarked, for one of his proportions and his years Judge Priest himself could move pretty fast. He moved pretty fast now. His breath began to give out before his legs did. He was blowing fit to shame a porpoise when he came, like an overgrown jack-in-the-box, through the scuttleway into the mansarded expanse at the top of the house.

With his flashlight showing him the way, he wriggled between the grime-crusted uprights and over or under the latticed crosspieces of the particular section of cribbing which encumbered the forward breadth of the attic. He figured that now he knew—indeed, was sure that now he knew—why so long before two seemingly vain clutters of riprapped framework had been installed, one at the front here, the other at the rear yonder, and then both left as they were, all unfinished. There had been deliberate purpose behind it, and that purpose, as now he saw, was to confuse and interrupt the sweep of the casual eye, thereby shielding the fact that the floor area actually was slightly out of balance. The house was on a four-square plan, but this attic, which pretended to conform to the contours of these honest dimensions, really did not. It was, the whole deceit now perceived, wider than it was long. So then there must be a false wall, counterfeiting an outer wall and extending across the front breadth. And behind that barrier, on into the cunningly separated segment from whence issued those daunting sounds which Jeff had heard, was where Judge Priest desired without delay straightway to go.

Yet when he had passed the wooden labyrinth and reached the wall it seemed dependably and honestly solid. He caught up a mill end of scantling and, using it as a maul, smote repeatedly the wooden sheathing. To these sturdy blows the structure gave back no answering ring. The response was so dead and flat that the jar of it stung the old man's hands. But he couldn't be wrong; it stood to reason he was right. There must be a way in; there just naturally had to be.

He began anew, starting at the nearer corner of the suspected wall and working to the opposite corner, thumping as he went. Nothing happened, though—no "give" to any of the boards upon which he pounded, no subdued tattoo to denote hollowness beyond.

Bewildered but persistent, he reached the other corner. He dealt the dumb surface before him a final whack and his eye caught just the faintest suggestion of springiness in one plank which, apparently for an added bracing, extended crosswise of the other uniformly up-and-down boards. He dropped his improvised rammer, and with the fingertips of the hand thus freed he pushed downward, then upward, on this plank. It firmly resisted the first effort, but at the second it wiggled ever so little, and then, under lifting pressure, it moved upward for perhaps an inch, and there in this inch-wide space was revealed a tiny hole with raggedy edges, as though gnawed by a mouse's teeth. But when Judge Priest stooped and turned the ray of his light full upon it he caught the gleam of a deeply inset rim of metal.

An Open Letter to Norma Shearer

Dear Norma: You can do the best dramatic work of your career, at least so far, if not in the long run, during the coming twelve to fifteen months. This is because of the highly creative and recreative vibrations which will be stimulated in your own equipment. It looks like a good time to do more pictures than usual, even though they be released much later. With best wishes, WYNN.

Cousin Eve Finds Peiping a City of Enchantment

Describes Glamorous Visit to Summer Palace of the Dowager Empress.

By Cousin Eve.

PEIPING, CHINA

One enchantment follows another these dreamy days and nights. The Sunday evening at Wan Shou San, or the summer palace, struck me as perfect. The weather was flawless. We were a dove party—men might have cramped this glamorous visit to the haunts of the "Old Buddha," or Hsu Tsi, the terrible empress dowager.

We drove seven miles to the east palace gate and left the car. Coolies disappeared with great packs on their backs. Our dinner, presumably. And Mrs. Calhoun's agreeable No. 2 boy Tu trailed us with baskets which later turned out to be an elaborate tea.

We visited one pretty palace after another, ravishing small pavilions, and came upon many reminders of the wicked life of the Boxer empress. Finally we arrived at a long paved walk by the lake, artfully cooled, an elongated pergola where Hsu Tsi took daily exercise, rain or shine, creeping along with all her ladies at a snail's pace. On the left was a vast mirrored lake heavily bordered with pink lotus lilies and on the horizon a charming island pavilion, reached by the lovely Bridge of the Seventeen Arches. The walk was strenuous, so at 5 o'clock we stopped at a delightful pavilion and—presto!—iced tea, cakes, and sandwiches appeared.

Dowager Had Famous Stone Boat Made Into Pavilion.

A while later we rounded a corner, and there was the famous stone boat, with rudder and side paddle floating on the water. The dowager had had it made into a pavilion, a real Victorian atrocity with plenty of stained glass. It has been called "the Chinese navy." It seems that in 1889 when Kuang Hsu became emperor he was encouraged by Li Hung Chang to take 40 million taels, set aside for a strong navy, to prepare the summer palace as a place of retirement for the dowager empress. This diversion of funds left the Chinese navy in a state of complete unpreparedness when war with Japan broke out in 1894. And the dowager did not retire, but put Emperor Kuang Hsu in prison.

Here Mrs. Calhoun ordered Tu to charter a red barge lying among the lotus leaves, and after a little badinage with the four boatmen, who said the lilies were too thick to pole us through, we embarked. The head man was a hardy, wrinkled old soul of over 80, with a large fan stuck in at the nape of his blue tunic. He had been a boatman for the dowager empress, and we gathered that he infinitely preferred the old times.

Ours was a lotus strewn path that encircled a small island. It was a fascinating voyage, and great pink lotus flowers with gorgeous satin leaves were often our booty. We landed at a flight of ancient steps, stepped through a white gate round as the moon, and found ourselves back of the ruins that once were the famous old summer palace, burned by Lord Elgin in 1860. Then we crossed a bridge alluringly humped with an exquisitely carved marble balustrade and continued our promenade.

Abandoned Imperial Fishing Village Is Melancholy Spot.

We saw beautiful white pines, white trunks, white branches, and long green needles. We climbed more hills and passed an imperial fishing village of many abandoned pavilions circling the shores of a deep, dark lake where lily pads lay. The waters are full of carp, and it is one of the sweetest, most melancholy pleasure places I ever have seen. Emperors of China fished here for many, many centuries.

Finally we climbed the highest hill, crowned by a pavilion with pillars of flaming Chinese red. Here was a supper table beautifully laid, the sun about to drop behind the western hills, and ourselves overcome with the sublime view over past imperial plaisances. There was no sound but the soft babble of the coolies.

It wasn't until 1900 that the diplomats and others started coming to the western hills. But since the year 619 a group of beautiful temples has flourished there. Eight temples, the outlines of which stand out against the pure blue of the morning sky, lie one above the other in a gorge known as "Blue-Green Tinted mountain." These places of worship have been built, embellished, and restored by imperial Mings and Manchus.

Ambassador Nelson Johnson Installed on Higher Terrace.

Mrs. Calhoun was first introduced to her temple, Lung Wang Tang, by the British ambassador in 1900, and her own lease has run many years. On the higher terrace of the same temple Ambassador Nelson Johnson is installed, and others sharing the holy place are Baron de Staal Holstein, a Russian, and a Chinese family. Lung Wang Tang dates to 916, period of the Liaos. Several emperors restored it up to 1424, when Yung Lo, builder of Peiping, gave it its present name and spent large sums for repairs.

The motor ride out was between lines of green willows. We left town by the Tartar wall, and soon there were camel caravans going and coming. Camels with babes trotting alongside. Camel gates, small at the bottom and wide at the top for the pack, adorned all the inns. There were donkey trains, too, and fields of green millet and corn. On the right we passed the burial place of Li, the favorite and adored eunuch of Hsu Tsi, whose terrible face and hideous personality figured in most of the crimes with which history now openly charges the dowager empress. Li was enormously wealthy in Peiping real estate, and lies now among old, old cedars.

Soon after we passed a marvelous pagoda and a neatly walled Buddhist nunnery. The scattered villages looked terribly poor, and were alive with brown, naked children. At the foot of the gorge were gay little cafés and lots of tiny donkeys with jingling harnesses. The car stopped there.

Describes Ascent to Summer Temple of Charming Hostess.

I hopped into a chair carried by four bearers. Mrs. Calhoun decided to climb, the little Lion dogs in faithful attendance. The going, any way one made it, was the roughest ever, but fascinating. The steady jog trot of the bearers made it seem like a horseback ride. First a stony path across the river bed, then a steep turn into a deep gorge. Huge boulders swirled down by violent spring mountain torrents diverted us into newer channels where the great flat stepping stones had lain a thousand years or more. We passed gnarled cedars and great numbers of fruit trees which in their spring masquerade make these hills a paradise.

After a final steep climb up the side cliff, we entered a small temple gate and stopped on a high terrace in front of my hostess' summer temple, one of the several that belong to Lung Wang Tang. There is her terrace, with matting over the granite blocks of the pavement, wicker tables and lounging chairs, and a direct view across to Peiping lying mistily on the horizon. Toward evening we saw clearly the amber yellow of the imperial roofs of the forbidden city gleaming among dark trees. There was a large, airy living room, several bedrooms, and at the rear, among flowers and trees, a darling court where we had breakfast, and servants' quarters for the four men who came to run this menage over the week-end.

A novel feature of our life was a constant stream of tourists of many lands who climbed the mountain with guides and donkeys and jangled along our wall. It is as friendly and informal as Italy. Harold Acton said that same thing to me, and he should know, having spent his life between London, Florence, and Peiping.

Visits Another Temple with Mrs. Calhoun the Same Day.

Late in the afternoon my hostess proposed we walk and visit a higher temple, Hsiang Chick Ssu, or Temple of the Fragrant World. Leased to the George Merrells of the American embassy, it formerly was used by Alexander Kirk, now in Rome, who furnished it wonderfully and gave many stunning parties in his day.

So we climbed across by stony donkey track from Tiger Head, our mountain, to a higher peak and to an older temple dating from 619. This is dedicated to the God of Happiness, a laughing, jelly-like idol. Flanking him, in the alcoves of the gate, are four hideous and terrifying guardians of the gate, ten feet high, gnashing their fangs and rolling savage eyes. Behind them in the courtyard are some of the oldest and grandest trees in China. Going up we passed several temple courts from terrace to terrace, each with exquisite old gardens and ancient latticed walls. One temple is the summer house of Helen Burton, a tall blonde American who has made a fortune in her famous shop in Peiping. Out of gratitude she has adopted four Chinese orphans and is bringing them up as her own.

A boy led us up through the garden of the Merrells' place, which is in three separate pavilions, and perched on top of the world. Mrs. Calhoun had sometimes dined with "Buffy" Kirk, driving out from Peiping and up and down the mountain by chair. The place looked like an Arabian Nights dream of beauty, for Mr. Kirk's knowledge of lighting and furnishing, in gorgeous simplicity and taste, virtually was unlimited.

George Merrells Met at a Dinner Last Winter.

The George Merrell romance still is recent in Peiping society. Mr. Merrell is first secretary of our embassy, and met his wife for the first time at a dinner last winter. She was Mrs. Natalie Bishop Choate of New York, and had taken a small house in Peiping for the winter with her young son. A romance budded at once, and the bride's aunt, Mrs. Moses Traylor of New York, arrived two months later in her yacht, in time to give a most stunning wedding breakfast for her captivating niece and the young diplomat.

Another New York family to arrive in a big way in Peiping are the Gibson Fahnestocks. They came in their sea-going yacht, which they keep at Hong Kong, and spent the late winter at the Wagon Lits hotel. Mrs. Fahnestock is a tall, chic woman with blue-white hair, her husband is most agreeable, and their Peiping popularity is established. They have taken, and are making over, a part of the vast old Russian embassy, dating from the 17th century, and propose to remain here until the name of Roosevelt is heard no more in the U. S. A.

Has Dinner at Temple of American Ambassador.

After our big climb to the Merrells' temple it seemed nothing at all to ascend at 8 o'clock to the American ambassador's temple for dinner, up two steep flights of stone stairs.

The Johnsons have a heavenly place, a wide, smoothly paved terrace, with here and there a superb tree. At the right hand end their beds are made up at night. In the middle are the tables and chairs of ceremony. Their children and guests sleep indoors.

And at the left the dining table is set, with the stone balustrade for serving table. We sat, after a delightfully served dinner, at the edge of the terrace, looking over the black void of the plain toward Peiping. Soft fresh air fanned us from tall pines. In the sky were myriads of stars, and on the horizon was the sparkle of the great city.

Far over to the right, the brilliant outline of the Marco Polo bridge shone like a spray of diamonds. Marco Polo crossed it in the 13th century. He writes eloquently: "When you leave the city of Cambaluc [Peking] and ride ten miles you come to a very large river called Pulisangkin which flows to the sea. Over this river is a fine stone bridge, so fine that it has few equals." He then describes minutely the marble slabs, columns, and lions of which the bridge is made, and indeed there are lions galore, dozens of little white marble lions riding on big white lions' backs.

Leaves Temple in Western Hills Early One Morning.

We left the little temple in the western hills early one Monday morning, pausing to say farewell to the deep, square pool lying among age old cedars and flowering shrubs in the priest's garden.

A sullen, square faced priest neither smiled nor returned our greeting. I felt like a chamois leaping down the mountain side from boulder to boulder, over the same path that I had taken in the sedan chair. Our ride in was uneventful, except when we met a police wagon containing "a robber," according to the No. 1 boy, excited like every one else over the holdups that had been going on in the western hills. Banditry is common in and about Peiping this year, and especially round the Ming tombs, a place where all tourists go. Lying in their own remote valley, at the ends of roads which are not roads but river beds or goat tracks, the place has grand possibilities for kidnaping.

August is the month when the Kaoliang grows tall in the fields, and the former soldiers or poor farmers who plan these crimes hide until the motors appear. A fortnight ago a motorful of tourists was stopped by shots from the grain field, and an American woman was dragged from the car as hostage. They were making off with her when a second car came up. A second American woman was dragged forth. She, however, had $60 [Mex.] and bought the freedom of the party. This incident cut the popularity of the Ming tombs, and now the government is policing it with artillery and what not. Perhaps!

Palace and Cool, Shady Court Lovelier than Ever.

We met dozens of camel trains, and the country looked fresh and washed palely green like spring. Mrs. William Calhoun's palace was more than ever lovely with its cool, shady court, and the rosy walls and red enamel pillars of the great living room. I took time to admire the beautiful old Chinese pictures of subtle, delicate color, and the wonderful bibelots she has assembled during her years in China.

The sightseeing of Peiping is another story, a long and hectic story. I have been six times to the Forbidden city, spending fifteen hours in all wandering among its courts and palaces. Several times Mrs. Calhoun was my guide, telling me past history as we wandered.

She was at the wedding ceremonies of the young emperor, now known as Emperor Henry Pu-Yi of Manchukuo. It took place in the small house of the morning, as do many Chinese rituals, and the diplomatic women watched it from the high palace walls. Mrs. Calhoun says that for beautiful pageantry, including horses, ancient armour, and trappings of imperial splendor, it was, with flaring flambeaux and marvelous lanterns, the most unforgettable of weddings. Surrounded by princes and mandarins arrayed in their most gorgeous attire, the beautiful bride, in snowy white trailing robes, was as exquisite as a lotus lily.

As we strolled through courts, gardens, and palaces we came upon a stone well with a red top. And here, said my charming guide, Chen Fee, the "Precious Concubine," favorite of Kuang Hsu, was drowned by the eunuch Tsui. The empress dowager, sitting on the stone coping of the little house nearby, watched the grim scene. The Precious, or Pearl, had protested against the deposition of the emperor, and this was her fate.

City Entered from North by Magnificent Double Gates.

The Forbidden city, a mile square, with roofs of imperial amber yellow, is entered from the north by magnificent double gates and a long exquisite court. Here are eighty green tanks filled with lovely tropical fish, of many kinds, sizes, colors.

Here, too, are pomegranate trees and gardenias. I came upon the bronze court and palace restored by the gift of the late Joy Morton. A little farther was the lovely jade palace and court saved by the generosity of Robert Allerton of Chicago. The sum of $1,000 in gold will keep for posterity many a crumbling piece of divine architecture in the Forbidden city.

On the west of the Forbidden city is the enchanting court and palace restored by Sir Miles Lamson's gift in memory of his wife. Here are Emperor Chien Lung's collections of small, beautiful things, tiny objects of art.

Most of the incomparably magnificent imperial furnishings and treasures have been removed to Nanking. Objects, to be sure, have been left, but only enough of them to camouflage the emptiness of the vast spaces.

The Palace of Heavenly Purity is the great thrill. Built by Yung Lo, it was used by four Ming emperors. In 1711 the Manchus had a Townsend plan, a banquet in the great hall for 1,000 men over 60. Another banquet in 1785 was given for 2,000 old men, when those over 90 were served by the emperor's sons.

Today I go en picnic to the Great Wall of China.

Peiping in summer is really lively. There is each hour some new facet to the great jewel which is the life of this town.

Paris Pattern Frock Suits Variety of Informal Events

No. 5156—The Paris pattern for this frock is available in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, and 20.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—You'll be wanting a dressy frock that you can wear to afternoon parties, the cocktail hour, and informal doings in the evening this winter. This Paris pattern, No. 5156, is designed for that purpose, from a model created by one of the famous Paris dressmakers.

To make this dress I suggest you choose velvet, satin, or silk cloky, and choose one of the beautiful new colors, such as coronation red, deep rich blue, rust-red, eggplant, amethyst, or rich green. You also may have it black. Black always is superb for those who can wear it with distinction.

If you make the dress of velvet, have satin bows and belt. If you make it of satin, make the bows and belt of velvet. If you choose cloky, make the bows and belt of metal cloth woven with some color. With a black dress, ruby red velvet bows and belt would be chic and striking.

The theme of the play, "Dead End," now playing at the Studebaker theater, is so much in harmony with the purpose of the Children's Scholarship league that board members have established a booth in the lobby of the theater during the run of the production. From the booth are distributed pamphlets describing the work of the league in combating delinquency among underprivileged children by keeping them in high school.

The scholarships awarded by the league consist of a monthly grant of money to a child whose family is unable to provide the food, clothing, carfare, school supplies, and incidentals necessary if he is to attend high school. The sum varies from $2 to $20 a month, according to the need of the student, and any boy or girl with a good school record is eligible to receive the award.

The league was founded as a result of joint efforts of the Chicago Woman's club, the Woman's City club, and the Chicago branch of the American Association of University Women, since 1911 to better the educational opportunities of underprivileged children. The league has operated under its present title since 1930, with monthly board meetings, and three meetings annually for contributors. Mrs. Herbert Hugh Riddle is president.

Several Chicagoans to Attend Missionary Society Meeting.

A number of Chicagoans will attend the annual meeting of the Northwestern branch of the Woman's Foreign Missionary society to be held in connection with the international annual meeting of the society Oct. 13 to 26 at Muncie, Ind. The Northwestern branch's meeting is scheduled for Oct. 22, and Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, and Wisconsin will be represented. Mrs. R. L. Marquis of Berwyn is president of the branch.

The Chicago recreation commission's city wide campaign to get children off the streets has borne fruit in the equipment of more than 175 vacant lots as playgrounds, it was reported last week. Through district chairmen who work in each community a total of 900 lots have been cleared, and gradually are being equipped with playground facilities. The recreation commission is inviting the coöperation of individuals in interesting children in making use of the play lots.

Leaving Samuel Johnson One Up on a Physician

ONCE a foppish physician reminded Samuel Johnson of his having been in company with him on a former occasion. "I do not remember it, sir." The physician still insisted, adding that he that day wore so fine a coat it must have attracted his notice. "Sir," said Johnson, "had you been dipped in Pactolus [a river of ancient Lydia famed for the gold found in its sands] I should not have noticed you."

President James Buchanan Cared Little for Dress

JAMES BUCHANAN, one time President, was above the medium in height. His neckgear and clean shaven face gave him much the appearance of a clergyman. His face was indicative of his Scotch-Irish parentage. A bachelor, he could not in any sense be called a leader in society or a leader in dress.

She wore a gown of black satin with a platinum and diamond clip at the neck. Her daughter, Senhorita Zazi Aranha, wore a frock of dahlia crêpe and had a large clip of brilliants at the base of the throat. Signora Giuseppe Cenzato wore a costume of black and white, a small black hat, with silk tunic with buttons down the front of white, with black centers, a black skirt and three-quarter length gloves and black shoes. She wore heavy silver bracelets on one wrist and a black elephant at the belt.

Lacy Patterns Are Stylish in Crocheted Dress Blouses

By Ellen Bruce.

SHORT blouses are in great demand by every style conscious woman in the United States for her fall and winter wardrobe. Lacy patterns have entered the fashion lists for the hand crocheted afternoon blouses, and they are made of the brightest colors imaginable. Their richness is outstanding when they are worn with black broadcloth.

A good quality crochet cotton, sheer crêpe or bouclette are the yarns which may be used to make the blouse illustrated today one of the outstanding models of the season. The buttons on this simple but exceptionally smart garment may be of bone, composition or glass and must match the yarn used.

After the crochet worker has familiarized herself with the pattern it will be no trick at all to crochet the entire blouse in less than one week. These garments launder beautifully, and that is a great boon to the reduction of the monthly cleaning bill.

HOW TO ORDER
If you wish instructions for crotcheting the afternoon blouse illustrated today, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to Ellen Bruce, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago. Be sure to send name and address with your letter.

Andrew Johnson Called Faultless in His Dress

ANDREW JOHNSON, while occupying the White House, was faultless in his dress, and particular to the point of fastidiousness. He always wore a frock coat and high standing color, well fitting shoes or boots and carefully cut trousers. His biographers say that he was among "the most perfect types of American manhood; that he was of perfect mold and splendid physique."

Society to See Vanderbilt Cup Race Oct. 12

Automobile Speed Demons of World Meeting on New Long Island Track.

By Nancy Randolph.

NEW YORK

A good many people are able to recall the linen duster days of 1904-'10, when the road races run over Long Island thoroughfares for the Willie K. Vanderbilt cup were big stuff, with cars roaring up and down at sixty miles an hour. The old Vanderbilt cup was put up for the last time in 1916 and then retired to the Smithsonian institution along with the dinosaurs and other ancient relics of the past.

After a lapse of twenty years the Vanderbilt cup is being revived, a handsome silver trophy, for which the automobile speed demons of the world will compete for the first time on the new Roosevelt raceway in Long Island.

George Vanderbilt, the donor, is a nephew of William K. Vanderbilt, who gave the original trophy. That this second edition of the Vanderbilt cup races will be as popular as the first seems a certainty.

Box Seats Are Surprisingly Popular Despite High Tarif.

The number of society persons who are now solvent to the extent of $16.50 in cold cash is exceeded only by the high class horde each of which has $27.50 in ready money.

Even the promoters of the new Roosevelt raceway are surprised by the speed with which box seats in these two price categories are being snapped up for the inaugural 400 mile automobile race on Oct. 12.

When George Marshall's new million dollar plant is opened on Columbus day every one who considers himself something on Park avenue or Wall street will be on hand to see the international classic.

Among the boxholders who will spend Columbus day watching the autos whiz by at the Roosevelt raceway are Mrs. Payne Whitney, whose Greentree stable produces some of the fastest horses in the world; Mrs. Jessie Woolworth Donahue; Jay and Dolly O'Brien; Eddie Reeves; Mrs. Frank M. Gould; Victor Emanuel, who owns fast horses, too; Vincent Bendix; Wolcott Blair; Edward Lasker; the W. Averell Harrimans; Mrs. Vadim S. Makaroff; Larry Doyle; George M. Pynchon, who races yachts; Mrs. George D. Pratt Jr., and numerous other smart folk.

Joel Thorne Has Entered Seven Cars in the Race.

A number of our young men about town are going to prove the breed hasn't weakened since the early days of the first Vanderbilt cup and are entering the race for young George Vanderbilt's trophy. Joel Thorne of the banking and Wall street Thornes has entered no less than seven cars.

He plans to drive one of his fleet, contracting famous race pilots to run the others. A lanky lad in his early twenties, young Thorne is going to drive to win, but, "If I pass any of my drivers at any time I'll fire the guys," he says.

Bob [Henry J.] Topping has entered a car in the race, but it will be driven for him by Egbert Stapp.

There are several plush entries from abroad, including Lord Howe. His racing colors are blue and silver. When driving milord wears overalls of these two hues. He has one foible. He hates getting wet before the start of the race. So should the skies leak on Oct. 12 the gallery can expect to see a mechanic holding a huge blue and silver umbrella over a driver on the track just as the race starts. That'll be Lord Howe, P. C., C. B. E., V. D. Another British social lion who will be in a driver's seat is the Hon. Brian Lewis, son of Baron Essendon.

Italy will be represented by Count Antonio Brivio.

Clubhouse to Accommodate More than 11,000 Persons.

It certainly is going to be something to see! The clubhouse alone is to be a cozy little spot for 11,854 persons who can stand the tarif, and apparently more than that number can. The place plans to lap its customers in luxury. All in all, the track will accommodate 150,000 auto racing fans. Yesterday the raceway was open for public inspection.

Another new sports project which is making a bid for, and will no doubt get, society's favor, is the winter resort and skiing paradise being readied by William Averell Harriman in the Sawtooth mountains of Idaho. And it's quite a feather in Marjorie Oelrichs [Mrs. Eddie] Duchin's cap that Mr. Harriman has asked her to supervise the decorating of the de luxe resort hotel which is under construction there.

Marjorie Duchin Again Going in for Interior Decorating.

Since her marriage to Orchestra Leader Eddie Duchin fifteen months ago the former Marjorie Oelrichs has seemed quite content to trail along quietly with her handsome husband. Not more than a handful of her friends know that in recent months she's been knee deep in her old career, that of interior decorating.

One of the most fascinating commissions of a decade—that of decorating a new hotel in the towering Sawtooth mountains—has kept Mrs. Duchin busy for months.

It took both William Averell Harriman and his pretty wife to persuade her to pick up her career again. The Union Pacific railroad, which Mr. Harriman heads, is building the hotel in what it confidently expects to become the skiing paradise of this continent. The Harrimans asked Mrs. Duchin for her advice, and before she realized it she was doing the whole job, and doing it marvelously, according to the boss [Mr. Harriman].

The hotel, which will accommodate about 200 winter sport addicts, will be opened some time in December. Mrs. Duchin and the Harrimans have been making frequent trips to Sun valley, which they've christened the whole resort area, and are almost certain to turn up there when the place is formally opened with a good bit of chi-chi.

They confidently expect half the skiing enthusiasts of the nation to be falling up and off the Rockies by mid-January. Dolly Schiff Backer, who's working so hard these days to reëlect President Roosevelt, is going out to Idaho for the winter sports. So are the Bill Paleys and Raimund von Hofmannstahl and his wife, the former Alice Astor Obolensky.

Even Tommy Hitchcock Jr., who's now riding with the Greentree polo four against the Argentines in defense of the Americas cup, is going out to Sun valley to see what he can do on a pair of skiis.

Hollywood is just as nuts about skiing as the rest of the nation, which has succumbed to this snow lined sport. Gary Cooper and his New York wife, the former Veronica Balfe, are going up to the Idaho resort some time during the winter, and so are Sam Goldwyn and David Selznick.

When Chicago Was Young
The Elegant Eighties
By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, Nov. 8, 1887.

DEAR JULIA: Some friends of ours, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. McVicker, will be in New York next week and if you are able to take the time, now that your aunt is better, it would please me if you would call on them. They are at the Murray Hill hotel, and if you would leave your card, I know it would be a much appreciated courtesy.

Mr. McVicker is a client of Will's, and was calling here yesterday evening on business, which reminded me to mention this to you. Mrs. McVicker hasn't been well, and that is the reason they are going east. I think they feel the change will do her good. Her illness isn't serious, and your call would be a delightful event in the life of an invalid. The McVickers are parents of the late Mrs. Edwin Booth [Mary McVicker], herself an actress, as you probably know.

You'll find Mr. McVicker a double of Henry Ward Beecher. At least, some people think there's quite a resemblance . . . the same mass of white hair worn rather long; the same smoothly shaven face that reflects both humor and shrewdness. So I can see how people liken their appearance, though they have had such different walks in life.

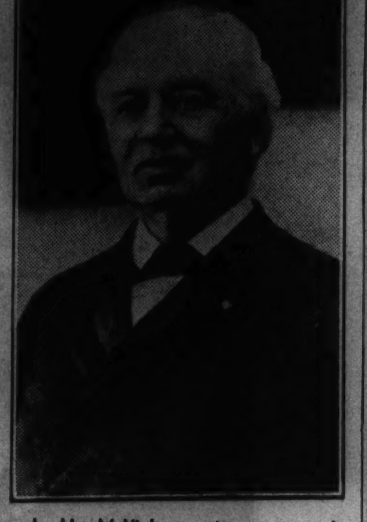
J. H. McVicker has been manager and owner of the theater which bears his name for thirty years, though he is a New Yorker by birth. His long experience in the theatrical world makes him an authority on matters pertaining to the stage, and we enjoyed talking with him on the past and present of the theater.

He thinks the outlook for actors this season is especially good, the country being in a prosperous condition, and he's looking forward to the appearance of Mrs. James Brown Potter here. She will be in Chicago for a week, and is expected to be a drawing card, for the papers are so full of her doings. I asked him what the name of the play with which McVicker's theater opened was. I remembered the year, 1857, for it was the first time that Will and I attended a play after we were engaged, but the play itself had dropped entirely from my memory, partly, I suppose, because I was living in the clouds at the time. Mr. McVicker told us that it was a double bill . . . "The Honeymoon" and "The Rough Diamond." Do you remember either of them? I don't.

Reminiscing, he reminded us that there always was a farce, in those days, to conclude the entertainment, and he thinks it has been a mistake to drop the custom. "They were first-rate schools for promising young actors," he said. "Many a great star won his first laurels in farce."

Of course, we got to talking about the new Auditorium theater, being built at Congress, Michigan, and Wabash avenues. I suspect Mr. McVicker's opinion is biased, but he seems to think the building is far too large for opera . . . that no singer's voice can fill so large a hall. It is to seat 6,000 people, you know. However, we are told that the acoustics are to be looked after with great care, so perhaps these forebodings will prove false. It will be an ideal place for political conventions, and Mr. McVicker says it will be finished in time for both parties to use it next summer.

On the question of politics he and Will see eye to eye. Both think the Republican party, after a period of eclipse, will emerge and sweep the country. The wish may be father to the thought.



J. H. McVicker, actor-manager in Chicago during the '80s.

I had a lovely time at a reception at Mrs. E. W. Blatchford's on La Salle avenue this week. I went with my dear neighbors, Mrs. William G. McCormick and Mrs. Henry W. King, both of whom you'll remember meeting at my house.

With much love, I am
Your devoted friend,
MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

OLD CHICAGO HARTHSTONES
2223 Orchard Street.

Note: We print the following story of an old house, just as it comes to us from A. S. Chapman, Evansaon, Ill.

At the time of the Chicago fire, my father, Foster M. Chapman, lived at Lincoln avenue and Orchard street, owning property on both streets. He had sold a lot on Orchard street to Sam Collyer, elder son of the Rev. Robert Collyer, minister of Unity church, at Walton place and North Dearborn street. Dr. Collyer was one of the famous preachers of his day. The rebuilt church is now the Oriental Consistory temple.

Just before the fire, Sam Collyer had built a story-and-a-half frame house on the lot and furnished it, preparatory to marrying a down state girl, Rebecca Moore. The prospective bride had her everyday clothes in trunks in the Orchard street house, while her trousseau was at the home of Chicago friends where the wedding was to take place. The wedding plans were set at naught by the fire, which swept away her friends' home, trousseau and all. What did the waiting bride do but go to the Orchard street house, get a calico kitchen dress out of her trunk, don it as her wedding gown, and be married in the home of friends whose house had not been destroyed.

William C. Dow, a real estate dealer who for many years had an office in the old brownstone Tribune building at Dearborn and Madison streets, and also was a Unity member, took the bridal couple to their new home to begin housekeeping, and my father carried an announcement of the wedding to the TRIBUNE office.

Hunt Season Is in Full Swing at Myopia Club

BEVERLY, MASS.

The hunting season is on at the Myopia Hunt club in Hamilton, one of the oldest hunt clubs in the country, and Essex county hills and dales resound with the cries of the hounds on the trail of the fox or the scent of the anise seed drag.

Gordon Chickering Prince is having his first season as master of the Myopia hounds, and the fields are larger than for several seasons. The younger group is showing much interest in the hunts, and a special series of meets has been arranged for them. The trail usually is across country in full view of the highways, and every morning and afternoon large numbers of Chicago colonists follow the field in motor cars. The season will continue until the snow flies.

Marriage of Jane Bogardus to Take Place Oct. 3.

The marriage of Miss Jane Bogardus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick R. Bogardus of Phillips Beach, Swampscott, and well known in Chicago, to Martin H. Donohue, son of Martin H. Donohue of New York City, is to take place Saturday, Oct. 3, in the church of the Holy Name in Swampscott. A reception will follow the church ceremony at the Tedesco Country club.

Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Hinckley have returned to their Brookline home after passing the summer in Honolulu. Mrs. Hinckley's debutante daughter, Miss Eleanor Wheeler McClurg, returned with them. Miss McClurg is the daughter of the late Ogden Trevor McClurg of Chicago, and the granddaughter of the late Gen. and Mrs. A. C. McClurg of Chicago. Several parties in her honor are being planned for the autumn and winter season.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Farley of Peoria, Ill., are visiting Mrs. W. Jessie Fowler at their summer home, Indian Springs, Ipswich.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Pratt McKean are giving a dance Saturday evening, Oct. 3, for their daughter, Miss Elizabeth McKean, to present her formally to society. The dance will be at Willow Tree farm, the country home of the McKeans in Wenham. There will be many dinner parties as a prelude to the dance, and among those who are entertaining are Mrs. M. Graeme Haughton, grandmother of Miss McKean, at her Pride's Hill home in Pride's Crossing; Mrs. Francis P. Sears of Hamilton; Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Wheeler of Fort House, Manchester; and Professor and Mrs. Thomas H. Barbour of Beverly Farms.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Harrison Ragle of Tops Field, and Mrs. Warren K. Emerson of Marblehead are giving a luncheon at the Essex County country club in Manchester, Sunday, Oct. 4, to present their daughters, Misses Elizabeth Jane Ragle and Marion Emerson, to society. The luncheon parties will be the largest of the early autumn season.

New Brick Shade, Soudan, Has Emerged from Paris

A NEW brick shade called soudan has emerged from Lanvin's, Paris, as well as a myrtle green. Fox furs dyed soudan red are striking. Also from Paris: Low looped skirt draperies produce Turkish trouser effects in replacing trains. Sphinx head veils encircle the face or form bertha collars when draped around the neck. Milo Anderson, who designs costumes for many of the leading figures of films, is heartily in favor of full gathered skirts. He says bouffant skirts, enormously full, always are picturesque and particularly flattering in formal styles.

Give Reception Today at Church for Dr. Gerhard

Occasion Special Tribute to His Completion of Two Decades as Rector.

By Judith Cass.

THE reception that was to have been given last Sunday for the Rev. and Mrs. E. Ashley Gerhard in the parish house at Christ church, Winnetka, was postponed until today when Dr. and Mrs. Gerhard will receive from 4 to 7 o'clock with Mrs. Wyndham H. Channer, representing the woman's guild, and Stanley Rich of the vestry. The occasion will be a special tribute to Dr. Gerhard on the completion of twenty years as rector of the Winnetka church.

This afternoon at 3 o'clock at Mrs. Charles H. Besly's home in Hinsdale, the Chicago City Opera company committee of that western suburb will give a tea. Lucia Diano and Mark Love will sing, and Mrs. James G. McMillan, general chairman of the north shore committee; Jason F. Whitney, president of the company, and William D. Saltiel of the board of directors, will speak. Tomorrow afternoon Mrs. Dwight C. Orcutt will open her home in Glencoe for a similar affair. Marjorie Livingston will sing, accompanied by Hanna Butler and Porter Heaps, and Mr. Saltiel will speak. On Tuesday the south shore committee will give a tea in the ballroom of the Powhatan, 4950 Chicago Beach drive. Eleanor La Mance and Mark Love will sing, and the speakers will be Mr. Whitney and Dudley Crafts Watson.

Local Pen Women League Meeting This Afternoon.

The northern Illinois branch of the National League of American Pen Women is holding its opening reception at the home of Mrs. Franklin M. Miller, 1500 Lake Shore drive, this afternoon from 4 to 7 o'clock. Tonight the Service club is starting rehersals for its 1936 revue with a party in the penthouse of the Sherman hotel. The revue will be given in the Goodman theater Oct. 23 and 24.

Many theater parties are being planned for the opening of "Lady Precious Stream" tomorrow night at the Harris theater. The Harold Pynchons, Mrs. Dana Corbin, the Walter Paepckes, Mrs. Norval Pierce, Edward I. Cudahy, and Bryan S. Reids, and Mrs. Wentworth G. Field are a few of those who plan to see the Chinese drama, which is played in English by a London cast.

One of the gayest events of the early autumn will be the supper-dance the board of directors of the North Avenue Day Nursery has planned for next Saturday night. All of the women on the board are young, and their parties always are jolly affairs. The party will be given at 3030 Lake Shore drive, the home of Mrs. Fortunato Jerace, mother of Mrs. Sidney Smith Gorham Jr., chairman of the committee in charge. Mrs. Theron Chapman is in charge of reservations.

Northwestern Settlement Fashion Show Saturday.

In Winnetka next Saturday afternoon the auditorium of the Skokie school will be the place where many smart north shore—and city—women will be found, for the Winnetka board of the Northwestern university settlement is giving its tenth annual fashion show there then. Arrangements have been made for luncheon to be served at the Indian Hill club to any one attending the show. Mrs. Martin Lindsay, Winnetka 3857, or Mrs. Robert S. Laird, Winnetka 1073, may be telephoned for luncheon reservations. Seventy of the prettiest young matrons and girls on the north shore and in Chicago will model in the show, which is under the management of Mrs. Donald Defrees, Mrs. John W. Hooker, and a capable committee.

The Mill Creek Hunt's annual hunter trials will be held next Sunday on Austin H. Niblack's property, about one-half mile south of the hunt stables in Millburn. As usual, there will be a barbecue luncheon given by the hunt members, for the landowners over whose property the hunt rides, and after the trials the members and their guests will go to a high tea being given at the clubhouse for Eliot S. Nichols of Detroit, who is flying over that day to be a judge. There also will be a dinner-dance at the club Saturday night.

U. S. Artists' Annual Exhibit Opens Oct. 22

By Eleanor Jewett.

NO art show last year excited as much attention as the annual American painting and sculpture exhibition held at the Art institute. It supplied the incentive for Mrs. Frank G. Logan's "Sanity in Art" movement, and it did more than any one thing to alter, if only in part, the Art institute's attitude toward contemporary art. It brought about a fresh outlook on nonmodern work. If modernism can perform in such a way [ran the common thought], it is time nonmodern painting had a chance in the museum galleries.

The Chicago and vicinity artists' show last spring was the better for the turmoil aroused by the American exhibit. The water color show in the spring was one of the best the Art institute has ever hung. The summer exhibits were fairly divided between the two types of paintings. The Van Gogh exhibit was balanced by the Healy portraits, and among the Chicago painters the conservatives balanced the radicals.

Show Will Include Original Works in Oil and Sculpture.

The forty-seventh annual exhibition of American painting and sculpture will open at the Art institute on Oct. 22 to continue to Dec. 6. The exhibition will include only original works by contemporary American artists, works, in oil or sculpture, which previously have not been exhibited at the Art institute. The budget of the institute will not permit the payment of rental fees to the artist for the showing of his work. Last Wednesday was the final day for returning entry cards to Director Harshe. Exhibitors were entitled to send in three works of art, but not more than two could be accepted.

According to precedent, there will be an eastern jury to pass on the entries in that section and a Chicago jury to select the works from the midwest and west. The jury on paintings, consisting of Edmund Archer, John Steuart Curry, Jerry Farnsworth, Meyric R. Rogers, and Thomas E. Tallmadge, will meet in New York on Friday, Oct. 2. There will be two juries on sculpture, one meeting in New York and one in Chicago. The New York jury, C. Paul Jennewein, Oronzio Maldarelli, and Albert Stewart, will meet in New York with the jury on paintings.

Lorado Taft One of Three on Chicago Sculpture Jury.

The Chicago sculpture jury, Raoul Josset, Carl Milles, and Lorado Taft, will join forces with the painting jury at the Art institute on Tuesday and Wednesday, Oct. 13 and 14, and make the final selection of works to be exhibited. An important addition to this plan for the exhibition is found in the action of the trustees of the Art institute who have authorized Director Robert B. Harshe to select, exempt from jury control, one hundred paintings and a small group of sculpture.

In other years it was well known that Mr. Harshe selected between one-half and two-thirds of the material exhibited. This sometimes was given as an alibi for Mr. Harshe and sometimes for the jury, when the exhibit stirred passionate resentment in the breasts of the public. In those years it was urged that the "invited" pictures be starred in the catalog, or differentiated in some way from the ones which passed the jury. That never seemed feasible in the eyes of the Art institute officials. Again this year the plea is put foward that there be some symbol employed by which visitors could place the acceptance of the work in the galleries. It undoubtedly would add to their enjoyment of the show.

Question of Rental Problem to Large Group of Artists.

The question of rental for their works has become a major problem to a large group of artists. Some have taken a decisive stand and refuse to show their paintings or sculpture where they are not paid for doing so. There is something to be said on their side, but there is as much to be said on the side of the gallery. The galleries have expenses that must be met. If they hang a show that does not sell they suffer with the artists. If they sell, they take a commission. The artist takes the remainder. Looking at it in one way this division of the price might be considered as rental paid the artist and as a fee paid the gallery.

It is curious that when an artist sells his work he is not concerned about rental, and yet perhaps that is not curious. When one has enough, one does not go out of the way to look for a little more. It is the desperate plight of the artists who have not sold well during the depression years that has forced many of them to take this present stand. At least, if a rental system were in force, they would be assured of a small income. But what of the gallery? The extra drain on its resources will find no immediate remedy unless it charges an entrance fee to the public. Today there is no public large enough or interested enough in the average exhibition to make this feasible. The gallery might as well draw down its blinds and its owner go into some other business.

Art Seems to Walk Hand in Hand with Poverty.

As long as art has existed it has walked hand in hand with difficulty and poverty. It is the rare painter who is rich. How can a thousand artists be raised to the status of the exceptional one? When that is possible the question of rent will cease to torment its progenitors.

Meanwhile there is a group of artists who are actively engaged in making art practical and in publicizing it. The organization is called the American Artists' Group, Inc., and may be addressed at 106 Seventh street, New York City. Last year it got out a series of attractive and different Christmas cards. This year it has a more ambitious enterprise on its hands. About fifty of the foremost contemporary artists living in the east are in the association and they are publishing a number of original etchings, woodcuts, and lithographs to sell at $2.75 each. These are not mechanical reproductions, but have intrinsic value as originals. They are as perfect as the artists can make them. The one difference between them and an etching by the same artist bought outside of this group is that they are not signed.

SUNDAY MORNING, AMECA-MECA

Charles Killgore is one of the contemporary Chicago painters whose work was not diminished in importance by its juxtaposition with the Van Gogh show at the Art institute. The summer exhibits and the Van Gogh exhibition closed Thursday.

STEAMERS—PLANES

Travel Season Extends Far Into Autumn

September Crowns Highly Successful Year in Tourism Here and Abroad.

SEPTEMBER is usually the month when summer travel ends and plans for winter trips and vacations start formulating. This year it has been the liveliest period in the calendar. It has crowned a season of unusual success in the tourist industry. This was shown yesterday in a checkup of the various steamship and travel agencies in Chicago.

"Throughout the industry, both at home and abroad, the seasons are overlapping, with our business being crowded as never before," said Charles J. White of the American Express company. "The crowding is told in the record movement by all transportation units in the rail, ship, bus, and air classifications and the unprecedented travel to other countries."

Already Looking Ahead to Summer of 1937.

"The most important recent development of a general nature is the new duty imposed on travel agents by the scarcity of accommodations at peak seasons," said Edward O'Connor of Thomas Cook & Sons. "Today, organizers and salesmen of travel must deal in 'futures,' as well as in plans for the present. Consistent customers of Cook's who come in these days to make their fall and winter travel plans are being earnestly urged to outline, at least tentatively, their projects for next summer, so that options can be taken for their protection. In the seasons now at hand, the Mediterranean, forsaken last year by most of the large cruising liners, once more will be a major goal."

"Middle westerners are becoming more travel minded each year," declared Fred V. Robinson of Raymond-Whitcomb, Inc. "The steamship, railroad, and travel companies have all reported a greater exodus out of Chicago this year than for many years previously. In the fiscal year ending Aug. 31 our office, for instance, had an increase of 105 per cent in sales over those for 1935. And the indications are that the momentum gained this year will be carried on into the next. Our Chicago office already has reached its last year's total reservations for the round South America cruise next February, and in this respect it leads all the agencies of the company."

They're Still Trekking to Europe.

William Franklin Crum, Chicago manager of the Cunard-White Star line, related that this year the trans-Atlantic steamship business is extending well into the fall.

"Bookings continue their high trend on all our steamers," he said. "This is especially true of the Queen Mary. It has been a good year. The main surprise is that it is not passing out with the end of the hot weather. Crowds are still going over to Europe. September sailings have been in keeping with those of the early part of June. We have noticed that travelers are learning to appreciate the fact that autumn is a highly attractive season on the Atlantic. It is probably the most delightful time of the whole year."

Ludwig Plate, local manager for the Hamburg American Line-North German Lloyd, announced that his company this summer established a new record for trans-Atlantic crossings. On five consecutive westbound voyages the Bremen and the Europa had more than 2,000 passengers each, and on three successive arrivals ships of the Hamburg class brought more than 1,000 travelers each. The demand for accommodations was so large that it was necessary to provide officers' cabins for some of the passengers.

Heavy Trafic Continues Unabated.

Manager Thomas Silvestrini of the Chicago office of the Italian line said that the heavy trafic over that company's ships in August had continued unabated until late this month, and that last week's sailing of the Vulcania carried a list far out of proportion to anything encountered at this season in other years.

"Motor vacation travel—now at the highest level in history—has been featured this year by a phenomenal rise in transcontinental touring," said Manager Bert Vanderwarf of the Chicago Motor club's touring bureau. "Reports from the principal American Automobile association clubs to national headquarters show that on an average the number of requests for coast to coast trips have been running as much as 20 to 30 per cent above those of a year ago. National parks in western territory have had a tremendous volume of travel, with more visitors from the eastern states than ever before, and mountain resorts in the west have had gains of from 30 to 50 per cent in tourist patronage."

Summaries received in Chicago yesterday from Glacier National park revealed that up to Sept. 15 there had been 205,782 visitors there, as compared with 140,256 in 1935. This was a gain of 65,526, or 47 per cent. Rail travel to the park showed an increase of 29 per cent, and auto travel scored a gain of 49 per cent.

Thomas J. Wall, general agent in Chicago for the Canadian Pacific railway, said that westbound travel has been keeping up remarkably well, notwithstanding the fact that the hotels in the Canadian Rockies closed last Monday for the season.

"Autumn in the Canadian Rockies is really one of the finest periods of the year," said Mr. Wall. "Chicagoans and other middle westerners are going to the Pacific northwest at this time of the year as never before."

From Florida came word that Miami already is anticipating its biggest season since 1928 and that St. Petersburg, with its tourist business running 25 per cent ahead of last season's at this early stage of the game, promises to forge ahead of previous years for the sixth consecutive winter.

GOING SOMEWHERE?

ANOTHER trans-Atlantic liner, to be christened the Nieuw Amsterdam, will be launched next year, and will make her maiden voyage in the spring of 1938. This was announced to a group of Chicago travel agents at a luncheon at the Drake hotel Tuesday by F. C. Bouman of Rotterdam, managing director of the Holland America line.

The new ship, said Mr. Bouman, will be 33,000 tons gross registered, measure 751 feet long, and have a speed above 21 knots. She will have accommodations for 550 cabin class passengers, 600 in tourist class, and 250 in third class. She will be named in honor of the first Dutch colony in America, New Amsterdam, the beginnings of the present city of New York.

A. P. van der Burch, Chicago manager for the Holland-America line, was the host at the luncheon, and the guests of honor were Mr. Bouman and P. van den Toorn, the general manager in New York.

One of the most elaborate travel booklets in years has been issued by the Canadian Pacific in connection with the forthcoming world cruise of the Empress Britain. A large number of copies were received last week by Kenneth A. Cook, geenral agent in Chicago.

The booklet describes next winter's journey as "the cruise of cruises in the royal manner." It relates that the Empress of Britain will sail eastward from New York Jan. 9 for a 30,000 mile circuit of the globe, with 29 ports in 22 countries visited in the course of the 125 days. In the 64 pages are graphic descriptions and pictures of Madeira, Gibraltar, Monaco, Naples, Athens, the Holy land, Egypt, India, Ceylon, Angkor, Singapore, Siam, Java, Bali, Manila, China, Japan, Honolulu, and Panama.

In an effort to promote a closer relationship, both socially and commercially, between the United States and Guatemala, Octavio Barrios, consul general in Chicago for the Central American republic, has arranged for a trade fair tour of his country this fall. The guests will leave Chicago over the Illinois Central Nov. 9 for New Orleans, where they will embark on a United Fruit company steamer for Puerta Barrios. The stay in Guatemala is to include stops at the national exposition in Guatemala City, Antigua, Lake Amatitlan, Lake Atitlan, and Santo Tomas. Return to Chicago is set for Nov. 27.

Anchor Line Opens Passenger Office

THE Anchor line yesterday announced that on Next Thursday it would open a Chicago passenger office at 320 North Michigan avenue, with Leslie C. Atkins as manager. The new office is to mark the initial step in the company's program of closer agency coöperation and service to passengers.

Mr. Atkins comes here from New York. He succeeds C. A. Schmidt, who remains as head of the freight department here. J. J. Cavanagh will continue as assistant passenger manager.

English People Demand Peace and May Get It

Visitor Finds They Are Determined to Stay Out of Troubles on Continent.

By Frederic Babcock.

LONDON.—[Special.]—The people of England want peace, and they intend to get it even if they have to fight for it. Like the people of America, they are determined that never again shall they become embroiled in the troubles of continental Europe. No matter how warlike may be the aims of the dictatorships in Germany, Italy, and Russia, the two great democracies of the world wish to remain aloof.

This fact impresses itself strongly on any American traveler who visits this country and makes it a point to talk with both the leaders and the masses. The English speaking nations, it would appear, are today the strongest guarantees against a repetition of the catastrophe of twenty years ago. The main danger at the moment appears to be that Great Britain and Italy may become involved over supremacy in the Mediterranean.

The Battle for One Small Part of the World.

We went over to the Little theater the other night and saw Nancy Price's revival of the Brothers Capek's remarkable "Insect Play." As the dramatic critic of the London Times had pointed out, in the third act of this play "more sense is talked in twenty minutes than the peace mongers and war mongers have mastered between them in the last twenty years."

In that act the black ants and the yellow ants listen to the call of their dictators and proceed to the total extermination of each other—and all they were fighting about in the first place was the space between two blades of grass. The high [or low] spot comes when one side's leader, looking suspiciously like Mussolini, casts his eyes heavenward and proclaims: "God of the ants, I appoint you honorary colonel of our forces."

"Insects Can't Choose; We Can."

After the last curtain the audience sat and clapped for five minutes or so until Nancy Price and others interested in the production appeared on the stage and made their bows. Miss Price drove the lesson home with an extemporaneous curtain speech.

"The creatures in this play are insects," she said. "They are tied by instinct. They cannot do otherwise than act as they do. We can. There is no reason why we should become extinct. The choice is ours. If we can't choose, we're better off gone."

We left the theater and mingled with the crowds, and everywhere got the impression that if the people of England are left to themselves they will not follow the example set by the insects.

A recent piece of work by David Low, regarded by many as England's foremost cartoonist, was causing a lot of comment. In this cartoon a hog was gazing at the naked figure of a man in a gas mask and saying: "You poor sap! They kill me for food, but you are killed for your own good."

Civilization Would Be Wiped Out.

Even more striking were the words of C. R. Attlee, leader of his majesty's opposition in the house of commons, regarding the possibilities of another war.

"Every one should realize," Maj. Attlee said, "that if war breaks out again the result will be a destruction infinitly more widespread and devastating than that of the last. The weapons of destruction existing today are a hundred times more terrible. The bombing plane, which was really only in its infancy in the last war, will dominate the situation. In place of a contest between soldiers on a battlefield, with still some faint echo of romance, there will be the wholesale slaughter of men, women, and children by poison gas. Instead of fortifications and trench lines being leveled by high explosives, the great cities in the world will be destroyed by fire. Civilization, as we know it, will be wiped out.

Didn't Want War, but Got It Anyway.

"Yet, in face of these dangers, we see statesmen still playing their games of power politics, as they did in the years before the great war. Those who controled the destinies of nations in the pre-war period were not men who desired war. They did not intend deliberately to lead their peoples to the slaughter, but they were ready to pursue policies and to take risks which were certain sooner or later to bring them to the position where they had to choose between war and the abandonment of their designs.

"When you come to weigh up the aims of these statesmen and compare them with the terrible losses sustained in their pursuit, you see at once how small they were. The same mentality is to be found today."

He'd Let the Leaders Hear Bombs Exploding.

"But how are you going to stop all this foolishness?" Maj. Attlee was asked.

"What we need is a new mentality," he answered. "A fresh start must be made. I want to see held a conference at which every representative of every nation shall have present before him what war really means. I am not sure it would not be a good thing for them to sit for a time in gas masks amid the roar of exploding bombs and the continuous noise of airplanes overhead. Let them go, and visit the homes of humble people, and then come together to discuss how to deal with the causes of war.

"It is the ordinary, quiet people, who ask nothing more than the right to live in happiness with their families, who will be destroyed if war breaks out. There is time yet to save the world if only these ordinary men and women will rouse themselves to action."

Say India Formed by Earthquakes

BOMBAY.—(AP)—A theory that the mainland of India was formed by a series of terrific earthquakes lasting for about ten years is advanced here.

This view is put forward following recent geological discoveries, interpreted in conjunction with newly-found Sanskrit manuscripts, by the Narmada valley research board of India. Supporters of the "earthquake theory" say the shocks began in 2600 B. C., cracked the eastern range of mountains, drained away the southern seas, and produced the peninsula which is now India.

Polyps Build Barrier Reef, World Wonder

Thousand Mile Formation Under Way for Million Years, Geologists Say.

By Mason Warner.

ON BOARD M. V. MALAITA, en route to the Solomon Islands.—If you could take the pyramids of Egypt, the palaces of all the Incas of Peru, the temples of Greece and Rome, the skyscrapers, hotels, office buildings, and all the houses of all the people of New York, Chicago, London, Paris, Berlin; the temples, palaces, and the three great walls of Peking; the dwellings of stone, brick, dobe, and wood of all the cities and hamlets of the world; the ice igloos of the Eskimos, the palm thatched huts of the tropics—and all the human habitations in between—if you could take all that man has builded since the dawn of history with toiling slaves and powerful machines, if you could gather all human construction and place it on the floor of the Pacific ocean, that tremendous mass would not equal in size and weight what tiny polyps have put together from the lime in the waters of the sea in formations of coral.

Geologists estimate that the great coral Barrier reef which fringes Australia's northeastern coast for more than a thousand miles has been building more than a million years. Throughout the length and breadth of the Coral sea, an area of more than 3,000,000 square miles, there are myriads of coral islands, banks, reefs, shoals, and atolls.

Edge of Kelso Bank an Unplumbed Depth.

The extent of Kelso bank, a submarine coral formation, is unknown. Ships sail over it, for soundings show 11 to 20 fathoms of water. Right off the bank is a sheer precipice. The sounder has gone down 1,025 fathoms, more than a mile, and has found "no bottom."

Up from the depths of the sea comes French reef, near New Caledonia. Soundings not far away show the waters to be approximately 2½ miles deep—2,116 fathoms.

By the course the Malaita is sailing it is a nine day voyage from Sydney to Tulagi, seat of government of the British Solomon Islands. The distance is 2,505 miles. The first port made is Brisbane, 510 miles north of Sydney.

The coast appeared barren and forbidding all the way from Sydney to Brisbane. There were scattered patches of scrub timber, but the land is so poor it is uninhabited.

Brisbane is located forty miles from the sea, up Brisbane river. The residence districts of this city of 340,000 population are attractive. The houses are erected on pillars, 6 to 10 feet above ground level, permitting free circulation of air underneath. Wide verandas add an inviting promise of cool comfort.

The gardens seemed perfect, with the varied colors of poinsettias, crotons, frangipani, hibiscus, bourgainvillæa, and extraordinarily large morning glories. Interesting arbors and trimmed hedges contribute to the attractiveness of home surroundings.

The second day out from Brisbane finds the ship inside the Barrier reef, sighting volcanic and coral islands by the score on the way north. Pentecost Island and Lion's Head Island, named by Capt. Cook, are passed.

These islands are large and small; some only projections of rocky points above sea level. The large islands are barren and uninhabited by men, but wild horses and goats live on them. There is no rainfall in this territory and the animals must get along with only the scant moisture in the coarse grass growth. There are few trees, and these are scrubs.

Navigation is difficult. Some passages between the rocky islands and coral reefs are narrow, and the vessel twists and turns to follow the channel through. One does not like to think what it would be like in a storm on a dark night and is grateful for the Barrier reef that affords protection against incoming high seas.

From Brisbane to Townsville is 750 miles, most of the distance inside the Barrier reef. Townsville has no natural harbor, and ships come to anchor between two long man-made breakwaters.

North Australia suffers for want of water. Only 9 inches of rain fell last year, and it was necessary to haul waters in carts to Townsville for cooking and drinking. Its use was restricted. Men were fined for using water to wash automobiles. If anybody had been caught sprinkling his lawn it is likely he would have been given life imprisonment.

The Australian coast is generously provided with lighthouses to warn mariners against dangers. Nevertheless, accidents will happen in the treacherous currents amid the hidden reefs.

Passing ships see on North reef a dramatic example of what coral can do. The bow of a wrecked steamer stands pointing upward at a sharp angle, while the stern hangs out into the water. Coral does not let go. It yields and gives way to the oncoming craft; then swings back into position, holding its victim loosely but in a firm grasp while the waves bump it to destruction.

THE VOICE OF THE TRAVELER

Letters regarding travel conditions and experiences are welcomed. Please keep them brief. Address: Travel Editor, Chicago Tribune.

NO LONGER GAY.

Chicago, Sept. 22.—To the Travel Editor: I'm just home from four months in Europe. I've missed all your travel letters except the one published Sept. 20 in which you do me the honor to quote me about Paris.

What you quote was written a year ago and the last line of your quotation isn't mine at all. Even then I didn't say that "Paris is still the gayest of gardens" for it wasn't. Its beauty was all there, and its treasures, but it was anxious, and the lavish spenders were not there to support those gayeties they love. This year it is still true that the beauties and the treasures are all there. But it is still truer that Paris is anxious and depressed.

I would not tell any one going abroad today that he will find Paris life as it used to be. But I would tell him that while Paris is no longer gay—except "in spots"—it is still beautiful and full of fascination.

I had forever memorable days in Paris last June, and the experiences that made them so precious are such as any visitor may have who loves present beauty and the romance of other days. But they had nothing to do with gay restaurants and night clubs and throngs of tourists in festive mood.

I expect to read, next Sunday, that you found London gay. It is. And the gayest spot on the continent now is Budapest. Unless it's Venice, in August and September!

CLARA E. LAUGHLIN.

JUST A YOUNG MEANIE.

Chicago, Sept. 21.—To the Travel Editor: I don't think your department should have published that letter from E. F. S. Too many people will resent it.

I have been in Europe several times, and once or twice have been a trifle impatient with my fellow Americans, but never ashamed of them in any foreign country. It was never because they didn't dress for dinner [how silly!], but rather because of their lack of appreciation of something I felt should be more appreciated. They could say "We seen" and "I ain't" as often as they liked, and I even tolerated New Yorkers saying "It's simply berling hot" and "Eri the car," without becoming nauseated.

How dull it would be if we all waited to be formally introduced in a strange country! I'm sure I'd welcome any kindly soul who wished to converse with me.

I'm afraid your embarrassed correspondent is very young. Her [or his] favorite author is undoubtedly Emily Post.

I do like your department—but let's keep out the "meanies." MRS. F. A. J.

NOISY NEW YORKERS.

Newton, Ia., Sept. 21.—To the Travel Editor: In reply to E. F. S. in your department of Sept. 20 I wish to say that I am from the middle west—Iowa. Yes, Iowa! I, too, traveled in Europe several summers ago, and, like E. F. S., I saw a few Americans of whom I was a little ashamed.

After reading and hearing countless slurs by easterners on this section of the country we have developed somewhat of an inferiority complex as to our culture, manners, etc., and so I assumed that these boorish people must come from the middle west. But on inquiry I found that a great many of them were from New York and other points east, and the noisiest, most uncouth woman on the returning boat was from Boston—of all places!

I might add that her husband wore knickers at dinner. A. G. W.

THOSE CULTURED EASTERNERS.

Geneseo, Ill., Sept. 20.—To the Travel Editor: This is in reply to E. F. S.'s highly unjust letter, entitled "Those Awful Americans," in today's SUNDAY TRIBUNE.

I, also, have just returned from a summer on the continent, and I was unfortunate enough to travel with a group which included several so-called cultured persons from New York, Boston, and other eastern cities. May I speak of their culture?

They were always the first to be seated, and the first to demand service, at the dinner table. Instead of speaking in a low tone of voice, they loudly asked for everything in sight. If they didn't get it they grabbed for it. It looked as if they were afraid the others at the table might get something also. As for their knowledge of "which fork or which spoon had precedence over the others," I don't think any one noticed how they used their table silver. We were all so disgusted with their rudeness that we didn't care to watch them.

It was the same on the trains and buses. The easterners were always rushing for the best places, regardless of how many persons were jostled or pushed aside. After seeing their performance I do not wonder that American tourists are severely criticized in Europe.

And these are the people who talk about the "hicks" from the middle west!

A. B.

ALL'S QUIET ON THE MIDWESTERN FRONT.

Chicago, Sept. 23.—To the Travel Editor: A letter, dated New York, Sept. 15, appeared in last SUNDAY'S TRIBUNE in criticism of the midwesterners as to their actions and dress. I should like to voice a few words in defense.

As a world traveler—not having made just fleeting glimpses of the tourist places, but having spent some time in many cities throughout the world, and having come in contact with great numbers of people—I have had occasion to be embarrassed many times by the conduct of New Yorkers and other easterners. But I immediately rallied to the support of those persons and begged our foreign brethren not to judge all Americans, or all easterners, by the conduct of the few.

Regarding the dress of the midwesterner: Tour companies impress so emphatically upon the prospective voyager not to take any more luggage than is absolutely necessary that the inexperienced traveler adheres to this warning. Smart sport clothes having sprung into such fashion in the last few years, voyagers who travel light seem to find their attire fairly correct for most occasions.

I am proud to be a midwesterner, a Chicagoan, a direct descendant of the pioneer stock that made Illinois the great state it is today and made Chicago one of the foremost cities of the world. I venture to say you will find as much culture here as you will in the east, or anywhere else.

Come on, you easterners! I will swap with you travel experiences, conducts, and style of dress for all occasions.

KATHERINE ATTWOOD CHANDLER.

GO EAST, YOUNG MAN.

Chicago, Sept. 21.—To E. F. S.: Why don't you go back to Europe?

Study Finger Prints.

MANILA, P. I.—(AP)—Something new in college courses is being introduced this year at the National university here. It is a class in finger prints. The course will be conducted by Agripino Ruiz, finger print expert of the Philippine constabulary for 15 years. It is expected that city policemen, secret service agents, and members of the intelligence division of the national army will be among the students.

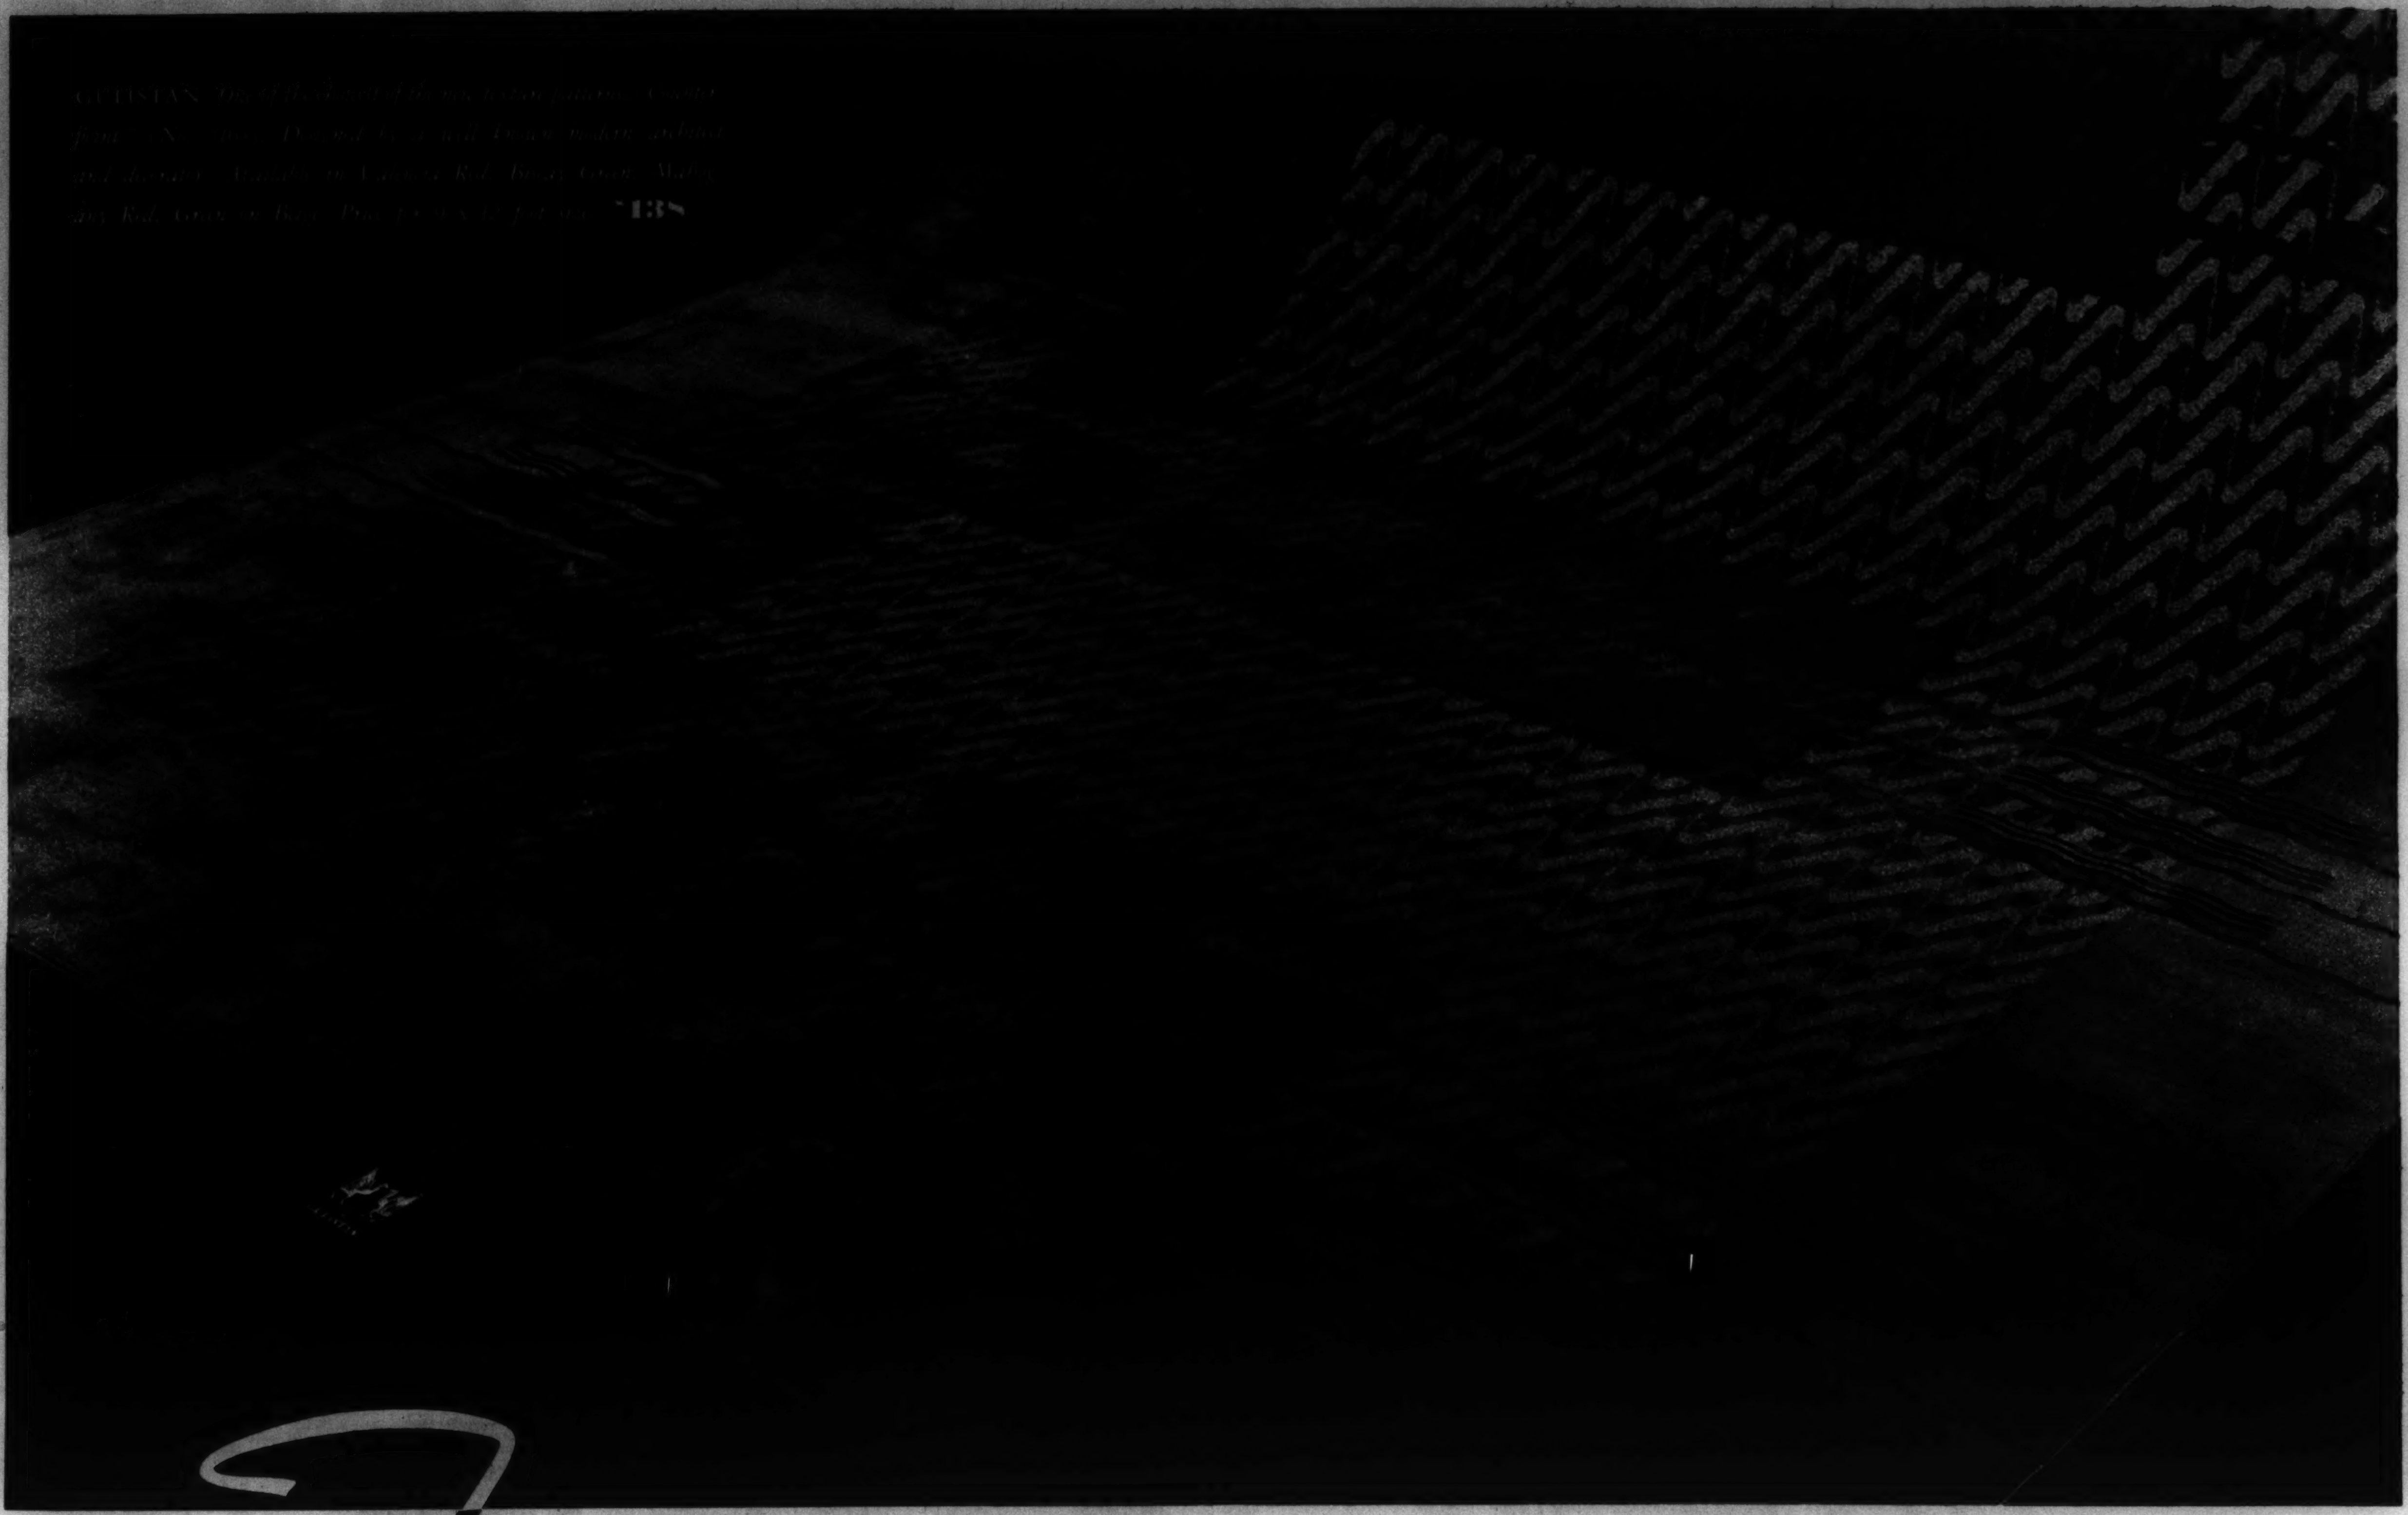
New Beauty in Rugs!



Texture by the makers of

GULISTAN

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

● A great new style movement is under way in rugs and carpets. The makers of America's leading fine rug, the Gulistan, showed the way four years ago when they began creating one thrilling texture weave after another. Fascinating variations of shade result from the play of light on rough and smooth surfaces. The whole pattern is delightfully dappled with sheen. The colors are exquisite decorator shades. This is texture at its richest! Practical, too, since footmarks do not show as in plain shade carpet. See these new creations at your favorite furniture or department store. Various qualities at various prices. The finest of them all, of course, is the exclusive high-pile weave of the Gulistan Rug itself. Available in 22 sizes.

BARISTAN. A quality of popular price but unmistakably of the luxury class. Leaf pattern (No. 711), is a harmony of green and golden-browns. Price for 9 x 12 foot size: $59.50

One taste of genuine Jell-O and you'll say "What a difference!"

NO OTHER GELATIN DESSERT GIVES YOU THAT

extra-rich fruit flavor!

YOU'RE missing something—if you haven't tried the new extra-rich Jell-O! It's so much deeper-flavored than any other gelatin dessert you've ever known!

Take Lime Jell-O . . . here's the elusive taste of real limes! Distinctive as the tart juice that pours from the little green fruit in your own squeezer!

This extra-rich deep flavor is due to Jell-O's secret process which unites fruit flavor with every crystal—instead of merely mixing it in. No other gelatin dessert is made by this process—no other has the same true-to-the-fruit taste!

And none of Jell-O's flavor is wasted when the crystals are dissolved. Jell-O dissolves in hot water—it need not be boiling. The flavor can't float off on clouds of steam.

Try all six luscious flavors—every one is extra-rich. But . . . tell the grocer that you want genuine Jell-O. Look for the name "Jell-O" on every box . . . Jell-O is a product of General Foods.

Garnish Ideas for Lime Jell-O

Halves of apricots and balls of cream cheese give perfect contrast with the glistening mold of Lime Jell-O shown in the photograph. Or you can cut your cream cheese in cubes and alternate them with pear halves.

BACK ON THE AIR NEXT SUNDAY NIGHT!

JACK BENNY—America's favorite radio comedian, returns to the Jell-O program next Sunday evening, October 4, bringing a lot of fresh chuckles from his vacation experiences.

Mary Livingstone, smart and sassy as ever, will be with him, along with genial Don Wilson and Kenny Baker of the mellow tenor voice.

Welcome Jack and his gang back next Sunday evening! 7 P. M., Eastern Standard Time, 6 Central. WMAQ, Chicago; WLW, Cincinnati.

1. Not that kind! I want genuine Jell-O!

2. No other gelatin dessert has Jell-O's extra-rich flavor!

3. Real Jell-O for me—every time!

Six extra-rich flavors: Strawberry, Raspberry, Cherry, Orange, Lemon, and Lime.

This isn't you..or IS it?

Do you know anybody who deserves this tag?

MEN avoid her. Girls refuse to bother with her.

"A careless, untidy person who is unpleasant to be with"—that's the way they think of the girl who carries the ugly odor of underarm perspiration on her person.

Too bad. For she misses so many good times — just because she doesn't know that the underarms need special daily care. Soap and water alone are not enough.

The modern girl knows the quick, easy way to give this care. Mum!

Half a minute is all you need to use Mum. Use it any time, before or after dressing. For Mum is harmless to clothing.

It's soothing to the skin, too. You can use it right after shaving the underarms. And remember that Mum prevents every trace of perspiration odor without affecting perspiration itself.

Don't label yourself as "the girl who needs Mum." Use it regularly and be safe! Bristol-Myers, Inc., 630 Fifth Ave., New York.

MUM

USE MUM ON SANITARY NAPKINS, TOO and you'll never have a moment's worry about this source of unpleasantness.

PARISIAN FORMALITY FOR FALL AND WINTER

THIS, GIRLS, IS MOLYNEUX'S NEW MOYENAGE EVENING SILHOUETTE, done in blue ottoman, stiff enough to stand out all by itself. Pink velvet roses bloom on the bosom, and tulle makes the microscopic shoulder straps.

ROYAL PURPLE, THE COLOR OF KINGS, is a favorite of the Paris dressmakers for formal evening and cocktail dresses, such as this one from Robert Piguet, which is made of satin broadcloth. The sleeves are edged with shark tooth bends just to make the lady seem more dangerous, and the postman's cap, back again in fashion, has a scarf with the same notched edges. The muff is for decoration only, and is made of green velvet leaves and adorned with a massive bouquet of violets.
